PLAINTIFF-LANDOWNERS' MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT UNDER RULE 56

This case involves property owned by 214 plaintiff-landowners in Sarasota, Florida. See Fourth Amended Compl., ECF No. 34. See also Exhibit 1 (list of plaintiffs and properties grouped by conveyance instrument, condemnation decree, or easement by prescription). These landowners ask this Court to enter partial summary judgment, under Rule 56 of the Rules of the Court of Federal Claims, holding the United States responsible to pay these owners just compensation for that property the federal government took when the Surface Transportation Board (the Board) issued an order invoking section 8(d) of the National Trails System Act Amendments of 1983 (Trails Act), 16 U.S.C. §1247(d).

The Board's 2019 order took these owners' property by encumbering their property with a new federal rail-trail corridor easement. The Board's order created the northern extension of the Legacy Trail, a public recreational trail, and established a "rail-banked" corridor for a possible future railroad. The government violated the Fifth Amendment by not paying these landowners' "just compensation" when it took their property. Accordingly, we ask this Court to find the United States liable for a taking of these landowners' private property in May 2019 when the Board invoked the Trails Act and to hold this is a taking for which the Fifth Amendment requires the government to pay these landowners "just compensation."

The Fifth Amendment and the Tucker Act, 28 U.S.C. §1491(a), provide this Court jurisdiction of this matter. Section 1491(a) states that the "United States Court of Federal Claims shall have jurisdiction to render judgment upon any claim against the United States founded...upon the Constitution...in cases not sounding in tort." In support of this motion, these plaintiff-landowners provide the accompanying memorandum of law and statement of uncontroverted material facts.

Summary judgment "is a 'salutary method of disposition designed "to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action."'" InterImage, Inc. v. United States, 146 Fed. Cl. 615, 618 (2020) (quoting Sweats Fashions, Inc. v. Pannill Knitting Co., Inc., 833 F.2d 1560, 1562 (Fed. Cir. 1987)). "A grant of summary judgment is appropriate when the pleadings, affidavits and evidentiary materials filed in a case reveal that 'there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.'" Biloxi Marsh Lands Corp. v. United States, 152 Fed. Cl. 254, 268 (2021) (quoting Lippmann v. United States, 127 Fed. Cl. 238, 244 (2016) (citing RCFC 56(a))). See also Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 247 (1986).

If no rational trier of fact could find for the non-moving party, a genuine issue of material fact does not exist and the motion for summary judgment may be granted. New York & Presbyterian Hosp. v. United States, 152 Fed. Cl. 507, 515 (2021) (citing Matsushita Elec. Indus. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 588 (1986)). "By its very terms, this standard provides that the mere existence of some alleged factual dispute between the parties will not defeat an otherwise properly supported motion for summary judgment; the requirement is that there be no genuine issue of material fact." Cheshire Hunt v. United States, 158 Fed. Cl. 101, 104 (2022) (quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 247-48 (1986)) (emphasis in original). "A 'genuine' dispute of material fact exists where a reasonable factfinder 'could return a verdict for the nonmoving party.'" Id. (quoting Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248). A dispute regarding an issue of non-material fact does not preclude summary judgment. See id. ("'Material' facts are those 'that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law,' as opposed to 'disputes that are irrelevant or unnecessary.'") (quoting Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248).

Once the movant's burden is met, the onus shifts to the non-movant to point to sufficient evidence to show a dispute over a material fact that would allow a reasonable finder of fact to rule in its favor. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 256. Mere denials, conclusory statements, or evidence that is merely colorable or not significantly probative will not defeat summary judgment. See Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 324 (1986); Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248-50; Mingus Constructors, Inc. v. United States, 812 F.2d 1387, 1390-91 (Fed. Cir. 1987).

Wherefore, these plaintiff-landowners ask this Court to enter partial summary judgment in their favor and order the federal government to pay them just compensation for the property the government took under the Trails Act.

Respectfully submitted,

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION 1

BACKGROUND 2

A. The creation and extension of the Legacy Trail 2

B. The legacy of the Legacy Trail litigation. 3

ARGUMENT 4

I. The federal government violated the Fifth Amendment by taking these landowners' private property without paying the owners "just compensation". 4

A. The Trails Act is a per se taking for which the federal government is "categorically" obligated to pay the landowner. 4

B. The government's obligation to compensate these owners arose immediately upon the Board issuing its May 2019 order invoking the Trails Act 10

II. These Plaintiffs own the property the federal government took from them. 13

A. Preseault II provides the paradigm by which this Court should analyze a railroad's interest in strips of land used for railway lines. 13

B. The railroad was granted only an easement across, not title to the fee estate in the strip of land. 19

1. The grantor's intent governs the interpretation of the document. 19

2. A "right-of-way" is an easement. 20

3. A document is interpreted in the light of the law and context when the document was drafted to accomplish the purpose for which the document was created. 22

4. It is not necessary that a document include "limiting language" to be an easement. 26

5. Florida public policy disfavors creation of "strips or gores" of land and follows the centerline presumption. 30

C. A railroad's interest in a strip of land acquired for a railway line is an easement, not title to the fee simple estate. 35

1. A railroad company is established for the limited purpose of operating a railway line. 35

2. Florida statute provides that a railroad only acquires an easement in land acquired by condemnation or voluntary grant. 37

3. "Railbanking" and public recreation are not a railroad purpose. 41

D. The Florida Supreme Court's answer to the Federal Circuit's certified question in Rogers does not answer the question before this Court. 42

1. The unique issue considered by the Federal Circuit and Florida Supreme Court in Rogers 42

2. When she wrote Rogers II, Judge Williams did not have the benefit of subsequent authority. 48

(i) Judge Williams misunderstood Preseault II as applying only when the railroad acquired its interest by condemnation. 48
(ii) A right-of-way is an easement. 50
(iii) In a conveyance, "excepting" the land used for a railway means the fee estate in the land is subject to the right-of-way easement. 51
(iv) The amount of consideration determines the nature of the property interest conveyed even if it does not determine the validity of the deed 52

3. The Florida Supreme Court's opinion in Rogers IV cannot be read as a new rule by which to define established property interests. 52

III. The text of each document, the context and purpose for which the documents were created and the "traditional property law principles" and "historical practice" at the time the documents were created demonstrate the railroad was only granted an easement to use the strip of land for a railway line. 54

A. Group One – The 1926 Condemnation Decree granted only a right-of-way easement for a railway line across ten owners' properties 56

B. Group Two – The Voluntary Conveyance Properties 60

1. Adrian Honoré granted Seaboard only an easement for the limited purpose of operating a railway line. 61

2. Bertha Palmer's estate granted Seaboard only an easement to operate a railway line across a strip of the estate's land. 63

3. Oscar and Alice Burton memorialized the easement Seaboard was granted for a railway line across the strip of land upon which Seaboard had built its railway line. 64

4. Sarasota Land Company granted Seaboard an easement for a railway line. 66

5. Allen and Flora Clough signed an instrument acknowledging Seaboard had an easement across their land for operation of a railway line. 67

6. The Florida Mortgage & Investment Company documents recognize Seaboard had only a "right-of-way" easement for railroad purposes. 67

7. Moses Neihardt signed a document acknowledging the railroad's existing easement for a railway line across his land. 69

8. The document with Oscar Pendley's name gave the railroad no interest in the strip of land described in the document 70

9. The Charles Ringling Company granted Tampa Southern Railroad Company an easement across a strip of land for a railway line 72

C. Group Three – The Prescriptive Easement Properties 73

D. Group Four – The Platted Properties 75

1. Oakwood Manor, Hagar Park, and the Drainage Easement 76

2. The Oaks at Woodland Park 78

3. The Old Forest Lakes subdivision 79

INTRODUCTION

The federal government took private property from 214 Sarasota County landowners on May 5, 2019. See Exhibit 1 (index of landowners and properties by category). The government took these owners' property when the Surface Transportation Board (the Board) invoked section 8(d) of the Trails Act[1] encumbering these owners' land with a public rail-trail corridor when it issued an order called a Notice of Interim Trail Use or Abandonment (NITU).[2] The Takings Clause of the Fifth Amendment provides, "No person shall be…deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation." U.S. CONST. AMEND. V. The Tucker Act grants this Court jurisdiction to "render judgment upon any claim against the United States founded upon the Constitution."[3]

The uncontroverted facts and settled law establish three points. First, Seaboard Air Line Railroad (and its affiliated railroads) were granted only an easement to build and operate a railway line across a strip of the plaintiffs' land. Second, the right-of-way easement for a railway line terminated when the strip of land was no longer used for operation of a railroad, and but for the federal government invoking the Trails Act, the present-day owners would have enjoyed unencumbered title to the fee estate in their land. Third, the Board's order encumbering the plaintiffs' land with a new and different easement for public recreation and so-called "rail-banking" is a per se taking of these owners' private property for which the federal government has a categorical constitutional obligation to pay these owners "just compensation."

BACKGROUND

A. The creation and extension of the Legacy Trail.

In the early 1900s, landowners granted the Seaboard Air Line Railway and its affiliated railroad companies a right-of-way across a thirteen-mile-long strip of land between Sarasota and Venice, Florida.[4] The Seaboard Air Line Railway and its affiliated railroads were given, or took by condemnation, an interest in this strip of land in the early 1900s for the purpose of operating a railway line between Sarasota and Venice.[5] By the 1980s a railway line between Sarasota and Venice was no longer needed. Seaboard's successor-railroads (CSX and Seminole Gulf Railway) petitioned the Surface Transportation Board (the Board) to abandon the railway line.[6] Sarasota County wanted to use the otherwise-abandoned railway corridor for a public recreational trail.

On April 2, 2004, pursuant to section 8(d) of the National Trails System Act, 16 U.S.C. 1247(d), the Board issued a NITU invoking the Trails Act and establishing a new easement for public recreation and so-called railbanking across the land. The Board issued two subsequent orders, on December 5, 2017, and on May 14, 2019, extending the rail-trail corridor further north. This litigation concerns the land taken by the Board's third order issued May 14, 2019.[7] [5] "Air Line" has nothing to do with airplanes. "Air Line" refers to a railway line constructed across land in a way that a train could operate on the shortest, most direct route.

The landowners whose property the government took for the creation of the public recreational trail sued the government seeking compensation because, but for the federal government invoking the Trails Act, these owners would have held unencumbered title to their land. See Preseault v. Interstate Commerce Comm'n, 494 U.S. 1, 8 (1990) (Preseault I) (The Trails Act "gives rise to a takings question in the typical rails-to-trails case because many railroads do not own their rights-of-way outright but rather hold them under easements or similar property interests."); Brandt Rev. Trust v. United States, 572 U.S. 93, 105 (2014) ("if the beneficiary of the easement abandons it, the easement disappears, and the landowner resumes his full and unencumbered interest in the land"). The imposition of a federal rail-trail corridor easement across these owners' land is a taking of private property without compensation in violation of the Fifth Amendment. See Preseault v. United States, 100 F.3d 1525, 1552 (Fed. Cir. 1996) (en banc) (Preseault II) ("When state-defined property rights are destroyed by the Federal Government's preemptive power...the owner of those rights is due just compensation."). See also Behrens v. United States, 59 F.4th 1339, 1344-45 (Fed. Cir. 2023) ("[I]t is settled law that a Fifth Amendment taking occurs in Rails-to-Trails cases when government action destroys state-defined property rights by converting a railway easement to a recreational trail, if trail use is outside the scope of the original railway easement.") (quoting Ladd v. United States, 630 F.3d 1015, 1019 (Fed. Cir. 2010) (Ladd I), and citing Ellamae Phillips Co. v. United States, 564 F.3d 1367, 1373 (Fed. Cir. 2009)).

B. The legacy of the Legacy Trail litigation.

The federal government's creation of the Legacy Trail corridor spawned a generation of litigation. Because the federal government took private property without paying the owners, the owners had to sue the United States to vindicate their constitutional right to be justly compensated. The owners whose land was taken for the southern segment sued for compensation in 2007. See

Rogers v. United States, 90 Fed. Cl. 418, 418 (2009) (Rogers I).[8] Judge Williams determined the compensation the government owed the owners of the land taken for the southern segment of the Legacy Trail corridor in two separate week-long trials in McCann Holdings v. United States, 111 Fed. Cl. 608 (2013), and Childers v. United States, 116 Fed. Cl. 486 (2013). The compensation due the owners of the land taken in December 2017 for the middle segment of the Legacy Trail is the subject of Cheshire Hunt v. United States, No. 18-111.[9] The Board issued its third NITU extending the rail-trail corridor across these owners' land, on May 14, 2019.[10]

ARGUMENT

I. The federal government violated the Fifth Amendment by taking these landowners' private property without paying the owners "just compensation."

A. The Trails Act is a per se taking for which the federal government is "categorically" obligated to pay the landowner.

Congress wanted to preserve otherwise-abandoned railroad corridors to be repurposed for public recreation. Congress initially sought to accomplish this objective by delaying the railroad's

[8] Rogers was subsequently bifurcated into separate cases based upon how the railroad originally acquired an interest in the strip of land used for the right-of-way. See Bird Bay Executive Golf Course, Inc. v. United States, No. 07-426, Bay Plaza v. United States, No. 08-198, Breda v. United States, No. 10-187, Murphy v. United States, No. 10-200, Childers v. United States, No. 08-1981, and McCann Holdings, Ltd. v. United States, No. 07-4261.

[9] Hugh Culverhouse, Jr., and his wife, Eliza, are prominent philanthropists. Palmer Ranch Holdings and other entities owned by Mr. Culverhouse were plaintiffs in Cheshire Hunt. The Culverhouse family donated an 82.2-acre tract of the Palmer Ranch land to Sarasota County for a conservation easement for a park and a community garden. See Palmer Ranch Holdings v. CIR, 812 F.3d 982 (11th Cir. 2016), 107 T.C.M. 1408 (T.C. Memo. 2014). The property the Culverhouse family donated was worth $25.2 million for which the Culverhouse family took a charitable tax deduction. Id. The IRS challenged the value of the donation, and the IRS lost. The Eleventh Circuit affirmed that the full value of the property the Culverhouse family donated.

[10] This northern segment of the Legacy Trail involves the property in this litigation as well as Barron v. United States, No. 21-2181, and Easey v. United States, No. 19-716. The northern segment also gave rise to the federal Quiet Title Act lawsuit in U.S. District Court against Sarasota County and the United States. See Grames v. Sarasota County, 2022 WL 218486, at *1 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 25, 2022). Following this Court's January 2022 decision in Cheshire Hunt, 158 Fed. Cl. 101, 110 (2022), the plaintiffs in Grames dismissed their quiet title action.

authority to abandon railroad service across unprofitable railway corridors for six-months to allow a non-railroad (such as a local government or a private conservation organization) to acquire the otherwise-abandoned right-of-way for public recreation. See National Wildlife Federation v. Interstate Commerce Comm'n, 850 F.2d 694, 697 (DC Cir. 1988). This scheme didn't work because, under state-law, the railroad had nothing to sell or transfer. The owner of the fee estate regained unencumbered title to the land when the railroad stopped operating and the original right-of-way easement terminated. See Brandt, 572 U.S. at 105; Preseault I, 494 U.S. at 8. Landowners' state-law "reversionary" interest in the land was a "problem," since "many railroads do not own their rights-of-way outright but rather hold them under easements [and]...the property reverts to the abutting landowner upon abandonment of rail operations."[11]

So, in 1983, Congress amended the Trails Act adding section 8(d), providing "interim [public recreational trail] use [or railbanking] shall not be treated, for purposes of any law or rule of law, as an abandonment of the use of such rights-of-way for railroad purposes." 16 U.S.C. §1247(d). Congress adopted section 8(d) for the express purpose of preempting state law and "destroying" and "effectively eliminating" landowners' state-law reversionary property interests and thereby allowing the Board to impose a new easement for railbanking and public recreation.[12] Once the Board invokes section 8(d) of the Trails Act,

[11] Preseault I, 494 U.S. at 7-8. "Reversionary" is a shorthand term for the fee owner's interest in the land unencumbered by an easement. "Instead of calling the property owner's retained interest a fee simple burdened by the easement, this alternative labels the property owner's retained interest...a 'reversion' in fee." Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1533.

[12] "It is settled law that a Fifth Amendment taking occurs in Rails-to-Trails cases when government action destroys state-defined property rights by converting a railway easement to a recreational trail, if trail use is outside the scope of the original railway easement." Ladd I, 630 F.3d at 1019 (emphasis added). See also Caldwell v. United States, 391 F.3d 1226, 1228 (Fed. Cir. 2004) ("a Fifth Amendment taking occurs when, pursuant to the Trails Act, state law reversionary interests are effectively eliminated in connection with a conversion of a railroad right-of-way to trail use") (citing Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1543) (emphasis added).

> [t]he [Board] retains jurisdiction over [the land once used for] a rail line throughout the CITU/NITU negotiating period, any period of rail banking/interim trail use, and any period during which rail service is restored. It is only upon a railroad's lawful consummation of abandonment authority that the Board's jurisdiction ends. At that point, the right-of-way may revert to reversionary landowner interest, if any, pursuant to state law.
> National Trails System Act and Railroad Rights-of-Way, 2012 WL 1498609, *5 (STB April 25, 2012).

The Board's invocation of section 8(d) "pre-empt[s] the operation and effect of certain state laws that 'conflict with or interfere with federal authority over the same activity.'" Preseault I, 494 U.S. at 21 (O'Connor, Scalia, and Kennedy, JJ., concurring). State courts "cannot enforce or give effect to asserted reversionary interests...." Id. at 22. The federal government's jurisdiction over the strip of land is "exclusive and plenary." Chicago & N.W. Transp. v. Kalo Brick & Tile Co., 450 U.S. 311, 321 (1981).

The Board's invocation of the Trails Act allows the railroad to sell or give the right-of-way to a non-railroad "trail-sponsor" even though, under state law and the terms of the original railroad easement, the railroad had no property interest in the land and no ability to transfer any interest in the right-of-way to a non-railroad. See East Alabama Ry. v. Doe, 114 U.S. 340, 350-51 (1885) ("the grant to the 'assigns' of the [railroad] corporation cannot be construed as extending to any assigns except one who should be the assignee of its franchise to establish and run a railroad").[13]

A grant from a landowner to a railroad describing a strip of land used for a railway line is an easement, not a conveyance of title to the fee simple estate in the strip of land across which the railway line is built. As the Supreme Court explained, this easement (which is a servitude, not ownership of the fee estate) terminates when the railroad no longer uses the strip of land for the operation of a railway. See Brandt, 572 U.S. at 105.[14] Thus, when the federal government invokes the Trails Act by issuing an order encumbering an owner's land with a new easement for a public recreational rail-trail corridor without paying "just compensation," the federal government has taken private property in violation of the Fifth Amendment. See Preseault I, 494 U.S. at 8.

[13] See also Monroe County Comm'n v. Nettles, 288 So.3d 452, 459 (Ala. 2019) ("the quitclaim deed [from the railroad] conveyed nothing to the [trail-sponsor] because the railroad, at the time of conveyance, had nothing to transfer"). See also Mark F. (Thor) Hearne, II, The Trails Act: Railroading Property Owners and Taxpayers for More Than a Quarter Century, 45 REAL PROPERTY, TRUST & ESTATE L.J. 115, 131-32 (Spring 2010), attached as Exhibit 3.

In Preseault I, Justice O'Conner wrote a concurring opinion to emphasize that "[a]lthough the [Board]'s actions may pre-empt the operation and effect of certain state laws, those actions do not displace state law as the traditional source of the real property interests." 494 U.S. at 22-23 (O'Connor, Scalia, and Kennedy, JJ., concurring). The Board's actions delaying the landowner's reversionary interest, Justice O'Connor continued, "burdens and defeats the property interest rather than suspends or defers the vesting of those property rights." Id. "Any other conclusion," she concluded, "would convert the [Board]'s power to pre-empt conflicting state regulation of interstate commerce into the power to pre-empt the rights guaranteed by state property law, a result incompatible with the Fifth Amendment." Id.[15]

The government may not redefine established property interests without paying the property owner. Chief Justice Rehnquist explained in Leo Sheep v. United States, 440 U.S. 668, 687-88 (1979), and Chief Justice Roberts explained in Brandt, 572 U.S. at 105, that interests in [14] "Unlike most possessory estates, easements...may be unilaterally terminated by abandonment, leaving the servient owner with a possessory estate unencumbered by the servitude. In other words, if the beneficiary of the easement abandons it, the easement disappears, and the landowner resumes his full and unencumbered interest in the land." Brandt, 572 U.S. at 105 (internal quotation and citation omitted; quoting RESTATEMENT (THIRD) OF PROPERTY: SERVITUDES §1.2, Comment d, §7.4, Comments a, f).

[15] Citations omitted; citing and quoting, among other authorities, Ruckelshaus v. Monsanto Co., 467 U.S. 986, 1003-04, 1010-12 (1984) ("If Congress can 'pre-empt' state property law in the manner advocated by EPA, then the Taking Clause has lost all vitality. [A] sovereign, 'by ipse dixit, may not transform private property into public property without compensation.... This is the very kind of thing that the Taking Clause of the Fifth Amendment was meant to prevent.'").

land are defined and their dimensions established at the time the property interest was established. This summer the Court reaffirmed the principle that individuals' rights in their property are defined by state law and by "'traditional property law principles,' plus historical practice and this Court's precedents." Tyler v. Hennepin County, 143 S.Ct. 1369, 1375 (2023).[16] In other words, the federal government and federal agencies, such as the Board, do not define (and cannot redefine) or determine the nature or dimensions of private property. And when the government acts to redefine established property interests without paying "just compensation," the government has violated the Fifth Amendment.

The Supreme Court has emphasized that there is a "special need for certainty and predictability where land titles are concerned, and we are unwilling to upset settled expectations to accommodate some ill-defined power to construct public thoroughfares without compensation." Leo Sheep, 440 U.S. at 687-88. The Court reaffirmed this principle in Brandt, stating, "[w]e decline to endorse [the government's] stark change in position, especially given 'the special need for certainty and predictability where land titles are concerned.'" 572 U.S. at 110 (quoting Leo Sheep, 440 U.S. at 687). As Bryan Garner and his contributing authors (including then-circuit judges Neil Gorsuch and Brett Kavanaugh) explained, the Rule of Property Doctrine dictates that adherence to precedent and respect for the principle of stare decisis is of particular importance in cases that involve established interests in real property:

> The "rule-of-property doctrine"…holds that stare decisis applies with 'peculiar force and strictness' to decisions governing real property…. Stability in rules governing property interests is particularly important because those rules create unusually strong reliance interests…. As the Supreme Court explained in a mid-

[16] In Tyler, the Supreme Court also reaffirmed its prior holdings in Stop the Beach Renourishment, Inc. v. Florida Department of Environmental Protection, 560 U.S. 702, 707 (2010), Webb's Fabulous Pharmacies, Inc. v. Beckwith, 449 U.S. 155, 164 (1980), and other decisions holding that a court's redefinition of the rules defining property interests would be a taking of private property the Takings Clause forbids without the government paying the owner just compensation. In Preseault II, the Federal Circuit held the Trails Act imposes "a new easement for the new use, constituting a physical taking of the right of exclusive possession that belonged to the [landowners]." 100 F.3d at 1550. In Toews v. United States, the Federal Circuit observed, "it appears beyond cavil that use of these easements for a recreational trail – for walking, hiking, biking, picnicking, frisbee playing, with newly-added tarmac pavement, park benches, occasional billboards, and fences to enclose the trailway – is not the same use made by a railroad, involving tracks, depots, and the running of trains." 376 F.3d 1371, 1376 (Fed. Cir. 2004).[18] Most recently, in Behrens, the Federal Circuit explained, "a taking effectuated by the NITU occurs at the time that, had there been no NITU, the easement would have terminated under state law." 59 F.4th at 1343 (citing Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1550, and Caquelin v. United States, 959 F.3d 1360, 1363, 1370-73 (Fed. Cir. 2020)). Behrens held, "[i]t is now well-settled that the issuance of a NITU under the Trails Act may result in a taking of property owned by the original grantor of the easement." 49 F.4th at 1342 (citing Preseault I, 494 U.S. at 8).

The Board's invocation of the Trails Act is a "direct appropriation of [the owner's reversionary] property, or the functional equivalent of a practical ouster of the owner's possession." Lucas v. South Carolina Coastal Comm'n, 505 U.S. 1003, 1014 (1992). The Supreme Court has further explained, "the right to exclude is universally held to be a fundamental element of the property right and is one of the most essential sticks in the bundle of rights that are commonly characterized as property." Cedar Point Nursery v. Hassid, 141 S.Ct. 2063, 2072-73 (2021).[19] When the government "depriv[es] the owner of the right to possess, use and dispose of the property," and denies the owner's right to exclude others from his or her property, the government has a "categorical" duty to compensate the owner. Horne v. Department of Agriculture, 576 U.S. 350, 358 (2015). See also Knick v. Township of Scott, 139 S.Ct. 2162, 2172 (2019) ("because a taking without compensation violates the self-executing Fifth Amendment at the time of the taking, the property owner can bring a federal suit at that time") (emphasis added). The government's obligation to compensate the owner for taking the owner's property is a foundational tenant going back to Magna Carta and later expounded upon by Blackstone.[20]

B. The government's obligation to compensate these owners arose immediately upon the Board issuing its May 2019 order invoking the Trails Act.

The federal government's liability in Trails Act cases turns upon three points set forth in Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1533, and summarized in Ellamae Phillips, 564 F.3d at 1373, where the Federal Circuit explained that "the determinative issues for takings liability are

> (1) who owns the strip of land involved, specifically, whether the railroad acquired only an easement or obtained a fee simple estate;
> (2) if the railroad acquired only an easement, were the terms of the easement limited to use for railroad purposes, or did they include future use as a public recreational trail (scope of the easement); and

United States*, 444 U.S. 164, 179-80 (1979) ("[W]e hold that the 'right to exclude,' so universally held to be a fundamental element of the property right, falls within this category of interests that the Government cannot take without compensation.").

(quoting William Blackstone, COMMENTARIES ON THE LAWS OF ENGLAND (1766), v. 2, p. 2).

> (3) even if the grant of the railroad's easement was broad enough to encompass a recreational trail, had this easement terminated prior to the alleged taking so that the property owner at the time held a fee simple unencumbered by the easement (abandonment of the easement).[21]

The Federal Circuit announced a "bright-line rule" that a Trails Act taking occurs, and an owner's claim for compensation accrues, when the Board first invokes the Trails Act. Caldwell, 391 F.3d at 1229 ("A Fifth Amendment taking occurs if the original easement granted to the railroad under state property law is not broad enough to encompass a recreational trail.").[22] The government took these owners' private property in May 2019, almost a half-decade ago. The government has still not honored its constitutional obligation to pay these owners that just compensation our Constitution requires the government to pay them.

When the government takes private property without paying the owner, the government has violated the owner's Fifth Amendment right to private property. See Knick, 139 S.Ct. at 2170

[21] Paragraph breaks added. The third point in this analysis ("if the grant of the railroad's easement was broad enough to encompass a recreational trail") arises only when the original easement granted the railroad included a right for the railroad to sell the right-of-way to a non-railroad to use the strip of land for public recreation. For example, the Federal Circuit, in Behrens, 59 F.4th at 1348, held that a taking occurred under the first two points when "easements granted to the railroad were not broad enough to encompass interim trail use or railbanking, and thus Fifth Amendment takings have occurred."

[22] See also Barclay v. United States, 443 F.3d 1368, 1378 (Fed. Cir. 2006) ("the issuance of the original NITU triggers the accrual of the cause of action" for a taking); Ladd I, 630 F.3d at 1023-24, reh'g and reh'g en banc denied, 646 F.3d at 910 ("[I]t is settled law. A taking occurs when state law reversionary property interests are blocked. …The issuance of the NITU is the only event that must occur to entitle the plaintiff to institute an action.") (emphasis added; internal quotations omitted); Ladd v. United States, 713 F.3d 648, 652 (Fed. Cir. 2013) (Ladd II) ("In the context of Trails Act cases, the cause of action accrues when the government issues the first NITU that concerns the landowner's property."). The Federal Circuit affirmed this settled rule of law most recently in Behrens, 59 F.4th at 1345, and Memmer v. United States, 50 F.4th 136, 145 (Fed. Cir. 2022). In 2009, then-Solicitor General Elena Kagan wrote for the United States, "When the NITU is issued, all the events have occurred that entitle the claimant to institute an action based on federal-law interference with reversionary interests, and any takings claim premised on such interference therefore accrues on that date." Brief for the United States in Illig v. United States, 2009 WL 1526939, *12-13 (S.Ct. No. 08-852, May 29, 2009).

("a property owner has a claim for a violation of the Takings Clause as soon as a government takes his property for public use without paying for it"). The government's violation of the Fifth Amendment is an ongoing violation of the owner's constitutional right that is not remedied until the government pays the owner. See Cedar Point Nursery, 141 S.Ct. at 2170-72; James W. Ely, Jr., THE GUARDIAN OF EVERY OTHER RIGHT: A CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY OF PROPERTY RIGHTS (3rd ed. 2008), p. 55 ("The takings clause established an additional safeguard for property owners. This provision significantly limits the power of eminent domain under which government can seize private property for a public purpose").[23]

While the government need not pay the owner on the day the government takes an owner's property, the government must pay the owner promptly. In Joslin Mfg. Co. v. City of Providence, the Supreme Court held "the taking of property for public use...need not be accompanied or preceded by payment, but that the requirement of just compensation is satisfied when the public faith and credit are pledged to a reasonably prompt ascertainment and payment, and there is adequate provision for enforcing the pledge." 262 U.S. 668, 677 (1923) (emphasis added). As inscribed in this courthouse's lobby, President Lincoln declared, "It is as much the duty of government to render prompt justice against itself, in favor of citizens, as it is to administer the same, between private individuals."[24] But, rather than promptly paying these owners, the government forced them to retain counsel, sue the government, and incur the very substantial cost of this litigation necessary to vindicate their constitutional right to be justly compensated.

Justice Thomas concurred in Knick to emphasize that the government's "sue me" approach to the Takings Clause is untenable." 139 S.Ct. at 2180. Justice Thomas continued,

> The Fifth Amendment does not merely provide a damages remedy to a property owner willing to "shoulder the burden of securing compensation" after the government takes property without paying for it. Instead, it makes just compensation a "prerequisite" to the government's authority to "tak[e] property for public use." A "purported exercise of the eminent-domain power" is therefore "invalid" unless the government "pays just compensation before or at the time of its taking."[25]

In summary, the federal government violated the Constitution by taking private property from the owners of over two hundred properties in Sarasota, Florida, without paying these owners "just compensation." This Court's task, as President Lincoln said when he proposed the creation of this Court, is to "render prompt justice against [the government], in favor of its citizens...."[26] The justice these citizens and landowners are due is to be paid full and fair compensation for that property the government took from them.

II. These plaintiffs own the property the federal government took from them.

A. Preseault II provides the paradigm by which this Court should analyze a railroad's interest in strips of land used for railway lines.

This litigation recalls Yogi Berra's famous observation, "this is déjà vu all over again." In Preseault II, the Federal Circuit answered precisely the same question this Court is now presented. To wit: Did the owners whose property was condemned for a railroad right-of-way in the early 1900s, and the owners who signed documents granting the railroad a right-of-way across their land in the 1900s, give the railroad title to the fee estate in a strip of land upon which the railroad built and operated a railway line, or did the landowner grant the railroad an easement to operate a railway line across the strip of land?[27] Preseault II directs this Court how to determine whether the 1926 Condemnation Decree and the other nine documents granted the railroad an easement for a railroad right-of-way across the owners' land, or instead, conveyed title to the fee estate in the strip of land upon which the railroad operated a railway line. When Preseault II is followed, it is clear that the railroad was only granted an easement.

Preseault II involved three tracts of land, including the "old Barker Estate" tract, over which the railroad had gained its right-of-way by condemnation. 100 F.3d at 1531. The Claims Court had determined that "[t]he portion of the right-of-way consisting of the parcel of land condemned from the Barker Estate and taken by commissioner's award is indisputably an easement under the law of the State of Vermont." Id. at 1535. Following an "independent examination" of the Claim Court's finding that the Barker-tract right-of-way was an easement, the Federal Circuit concluded, "there is little real dispute about this. That was the rule in the early Vermont cases, and continues to be the rule today." Id. (citing Dessureau v. Maurice Memorials, Inc., 318 A.2d 652, 653 (Vt. 1974), and Troy & Boston Railroad v. Potter, 42 Vt. 265, 274 (1869)). Quoting the Vermont Supreme Court in Dessureau, 318 A.2d at 653, the Federal Circuit acknowledged and affirmed that a taking by a railroad "pursuant to statutory authority, gave the railroad only an easement, not a fee, and upon abandonment, the property reverts to the former owner." Id. at 1535. The Federal Circuit further explained that the "Vermont cases are consistent in holding that, practically without regard to the documentation and manner of acquisition, when a railroad for its purposes acquires an estate in land for laying track and operating railroad equipment thereon, the estate acquired is no more than that needed for the purpose," which "typically means an easement, not a fee simple estate. Id.

[27] Judge Plager authored the Federal Circuit's en banc decision in Preseault II. Judge Plager's authorship of Preseault II is noteworthy because Judge Plager is distinguished for his expertise in property law. Before taking the bench, Judge Plager graduated from University of Florida Law School and was a professor of property and environmental law at the universities of Florida, Wisconsin, and Illinois before becoming dean of Indiana University Law School. See www.repository.law.indiana.edu./plager.

Preseault II's holding that the railroad acquired only an easement across the Barker land, and not title to the fee estate, applies equally to the 1926 Condemnation Decree at issue in this litigation. See, infra, pp. 56-59. This principle (that a railroad exercising eminent domain power to acquire a right-of-way obtains only an easement or a servitude) is a principle common to Florida and every other state we have surveyed.

The Federal Circuit then turned to the railroad's interest in the parcel that was conveyed to the railroad by the Manwell deed. This deed, the Federal Circuit explained, first appeared to be an unrestricted warranty deed by which Fredrick and Mary Manwell conveyed the railroad fee simple title to a strip of land. See Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1535. The Federal Circuit noted that the Manwell deed contained "the usual habendum clause found in a warranty deed, and purports to convey the described strip of land to the grantee railroad '[t]o have and to hold the above granted and bargained premises...unto it the said grantee, its successors and assigns forever, to its and their own proper use, benefit and behoof forever'[, and] further warrants that the grantors have 'a good, indefeasible estate, in fee simple, and have good right to bargain and sell the same in manner and form as above written....'" Id. (emphasis added).

The Federal Circuit continued, "In short, the deed appears to be the standard form used to convey a fee simple title from a grantor to a grantee. But did it?" Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1535-36 (emphasis added). The Federal Circuit noted that "the deed was given following survey and location of the right-of-way." Id. at 1536. The Federal Circuit held that, "despite the apparent terms of the deed indicating a transfer in fee, the legal effect was to convey only an easement." Id. After citing Hill v. Western Vermont Railroad, 32 Vt. 68, 73 (1859), and Troy, 42 Vt. at 274, the Federal Circuit held,

> Thus it is that a railroad that proceeds to acquire a right-of-way for its road acquires only that estate, typically an easement, necessary for its limited purposes, and that the act of survey and location is the operative determinant, and not the particular form of transfer, if any. Here, the evidence is that the Railroad had obtained a survey and location of its right-of-way, after which the Manwell deed was executed confirming and memorializing the Railroad's action.
> On balance it would seem that, consistent with the view expressed in Hill, the proceeding retained its eminent domain flavor, and the railroad acquired only that which it needed, an easement for its roadway. Nothing the Government points to or that we can find in the later cases would seem to undermine that view of the case....

In Barron v. United States the government argues this Court should overlook the Federal Circuit's en banc analysis in Preseault II because the Preseaults' property was in Vermont, while these owners' property is in Florida. But, not so fast. To cabin Preseault II in this manner, the government must first demonstrate that the relevant principles of property law in Vermont and Florida were different in the early 1900s when the railroad right-of-way easements in this case and in Preseault II were established. This the government cannot do.

The relevant law in both Vermont and Florida (and for that matter in every other state) was identical in the early 1900s. In fact, the leading decisions of the Vermont Supreme Court upon which the Federal Circuit relied in Preseault II – Hill and Troy – were cited by this Court and the courts of Vermont, Missouri, Kansas, Georgia, Texas, North Carolina, New York, Ohio, Colorado, Illinois, Iowa, and New Hampshire as authority for the proposition that railroads obtain only an easement in strips of land used for a railway line.[28] Not only that, Vermont Supreme Court Chief (citing Troy & Boston RR, 42 Vt. at 265).

In addition to the common law, Florida statute directs that voluntary conveyances grant the railroad only an easement. See Fla. Stat. §2683 (1914); Behrens, 59 F.4th at 1348 ("we have held that under Vermont law the preservation of a tract of land for future rail use under the Trails Act does not transform interim trail use into a railroad purpose.") (citing Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1550). See also, infra, pp. 39-41; Castillo v. United States, 952 F.3d 1311, 1320-21 (Fed. Cir. 2020).[29] Florida's Supreme Court expressly adopted the Missouri Supreme Court's definition of "voluntary conveyances." See Rogers v. United States, 184 So.3d 1087, 1094 (Fla. 2015) (Rogers IV) (citing Clay v. Missouri State Hwy. Comm'n, 239 S.W.2d 505, 508 (Mo. 1951), and Brown v. Weare, 152 S.W.2d 649, 653 (Mo. 1941)). The Florida and Missouri voluntary-conveyance statutes were a model law that many states adopted. See Rogers IV, 184 So.3d at 1094, 1096, n.5.

Simply put, there is no basis upon which this Court may conclude Vermont law and Florida law were different in any relevant respect in the early 1900s. The principles of Vermont property law in the early 1900s, upon which the Federal Circuit relied in Preseault II, are indistinguishable from Florida law in the early 1900s. So too with regard to Missouri law upon which the Federal Circuit reached its recent decision in Behrens, 59 F.4th at 1348. The 1926 Condemnation Decree and the text of the voluntary grants at issue here are essentially identical to those the Federal Circuit considered in Preseault II and Behrens. The principle upon which the Federal Circuit decided Preseault II and Behrens is neither "Vermont-specific," nor "Missouri-specific," but is a fundamental principle governing conveyances of strips of land to railroads in Florida.

[29] The Federal Circuit, in Castillo, applied the centerline presumption to railroad rights-of-way in Florida despite the lack of being "pointed to a decision under Florida law that specifically rules on a contested issue about whether railroad rights-of-way." 952 F.3d at 1320. The Federal Circuit applied the centerline presumption to railroad rights-of-way in Florida because there was an "absence of a contrary indication under Florida law" and "many other jurisdictions – very much the predominant number among those whose law has been cited to us – have applied the centerline presumption to railroad rights-of-way." Id. at 1321 (citing, inter alia, Boyles v. Missouri Friends of the Wabash Trace Nature Trail, Inc., 981 S.W.2d 644, 650 (Mo. Ct. App. 1998)).

B. The railroad was granted only an easement, not title to the fee estate in the strip of land.

1. The grantor's intent governs the interpretation of the document.

The prime directive guiding the interpretation of instruments conveying an interest in real property is to achieve the intention of the grantor at the time the interest was created. The Supreme Court of Florida held, "it is well established that conveyances in land must be construed to give effect to the parties' intent, and that this Court has the 'right to look to the subject-matter embraced in the instrument, and to the intention of the parties and the conditions surrounding them... [T]he intent, and not the words, is the principal thing to be regarded.'" McNair & Wade Land Co. v. Adams, 45 So. 492, 493 (Fla. 1907) (emphasis added). Florida law directs a court to "consider the language of the entire instrument in order to discover the intent of the grantor, both as the character of estate and the property attempted to be conveyed, and to so construe the instrument as, if possible to effectuate such intent." Rogers I, 90 Fed. Cl. at 429 (citing Reid v. Barry, 112 So. 846, 852 (Fla. 1927), and Thrasher v. Arida, 858 So.2d 1173, 1175 (Fla. Ct. App. 2003)) (emphasis added). See also Castillo, 952 F.3d at 1322 ("a party may rebut the centerline presumption by 'present[ing] evidence of the grantor's intent not to convey to the centerline' of the railway") (emphasis added) (quoting Bischoff v. Walker, 107 So.3d 1165, 1171 (Fla. Ct. App. 2013).

This Court's task is to "ascertain[ ] the thought or meaning of the author of a legal document according to the rules of language and subject to the rules of law" when the document was created. Antonin Scalia & Bryan Garner, READING LAW: THE INTERPRETATION OF LEGAL TEXTS (2012), p. 53. Ascertaining the grantor's intention requires this Court to follow several canons of construction, including: (1) considering the text of the instrument as a whole giving the words used their ordinary meaning; (2) the law and customs (both statutory and common law) when the instrument was created; and (3) the context in which the instrument was drafted and the purpose for which the document was created.

2. A "right-of-way" is an easement.

The ordinary-meaning rule applies to the interpretation of those documents granting (or memorializing) the railway line between Sarasota and Venice. Scalia and Garner explain that "Justice Joseph Story's words are as true today as they were when written in the middle of the 19th Century and they are true not just of the constitution but of all other legal instruments," in that

> [E]very word employed in the constitution is to be expounded in its plain, obvious, and common sense, unless the context furnishes some ground to control, qualify, or enlarge it... They are instruments of a practical nature, founded on the common business of human life, adapted to common wants, designed for common use, and fitted for common understandings.[30]

A document describing a railroad's interest in land as a "right-of-way" is an easement. The ordinary meaning of right-of-way is "a legal right of passage over another person's ground[;] the area over which a right-of-way exists[;] the strip of land over which is built a public road[;] the land occupied by a railroad especially for its main line."[31] Professors Jon W. Bruce and James W. Ely, Jr., explain, in THE LAW OF EASEMENTS & LICENSES IN LAND (2021-22) §1:22, "[g]enerally, courts conclude that a conveyance of a "right-of-way" creates only an easement whether the grantee is an individual, a railroad, or another entity." The use of the term "right of way" generally suggests the creation of only an easement.[32] See also THOMPSON ON REAL PROPERTY (2nd ed.) §60.03(a)(7)(ii).

Florida law is in accord. See Mills v. United States, 147 Fed. Cl. 339, 347 (2020) ("a 'right-of-way' for railroad purposes should be construed according to its natural meaning, i.e. '[t]he right to pass through property owned by another.'") (quoting "Right-of-Way," in BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY (11th ed. 2019)). In Rogers I, 90 Fed. Cl. at 429-30, this Court quoted Trailer Ranch, Inc. v. City of Pompano Beach, 500 So.2d 503, 506 (Fla. 1986), for the proposition that Florida courts construe the words "across, over, and under" in a deed as indicative of an easement, not a fee simple estate; and this Court quoted Nerbonne, N.V. v. Florida Power Corp., for the principle that "[t]he conveyance of a right-of-way is generally held to create only an easement." 692 So.2d 928, 928 n.1 (Fla. Ct. App. 1997) (citing Bruce & Ely §1.06[1] (rev. ed. 1995)).

The U.S. Supreme Court likewise holds the words "right-of-way" mean an easement. See Brandt, 572 U.S. at 110 ("More than 70 years ago, the Government argued before this Court that a right of way granted under the [General Railroad Right-of-Way Act of 1875] was a simple easement. The Court was persuaded, and so ruled. Now the Government argues that such a right of way is tantamount to a limited fee with an implied reversionary interest. We decline to endorse such a stark change in position, especially given 'the special need for certainty and predictability where land titles are concerned.'") (quoting Leo Sheep Co. 440 U.S. at 687). More recently in Cowpasture, a case arising under the Trails Act, the Court held, "[t]he Trails Act refers to the granted interests as 'rights-of-way,' both when describing agreements with the Federal Government and with private and state property owners. When applied to a private or state property owner, 'right-of-way' would carry its ordinary meaning of a limited right to enjoy another's land." 140 S.Ct. at 1845. language is employed to create an easement, such terminology governs the extent of usage.") (quoting Bruce & Ely, THE LAW OF EASEMENTS & LICENSES IN LAND ¶8.02[1] (rev. ed. 1995)).

important, conclusion that documents describing the interest in property as a right-of-way mean an easement, not title to the fee estate.

3. A document is interpreted in light of the law and context when the document was drafted to accomplish the purpose for which the document was created.

A document conveying an interest in real property must be interpreted in its totality considering the context in which the document was created and the purpose for which the document was created with the objective of accomplishing the intent of the grantor. The RESTATEMENT directs that if an "ambiguity cannot be resolved by reading the instrument as a whole, courts must resort to the circumstances surrounding the transaction and public-policy preferences in constructing the instrument." RESTATEMENT (THIRD): SERVITUDES §2.2 (quoted, infra, pp. 29-30). Justice Scalia and Bryan Garner write, in READING LAW, pp. 167-68, that:

> Perhaps no interpretive fault is more common than the failure to follow the whole-text canon, which calls on the judicial interpreter to consider the entire text, in view of its structure and the physical and logical relation of its many parts…. Context is a primary determinant of meaning. A legal instrument typically contains may interrelated parts that make up for the whole. The entirety of the documents thus provides the context for each of its parts. When construing the United States Constitution in McCulloch v. Maryland, 17 U.S. 316 (1819), Chief Justice John Marshall rightly called for "a fair construction of the whole instrument"…. The Supreme Court of the United States has said that statutory construction is a "holistic endeavor," and the same is true of construing any document.
> Many of the other principles of interpretation are derived from the whole-text canon – for example, the rules that an interpretation that furthers the document's purpose should be favored (§4 [presumption against ineffectiveness]), that if possible no word or phrase would be rendered superfluous (§26 [surplusage canon]), that a word or phrase is presumed to bear the same meaning throughout the documents (§25 [presumption of consistent usage]), that provisions should be interpreted in a way that renders them compatible rather than contradictory (§27 [harmonious-reading canon]), that irreconcilably contradictory provisions should be given no effect (§29 [irreconcilability canon]), and that associated words bear on one another's meaning (noscitur a sociis) (§31 [associated-words canon]).

When the landowners executed these documents in 1910, they did so in the context and understanding of the law and events of that age. At the turn of the Twentieth Century there was a very limited transportation infrastructure. Travel, especially in Florida, was by ship (down the Gulf and Atlantic coasts) and overland transportation was still primarily by horse.[33] Railroads were the rapidly emerging national transportation infrastructure. In 1910, railroads and railroad corporations were established and regulated under state law. The Transportation Act of 1920, which returned railroads to private operation following World War I and federalized their regulation under the I.C.C., did not exist.[34]

As discussed above, the obvious intent and purpose for which these landowners granted the railroad an interest in a strip of land described by reference to a railway line that had already been surveyed across the property was to establish a railroad line between Sarasota and Venice. The grantors were not intending to give the railroad the mineral interest under the strip of land or to give the railroad fee simple absolute title to a one-hundred-foot-wide strip of land the railroad could then sell to a non-railroad for some purpose other than operating a railroad across the land.

The legal environment in which the documents were created in the early 1900s was also different than now. Bertha Palmer, a widow and matriarch of the Palmer family, who owned much of the land in what is now Sarasota County, could not vote. The Nineteenth Amendment was not adopted until June 1919. The interest of married women in real estate was subject to dower and curtesy, which Florida did not eliminate until 1975. See Fla. Stat. §732.111.

In 1874, Florida adopted its Special Powers of Railroad Statute and other provisions governing a railroad's authority to condemn property by eminent domain and regulated the interest a railroad obtained in strips of land conveyed to railroads by voluntary conveyance or condemnation.[35] When these right-of-way conveyances were drafted and executed it was understood that, "upon general principles…a railroad company…could acquire no absolute fee-simple, but only the right to use the land for their purpose." 1 Isaac F. Redfield, THE LAW OF RAILWAYS (1869), p. 255. See also Leonard A. Jones, A TREATISE ON THE LAW OF EASEMENTS §211 (1898), p. 178 ("[a] grant of a right of way to a railroad company is a grant of an easement merely, and the fee remains in the grantor"). See also James W. Ely, Jr., RAILROADS & AMERICAN LAW (2001), pp. 197-98 (citing Simeon F. Baldwin, AMERICAN RAILROAD LAW (1904), p. 77).[36]

The practice of recording and documenting real estate conveyances in the early 1900s was also different than today. There were no photocopiers, and the typewriter, such as the Underwood #5, did not come into common use until the 1920s.[37] Documents transferring and interest in real estate were commonly preprinted forms with blanks, which were filled-in by handwriting (or later) by a typewriter. The preprinted real estate conveyance forms came in several varieties with preprinted boilerplate phrases such as "party of the first part," "party of the second part," "grant,

See also Rogers IV, 184 So.3d at 1092 ("In substance, this statute remained the same from the time of its adoption in 1874 until it was repealed in 1982...."). Florida provided that railroads may "cause such examinations and surveys for the proposed railroad…and for such purposes…to enter upon the lands…of any person for that purpose [and] to take and hold such voluntary grants of real estate…as shall be made to it to aid in the construction, maintenance and accommodation of its road." Fla. Stat. §2241 (1892). But, the statute also provided that "the real estate received by voluntary grant shall be held and used for purposes of such grant only." Id.

bargain, sell and convey," and "TO HAVE AND TO HOLD the same in fee simple forever." In the case of a railroad establishing a right-of-way across land owned by many owners, the railroad company's agent (or "land man") would use a preprinted form, often one the railroad had printed for this purpose. See Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1535 (describing railroad form deed with these elements). The document related to the Pendleys' land is a good example of this practice. See Exhibit 4 (Tampa Southern Railway and Pendley unexecuted document). When preprinted form deeds are used, the information specific to that particular transaction (the date, the names of the parties, and the description of the property) is completed by hand. The other language is part of the preprinted form – the "boilerplate" language.

The party recording the instrument (typically the grantee) would submit the document to the Recorder of Deeds, and a scrivener would copy the document by hand into a book. After the document was copied by hand into the register of deeds, the document would be referenced in the grantor and grantee index and the original document returned to the grantee. The scrivener would transcribe in handwriting the entire document, both the preprinted form language as well as the information that was filled-in on the blanks. Occasionally errors in the handwritten transcription of the document were made. This is why Florida (and other states) make provision to correct a scrivener's error. See Florida Statute, Title XL, Ch. 689.

Florida, like other states, follows the rule that written language controls over preprinted boilerplate form language and that, if there is a conflict between the printed form and the handwritten or typewritten language there is an ambiguity concerning the parties' intent.

> The supreme court has held that when a release has both written and preprinted provisions concerning the intended releasees, the intent of the parties as to who is to be released is a question of fact. See Hurt v. Leatherby Ins. Co., 380 So.2d 432, 434 (Fla. 1980) (holding that because the preprinted language routinely included in releases was often "boilerplate" language that did not necessarily reflect the intent of the parties, the presence of that "boilerplate" language could not be construed as a matter of law to reflect the parties' intent). Thus, when there are two types of > release language – some written and some preprinted – within a single form, a latent ambiguity exists that requires the parties' intent to be determined as a matter of fact.

> Enterprise Leasing Co. v. Demartino, 15 So.3d 711, 716 (Fla. Ct. App. 2009) (emphasis added).

This background provides the context and principles necessary to determine the grantor's intent when the documents at issue here were created and executed. Recourse to magic words and boilerplate phrases extracted from the text of the entire document divorced from the context and purpose for which the grantor executed the document is contrary to canons governing the proper construction of an instrument to accomplish the grantor's intent.

4. It is not necessary that a document include "limiting language" to be an easement.

This Court is presented a binary proposition. In 1910 the landowners signing these documents intended to either: (a) grant the railroad an easement across a strip of the owner's land for the purpose of operating a railway line; or (b) give the railroad title to the fee estate in a narrow strip of land the railroad could subsequently sell for purposes other than a railroad.[38]

The government argues that, unless the document contains "liming language," such as was contained in the Honoré deed, the court should construe the document as a conveyance of title to the fee simple estate in the strip of land across which the railroad built a railway line. For example, the government argues that because "the granting clause [in the Burton document] does not contain language limiting the interests conveyed to certain uses or purposes [therefor]," it is not an easement. See Barron, No. 21-2181, ECF No. 32, p. 11 (government cross-motion).

But an easement may be created without any written instrument, and it is not necessary that a document granting an easement explicitly define the specific purpose for which the easement was granted or that the document contain a reversionary clause. In Behrens, 59 F.4th 1345, the Federal Circuit held that nineteen documents granted only an easement, even though, "[i]n the case of eighteen of the nineteen deeds at issue, the deeds themselves contain no language stating a limitation of the grant to specified purposes."

We return to basic definitional principles of property law. An easement is a limited right to land owned by another for a specific purpose. See WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY (2nd ed. 1954), p. 810 ("An acquired privilege or right to use or enjoyment, falling short of ownership, which an owner or possessor of land has, by virtue of his possession in the land of another, or, loosely, any of several rights which one person may have in the land of another."). See also Mills, 147 Fed. Cl. at 347 (quoting BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY (11th ed. 2019)) ("[t]he right to pass through property owned by another"). Additionally, THOMPSON ON REAL PROPERTY (2nd ed. 1998), §60.02(c), explains that the > right in land held by an easement holder differs from the fee interest or even the leasehold interest in that it is a "use" interest, but not a "possessory" interest in the land. Thus the easement holder has neither the permanent possession of even a single molecule of the land itself...the easement holder has the right to make or control a particular use of the land that remains owned by another.

Bruce and Ely explain that an "easement is commonly defined as a nonpossessory interest in the land of another." EASEMENTS & LICENSES IN LAND §1.1. They continue, "the nonpossessory feature of an easement differentiates it from an estate in land. … the holder of an affirmative easement may only use the land burdened by the easement; the holder may not occupy and possess the realty as does an estate owner." Id. Bruce and Ely clarify that an "easement so extensive that it amounts to an estate is not an easement." Id. §1:21 (citing Alfred F. Conrad, Easement Novelties, 30 CAL. L. REV. 125, 150 (1942)).

In Barron, the government relies heavily upon Fla. Stat. §689.10 for the proposition that conveyances of real property must be presumed to convey title to the fee simple estate. The government's reliance is misplaced. The purpose of Fla. Stat. §689.10 was to abrogate the strict common-law requirement in this respect – to eliminate the need to use certain magic words (such as "and his heirs") necessary to convey inheritable title. The statute is irrelevant to the issue of determining whether an estate in land or a servitude was conveyed because the statute only applies to estates in land (not servitudes, such as easements).

The word "fee" references the inheritability of the interest in land, not the quantum of the interest in land. The important and relevant distinction is the difference between an estate in land and a servitude to use the land. "Fee" means a "heritable interest in land; esp., a fee simple absolute." BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY (11th ed.) (emphasis added).[39]

Florida adopted §689.10 (other states adopted nearly-identical statutes) to address future interests in land. Future interests are "nonpossessory estates capable of becoming possessory." Dukeminier and Krier, PROPERTY (1981 ed.), p. 409. As Professors Dukeminier and Krier explain, "[f]uture interests are limited in number, but the ones permitted are quite enough. In fact, we are willing to bet that, before we are through, you will have a candidate or two for the discard file." Id. Examples of future interests include rights of reversion, possibility of reverter, right of entry, vested remainder, contingent remainder, and an executory interest. See id. As Professors Dukeminier and Krier intimate, states wanted to simplify the conveyance of estates in land by adopting statutes like §689.10 to presume that the conveyance was a transfer of an inheritable estate unless the document clearly stated otherwise. This is because the common law required certain magic words ("and his heirs") be used in order to convey an inheritable estate in land. The important point is that Florida's §689.10 applies to future interests in estates in land. Section 689.10 does not apply to servitudes such as easements.[40]

[39] "Fee" is a feudal term used to describe estates in land and future interests. See THOMPSON ON REAL PROPERTY §17.02 (a fee simple "is capable of inheritance"). "Our modern word fee, a direct descendant of fief, implies the characteristic of potentially infinite duration...." BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY (quoting Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskel, PREFACE TO ESTATES IN LAND AND FUTURE INTERESTS (2nd ed. 1984), p. 11) (italics in original).

The vast majority of authorities hold that conveyances of strips of land to railroads grant the railroad an easement, not title to the fee estate in the strip of land. Traditional principles of property law direct the interpretation of such documents to favor the grant of an easement (a servitude), not a conveyance of title to the fee estate. The RESTATEMENT explains,

> [c]onveyances of land described as a road or right of way, or stated to be for a depot, station, or other purpose related to transportation, often give rise to disputes. If the instrument fails to specify, exactly, the nature and extent of the rights to be conveyed to the grantee, and the rights retained by the grantor, it may be ambiguous. The fact that the consideration paid was less than the value of a fee-simple estate in the land weighs strongly in favor of finding that an easement was intended…. If the ambiguity cannot be resolved by reading the instrument as a whole, courts must resort to the circumstances surrounding the transaction and public-policy preferences in construing the instrument.[41]

The RESTATEMENT further explains,

> [d]etermining the parties' intent at the time of the conveyance is often difficult.… However, the consideration paid, the narrowness of the parcel, and its location in relation to the remaining land of the grantor, may suggest that the parties intended conveyance of an easement. Viewed from the standpoint of the parties at the time of the transaction, it may appear likely that the parties regarded ownership of the now-disputed land, after abandonment of the contemplated use, as more valuable to the grantor than to the grantee because of its shape and location in relation to the land of the grantor. ... The fact that the grantee is a railroad may also tend to indicate that the instrument should be construed to convey an easement only. The narrowness of the parcel, the consideration paid, and the frequency with which railroad uses have been abandoned often lead to the conclusion that the grantor, as [40] The statute, enacted in 1903, provides, "Where any real estate has heretofore been conveyed or granted…without there being used in the said deed or conveyance or grant any words of limitation, such as heirs or successors, or similar words, such conveyance or grant...shall be construed to vest the fee simple title.…" Fla. Stat. § 689.10 (emphasis added). An easement is not an estate in land; it is an interest in the property owned by another. See Bruce & Ely, LAW OF EASEMENTS & LICENSES IN LAND § 1:1 ("the nonpossessory feature of an easement differentiates it from an estate in land"). See also THOMPSON ON REAL PROPERTY §60.02(a).

[41] RESTATEMENT (THIRD): SERVITUDES §2.2, Comment g (emphasis added).

> a reasonable person dealing with a railroad, intended to grant no more than an easement for the right of way, retaining ownership of the land.[42]

Applied here, these authorities direct that the documents created in the early 1900s, in which the railroad paid only nominal consideration for narrow strips of land across which the railroad operated a railway line, granted the railroad an easement and did not give the railroad title to the fee simple estate in the strip of land.

5. Florida public policy disfavors creation of "strips or gores" of land and follows the centerline presumption.

The strip-and-gore doctrine and its cousin, the centerline presumption, are background principles of law that inform the interpretation of documents describing a railroad's interest in the strip of land across which the railroad operates it railway line. Common law before Blackstone disfavors the creation of fee estates in narrow strips and gores of land. In Paine v. Consumers' Forwarding & Storage, Co., 71 F. 626, 629-30, 632 (6th Cir. 1895), then-Judge Taft (later President and Chief Justice Taft) held that the > existence of "strips or gores" of land along the margin of non-navigable lakes, to which the title may be held in abeyance for indefinite periods of time, is as great an evil as are "strips and gores" of land along highways or running streams. The litigation that may arise therefrom after long years…[is] vexatious…. [P]ublic policy [seeks] to prevent this by a construction that would carry the title to the center of a highway, running stream, or non-navigable lake that may be made a boundary of the lands.

More recently, in Penn Central v. U.S. R.R. Vest Corp., Judge Easterbrook explained this strip-and-gore doctrine as it applied to determining what interest a railroad held in a strip of land used for a railway line.

> The presumption is that a deed to a railroad or other right of way company…conveys a right of way, that is, an easement, terminable when the acquirer's use terminates, rather than a fee simple… If the railroad holds title in fee simple to a multitude of skinny strips of land now usable only by the owner of the surrounding or adjacent land, then before the strips can be put to their best use there > must be expensive and time-consuming negotiation between the railroad and its neighbor…. A further consideration is that railroads and other right of way companies have eminent domain powers, and they should not be encouraged to use those powers to take more than they need of another person's property – more, that is, than a right of way.[43]

Florida follows the strip-and-gore doctrine and the related centerline presumption. See Castillo, 952 F.3d at 1321 ("We conclude that, under Florida law, the centerline presumption applies to the railroad right-of-way context of the present case."). In Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Southern Inv. Co., the Supreme Court of Florida held "the proprietor of lots abutting on a public street is presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to own soil to the center of the street." 44 So. 351, 353 (Fla. 1907) (citing and quoting Rawls v. Tallahassee Hotel, 31 So. 237 (Fla. 1894)). Florida law further provides that when a landowner grants a right-of-way easement across his or her land, the owner retains title to the fee estate in the land encumbered by the easement. See Castillo, 952 F.3d at 1320-21 (analyzing Smith v. Horn, 70 So. 435, 436 (Fla. 1915), Servando Bldg. Co. v. Zimmerman, 91 So.2d 289, 293 (Fla. 1956) (en banc), Bischoff v. Walker, 107 So.3d 1165, 1171 (Fla. Ct. App. 2013), Florida Southern Railway Co. v. Brown, 1 So. 512, 513 (Fla. 1887), and Seaboard, 44 So. at 353). In Servando, the Florida Supreme Court found that a ten-foot-wide alley on a subdivision plat would serve no "practical use or service," and that an "isolated piece of land of such proportion could be of no use to anyone except owners of property it touched and persons dealing with them." 91 So.2d at 293. The Florida Supreme Court reaffirmed the principle in United States v. 16.33 Acres of Land in Dade County, 342 So.2d 476, 480 (Fla. 1977), holding that the owner of lots abutting road easements took title to the centerline of the adjoining easements.

[43] 955 F.2d 1158, 1160 (7th Cir. 1992) (citations omitted).

The strip-and-gore doctrine directs this Court to hold that the plaintiffs held title to the fee estate in the land extending to the centerline of the railway line. This limitation on a railroad's property interest in strips and gores of land is consistent with a railroad's lack of need for any greater interest. "Except to site a station house or similar land use here and there, the railroads had no need or desire for any interest except a 'right-of-way.'" Davis v. MCI Telecomms. Corp., 606 So.2d 734, 738 (Fla. Ct. App. 1992). See also Dean v. MOD Props., 528 So.2d 432, 434 (Fla. Ct. App. 1988) ("only an easement is needed to lawfully construct and maintain a road right-of-way").

The "centerline presumption" is analogous to the strip-and-gore doctrine. In Castillo, the outcome turned, in part, upon application of the centerline presumption as a doctrine of Florida property law. 952 F.3d at 1323. In 1924 the Florida East Coast Railway acquired a 1.2-mile-long right-of-way easement across several undeveloped tracts of land "by way of four condemnation orders." Id. at 1315. The railway line ran north and south. The land on the east side was subdivided in 1947 into individual platted lots. The land on the west side of the railway line was likewise subdivided into individual platted lots in 1949. The individual lots were subsequently sold for homes. The deeds from the developers to the individual homeowners described the property by reference to the recorded plat and "pictorial depiction" of the lots and adjoining roads and railroad right-of-way, not by metes-and-bounds descriptions of the boundaries of each lot. The plats included written text describing the tract of land as "'East of the [FEC Railway] Right-of-Way' and 'less the [FEC Railway] Right-of-Way'" and that "land 'less [the] certain strip of land' that is the right-of-way." Id. at 1318-19. The Florida East Coast Railway's successor-railroad abandoned the railway line in 2016. The Board invoked the Trails Act and encumbered the property with a rail-trail corridor easement, and the landowners sued for compensation.

The landowners argued they owned the fee estate in the land to the centerline of the abandoned railroad right-of-way that adjoined their platted lot. The government argued the owners' title included only the land depicted in the plat, which was bounded by the edge of the railroad right-of-way and did not include the land under the railroad right-of-way. See Castillo, 952 F.3d at 1317. The Federal Circuit explained that Florida had adopted the centerline presumption, which presumes that if a grantor conveys "property identified as bounded by a road, stream, or similar corridor, and the grantor owns the land under that boundary corridor, the grant also conveys title to the land underlying the corridor up to the corridor's centerline, unless there is clear evidence of non-conveyance as to that corridor land." Id. at 1318.

The Federal Circuit reversed the decision of Judge Horn, who had granted summary judgment in favor of the government "relying just on the plats," concluding "that the pictorial depictions of the subdivisions in the plats indicate that none of the parcels 'extend onto the railroad corridor but, instead, end at the edge of the railroad corridor,' meaning that the railroad corridor is not included in the subdivision plat." Castillo, 952 F.3d at 1318. Judge Horn found that "the plats' pictorial depictions show that 'none of the parcels belonging to the [landowners] extend onto the railroad corridor but, instead, end at the edge of the railroad corridor.'" Id. at 1323.

On appeal, the Federal Circuit held that Judge Horn was wrong for two reasons. First, the centerline presumption doctrine means the owners of the platted lots acquired title to the fee estate extending to the centerline of the adjoining railway line. And second, the language in the plats describing the property as "less the certain strip of land" that is "east of the [railroad right-of-way]" did not overcome the centerline presumption. Castillo, 952 F.3d at 1324. The Federal Circuit explained, "[l]ong ago, the Supreme Court of the United States described the centerline presumption as a 'familiar principle of law' to the effect that 'a grant of land bordering on a road or river, carries the title to the centre of the river or road, unless the terms or circumstances of the grant indicate a limitation of its extent by the exterior lines.'" Castillo, 952 F.3d at 1320 (quoting Banks v. Ogden, 69 U.S. 57, 68 (1864)). The Federal Circuit then held the centerline presumption was a legal doctrine Florida had recognized since 1887. Id. (citing Florida Southern Railway, 1 So. at 515, and Smith, 70 So. at 436).

The Federal Circuit explained that "the centerline presumption supplies a default rule to perform that important task – with the content of the rule being a presumption that the corridor, commonly a narrow strip, is not to be owned separately from the abutting land." Castillo, 952 F.3d at 1321 (citing Dale A. Whitman, THE LAW OF PROPERTY (4th ed. 2019) §11.2, pp. 713, 719. The Federal Circuit noted, "[a]t present, the rule is a fixture of Florida law," and held, "[w]e conclude that, under Florida law, the centerline presumption applies to the railroad right-of-way context...." Id. at 1320 n.4, 1321 (citing Bischoff, 107 So.3d at 1165). Furthermore, "[i]nterpreting such documents, like interpreting the plats themselves, requires use of the centerline presumption to the extent it applies." Id. at 1324.

The Federal Circuit then addressed the "less" or "except" language in the plats and conveyances. See Castillo, 952 F.3d at 1322. The Federal Circuit held Judge Horn was wrong to rely upon this language in the plats as overriding the centerline presumption, stating, the "language uses terminology to which the presumption remains applicable, in that the language used refers to...the right-of-way itself (as an easement) in affirmatively stating the boundary of the subdivision land and identifying certain exclusions." Id. at 1322. The Court examined Dean, 528 So.2d at 432-33, where > a Florida appellate court held that a deed conveying the entire parcel "less and except the following described [road right-of-way] easement" did not exclude the land of the road from application of the centerline presumption. The court held that the language "served simply to exclude the recorded easement in favor of the [easement beneficiary] from the title interest being conveyed and to prevent the recorded easement from constituting a breach of the covenants of warranty in each deed."

Thus, the Federal Circuit found that, under Florida law, this language ("less" and "excepting" an adjoining right-of-way) did not overcome the centerline presumption under which the owner of the adjoining land held title to the fee estate in the land extending to the center of the adjoining railway right-of-way. Id.

C. A railroad's interest in a strip of land acquired for a railway line is an easement, not title to the fee simple estate.

1. A railroad company is established for the limited purpose of operating a railway line.

A railroad corporation is a creature of state legislation that charters the railroad corporation for the specific public purpose of constructing and operating a railway line. The Virginia Supreme Court (Seaboard was chartered in Virginia) explained, "[a] railroad company in Virginia is a quasi-public corporation, which, whatever it may do, cannot, by its own voluntary contract or collusion, surrender its functions and responsibilities to agents or trustees...outside the limits of the state...." Naglee v. Alexandria & F.R. Co., 3 S.E. 369, 370 (Va. 1887). The court explained that railroad > corporations are created...to answer the public good...and cannot, therefore, by mere common-law authority, divest themselves by direct act of their capacity to discharge the duties to the public which devolve upon them; and, as a sequence thereto, cannot do that which may indirectly lead to the same thing, as, for instance, make a mortgage, which, by foreclosure and sale, may end in bringing about the inhibited result.[44]

The Supreme Court explained that "[i]t is the accepted doctrine in this country, that a railroad corporation cannot escape the performance of any duty or obligation imposed by its charter or the general laws of the State by a voluntary surrender of its road into the hands of lessees." Washington, A.&G.R. Co. v. Brown, 84 U.S. 445, 450 (1873). Subsequently, in Thomas v. Railroad Co., 101 U.S. 71, 83 (1879), the Supreme Court further explained, > where a corporation, like a railroad company, has granted to it by charter a franchise intended in large measure to be exercised for the public good, the due performance of those functions being the consideration of the public grant, any contract which disables the corporation from performing those functions which undertakes, without the consent of the State, to transfer to others the rights and powers conferred > by the charter, and to relieve the grantees of the burden which it imposes, is a violation of the contract with the State, and is void as against public policy.

The Supreme Court later added that the "general doctrine upon this subject is now well settled. The charter of a corporation, read in connection with the general laws applicable to it, is the measure of its powers, and a contract manifestly beyond those powers will not sustain an action against the corporation." Green Bay & M.R. Co. v. Union Steamboat Co., 107 U.S. 98, 100 (1883). And in New York & Maryland Line R. Co. v. Winans, the Court further held, "[t]he [railroad] corporation cannot absolve itself from the performance of its obligations, without the consent of the legislature." 58 U.S. 30, 39 (1854) (relied upon by the Virginia Supreme Court in Naglee, 3 S.E. at 370-71).

The point is this: a railroad corporation is a creature of statute created for a specific public purpose, and the legal authority (including eminent domain power) granted a railroad corporation is limited to the accomplishment of the specific public purpose for which the railroad corporation was established. As applied to the property a railroad corporation could acquire by eminent domain, the public purpose of operating a railway defined the nature and extent of the property interest a railroad corporation acquired in private property taken by, or granted, to the railroad corporation. As Professor Ely aptly explained,

> [p]rominent experts took the position that, absent statutory provisions expressly authorizing the taking of a fee simple, railroads should receive just an easement in land condemned for their use. "It is certain, in this country, upon general principles," Redfield declared, "that a railway company, by virtue of their compulsory powers, in the taking lands, could acquire no absolute fee-simple, but only the right to use the land for their purposes." Judicial decisions tended to adopt this line of analysis….[45]

[45] James W. Ely, Jr., RAILROADS & AMERICAN LAW (2001), pp. 197-98. Chief Justice Roberts quoted and relied on Professor Ely's treatise in Brandt, 572 U.S. at 96.

Railroad corporations were not granted authority to exercise eminent domain power (or to threaten eminent domain) to acquire any interest in property greater than that needed to accomplish the public purpose of building and operating a railway. And to accomplish the public purpose for which a railroad corporation was chartered, the railroad needed only an easement across a strip of an owner's land. The railroad did not need to acquire title to the fee estate (including mineral rights) in the strip of land across which the railroad built a railway line.

The Florida Supreme Court applies this principle when determining what interest a railroad acquired in the mineral rights in land used for a railway line. In Silver Springs, O&G R. Co. v. Van Ness, 34 So. 884, 885-86 (Fla. 1903), and Van Ness v. Royal Phosphate Co., 53 So. 381, 381 (Fla. 1910), a railroad was granted the right to operate trains across a strip of land. The railroad claimed ownership of the mineral rights in the phosphate under the railway line. The Florida Supreme Court held the railroad acquired only an easement across the land, not title to the fee estate, and thus, the railroad did not own the mineral interests in the land under the railway line. See Silver Springs, 34 So. at 890; Van Ness, 53 So. at 384. The U.S. Supreme Court similarly held rights-of-way the federal government granted railroads were easements, not title to the fee estate in the land, and did not include ownership of the mineral rights under the right-of-way. See Brandt, 572 U.S. at 102 (citing Great Northern Railway Co. v. United States, 315 U.S. 262, 271 (1942)).

2. Florida statute provides that a railroad only acquires an easement in land acquired by condemnation or voluntary grant.

In the early 1900s railroads abused their economic monopoly and eminent domain power to the detriment of landowners whose land was taken for railway lines and farmers who depended upon the railroads to transport crops and cattle to market. See Ely, RAILROADS & AMERICAN LAW, pp. 86-90. The railroad's abuses gave rise to the Granger Movement and growing anti-railroad sentiment, prompting reforms of state laws restricting railroads' power of eminent domain and railroads' ability to set rates. See id. In Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R.R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U.S. 155, 161 (1877), the Supreme Court noted that railroad companies are "given extraordinary powers," and had also explained in Munn v. State of Illinois that "during the twenty years in which [the railroad] business had been assuming its present immense proportions, something had occurred which led the whole body of the people to suppose that remedies such as are usually employed to prevent abuses by virtual monopolies might not be inappropriate here." 94 U.S. 113, 132 (1876) (internal quotation omitted). This public sentiment against railroad companies' abuses lead to the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1887 with the famous jurist Thomas Cooley as the first Commissioner.

Railroad corporations' abuse of eminent domain and monopoly power also resulted in states adopting a number of reforms. See Ely, RAILROADS & AMERICAN LAW, p. 80 ("The 1870s witnessed the beginning of a sea change in popular opinion regarding the railroads. Calls for more stringent regulation mounted, eclipsing the earlier policy of encouragement and subsidization."). One of the reforms states adopted were laws limiting the interest a railroad company could obtain in private property through the actual or threatened exercise of eminent domain.

Florida, Missouri, Kansas, and most other states enacted model laws limiting railroad companies' eminent domain authority. In Behrens, the Federal Circuit considered Missouri's statute and reviewed the statutes of other states that adopted essentially identical laws to those in Florida and Missouri. See 59 F.4th at 1345. The Federal Circuit wrote, a "Missouri statute that has been in effect since 1855 gives railroads the power: [t]o take and hold such voluntary grants of real estate and other property as shall be made to it to aid in the construction, maintenance and accommodation of its railroads; but the real estate received by voluntary grant shall be held and used for the purpose of such grant only…." Id. (citing Mo. Rev. Stat. §1035 (1899) (now codified at §388.210(2)). The Federal Circuit continued and held that, > Under Missouri law, a conveyance of property to a railroad for nominal consideration is treated as a voluntary grant, and one dollar is nominal consideration. Brown[ ], 152 S.W.2d [at] 653-54 [ ]. Each grant in this case was to a railroad and for one dollar. These conveyances were thus voluntary grants. Voluntary grants to railroads are easements even if they are formally worded as grants of fee simple estates. Id. at 654; see also Boyles[ ], 981 S.W.2d [at] 648 [ ] ("Where the acquisition is for right-of-way only, however, whether by condemnation, voluntary grant, or conveyance in fee upon valuable consideration, the railroad takes only an easement over the land and not the fee.

Behrens, 59 F.4th at 1345 (emphasis added).

Twenty years after Missouri adopted §1035, Florida adopted an essentially identical statute. Florida allowed railroads to "cause such examinations and surveys for the proposed railroad…and for such purposes…to enter upon the lands…of any person for that purpose [and] to take and hold such voluntary grants of real estate…as shall be made to it to aid in the construction, maintenance and accommodation of its road." Fla. Stat. §2241 (1892). But the statute also provided "the real estate received by voluntary grant shall be held and used for purposes of such grant only." Id. Florida's law limiting the interest a railroad obtained by a voluntary grant was the same as the statutes adopted in Missouri, Kansas, and other states in the early 1900s. See Rogers IV, 184 So.3d at 1094, 1096, n.5. The Florida legislature granted railroads the power of eminent domain to enter upon and take private property "necessary to [their] business." Fla. Stat. §2683 (1914). In State v. Baker, the Florida Supreme Court held a railroad's occupation of private land, without the owner's consent, to survey and locate its railway line "is not the case of a mere trespass by one having no authority to enter, but of one representing the State herself, clothed with the power of eminent domain." 20 Fla. 616, 650 (1884) (citation and internal quotation omitted).

The railroad's power of eminent domain, however, was subject to limitations. For example, a railroad corporation can only take private property "upon making due compensation according to law to private owners." Fla. Stat. §2683 (1914). And §2241 limited what interest a railroad acquired, providing that "the real estate received by voluntary grant shall be held and used for purposes of such grant only." Id. (emphasis added). Thus, under section 2241, the nature of the railroad's interest in land acquired by voluntary grant is determined by the nature of the railroad's public purpose. A railroad did not need to acquire title to the fee estate in a strip of land upon which the railroad built and operated a railway line – an easement was sufficient.[46]

When the documents at issue in this litigation were created, it was understood that, "upon general principles…a railroad company…could acquire no absolute fee-simple, but only the right to use the land for their purpose." Isaac F. Redfield, THE LAW OF RAILWAYS (1869), vol. 1, p. 255. See also Leonard A. Jones, A TREATISE ON THE LAW OF EASEMENTS §211 (1898), p. 178 ("[a] grant of a right of way to a railroad company is a grant of an easement merely, and the fee remains [46] Florida is not unique in its law governing the interpretation of railroad conveyances as granting only an easement. See Ogg v. Mediacom, LLC, 142 S.W.3d 801, 812 (Mo. Ct. App. 2004) (considering a deed as a whole and construing it to convey only an easement, because "there are no clear, overriding indicia of an intent to convey full fee ownership of the land…the recited consideration was nominal ($1.00), which is 'not a sum that would suggest purchase of a fee simple interest' in the strip") (citation omitted). Based on statutes similar or identical to section 2241, courts of other states have reached the same conclusion. For example, the Kansas Supreme Court, applying a statute identical to section 2241, stated "[t]his Court has uniformly held that railroads do no own fee titles to narrow strips taken as right-of-way, regardless of whether they are taken by condemnation or right-of-way deed. The rule…gives full effect to the intent of the parties who execute right-of-way deeds rather than going through lengthy and expensive condemnation proceedings." Harvest Queen Mill & Elevator Co. v. Sanders, 370 P.2d 419, 423 (Kan. 1962) (citations omitted). See also Brown, 152 S.W.2d at 652 ("law is settled in this state that where a railroad acquires a right of way whether by condemnation, by voluntary grant or by a conveyance in fee upon a valuable consideration the railroad takes but a mere easement over the land and not the fee") (citations omitted); Illinois Cent. R.R. Co. v. Roberts, 928 S.W.2d 822, 825 (Ky. Ct. App. 1996) (where "land is purportedly conveyed to a railroad company for the laying of a rail line, the presence of language referring in some manner to a 'right of way' operates to convey a mere easement notwithstanding additional language evidencing the conveyance of a fee"); Ross, Inc. v. Legler, 199 N.E.2d 346, 348 (Ind. 1964) ("[p]ublic policy does not favor the conveyance of strips of land by simple titles to railroad companies for right-of-way purposes, either by deed or condemnation"); Mich. Dep't of Natural Res. v. Carmody-Lahti Real Estate, Inc., 699 N.W.2d 272, 280 (Mich. 2005) ("a deed granting a right-of-way typically conveys an easement"); Pollnow v. State Dep't of Naural Res., 276 N.W.2d 738, 744 (Wis. 1979) ("normally a right of way condemned by a railway would only constitute an easement").

in the grantor"); Ely, RAILROADS & AMERICAN LAW, pp. 197-98 (citing Simeon F. Baldwin, AMERICAN RAILROAD LAW (1904), p. 77).[47]

As Judge Plager explained in Preseault II, "a railroad that proceeds to acquire a right-of-way for its road acquires only that estate, typically an easement, necessary for its limited purposes, and that the act of survey and location is the operative determinant, and not the particular form of transfer, if any." 100 F.3d at 1537. In short, almost all authorities on railroad law (courts as well as scholars) direct that a grant of a strip of land to a railroad conveys only an easement for a railway line, not title to, nor ownership of, the fee estate in the land under the railway line.

3. "Railbanking" and public recreation are not a railroad purpose.

A railway line is not a public park. Under Florida law it is illegal to walk on railroad tracks. Fla. Stat. §§810.09, 810.12. See also Battiste v. Lamberti, 571 F. Supp.2d 1286, 1293 (S.D. Fla. 2008) (plaintiffs arrested for trespassing on railroad tracks). Public recreation is not a railroad purpose. The notion of "railbanking" (not using property for the operation of a railway line with the prospect the federal government may authorize some railroad at some time in the indefinite future to re-build a railway across the land) is not a railroad purpose under Florida law. As Judge Rader explained in his concurring opinion in Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1554, > [w]hile there is some dispute over the comparative burden of scheduled rumbling freight trains versus obnoxious in-line rollerskaters, the issue can be resolved on simpler terms. Realistically, nature trails are for recreation, not transportation. Thus, when the State sought to convert the easement into a recreational trail, it exceeded the scope of the original easement and caused a reversion. ...

> The vague notion that the State may at some time in the future return the property to the use for which it was originally granted, does not override its present use of > that property inconsistent with the easement. That conversion demands compensation.

[47] The Supreme Court of Florida held a railroad's interest is only an easement relying upon similar authority. See Pensacola & Atl. R.R., 21 Fla. at 148-49 (citing Edward L. Pierce, PIERCE ON RAILROADS (1881), and REDFIELD); Jacksonville R.&K.W. Ry. Co. v. Lockwood, 15 So. 327, 330 (Fla. 1894) ("The opinion in Railroad Co. v. Jackson...relies on PIERCE ON RAILROADS."); Knickerbocker, 94 So. at 501 (citing ELLIOTT ON RAILROADS (2nd ed.)).

And the Federal Circuit stated in Behrens, "[w]e have similarly and consistently held that trail use is not a railroad purpose under [Missouri and] other states' laws." 59 F.4th at 1346.

D. The Florida Supreme Court's answer to the Federal Circuit's certified question in Rogers does not answer the question before this Court.

1. The unique issue considered by the Federal Circuit and Florida Supreme Court in Rogers.

As noted above, the federal government's creation of the Legacy Trail corridor has been the subject of prior litigation. Judge Williams issued two published decisions concerning the government's obligation to pay landowners for land taken for the southern segment of the Legacy Trail in Rogers v. United States, 90 Fed. Cl. 418 (2009) (Rogers I), and Rogers v. United States, 93 Fed. Cl. 607 (2010) (Rogers II). Judge Williams' first decision considered the government's liability for Trails Act takings generally and considered specifically the nature of the railroad's interest in the strip of land that was the subject of a 1910 deed from Adrian Honoré to Seaboard. Judge Williams held the railroad was only granted an easement by Adrian Honoré, and therefore, the government must pay those landowners across whose property the railroad acquired an interest from Honoré. See Rogers I, 90 Fed. Cl. at 422. Judge Williams' second opinion considered the more complex situation and conveyances involved in Seaboard's 1920 relocation of the southernmost two-mile-long railway line, depot, and wye track south of Curry Creek adjacent to land owned by Bird Bay Golf Club. See Rogers II, 93 Fed. Cl. at 618-19. See also Rogers I, 90 Fed. Cl. at 433 ("The history of the section of the railroad corridor adjacent to Bird Bay's property is more complicated.").

The conveyances in Rogers II involved a "complicated" series of transactions including numerous deeds from the 1920s and two foreclosure sales in the 1930s involving the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers (BLE) pension fund's plan to develop a planned community in Venice.

Rogers II considered what interest Seaboard acquired in land upon which Seaboard built the new depot, wye track, and railway line. The Federal Circuit subsequently posed a certified question arising from Rogers II to the Florida Supreme Court. The Florida Supreme Court referenced the "complicated" history of the conveyances at issue. Rogers IV, 184 So.3d at 1100 ("The opinion of the Court of Federal Claims explains the complicated history of the parcels of land conveyed to Seaboard by the 1927 B.L.E. Realty deed."). See also Rogers I, 90 Fed. Cl. at 422, 433 ("The portion of the railway corridor that abuts Bird Bay's property has a nebulous history" and the "history of the section of the railroad corridor adjacent to Bird Bay's property is more complicated."); Rogers v. United States, 814 F.3d 1299, 1304 (Fed. Cir. 2015) (Rogers III) ("The southern corridor, which presently abuts property owned by [Bird Bay], has a more convoluted history involving numerous transactions.").[48] Judge Williams granted summary judgment for all the plaintiffs across whose land the railroad's interest was established by the easement Adrian Honoré granted Seaboard. Rogers I, 90 Fed. Cl. at 434. Judge Williams then ordered supplemental briefing concerning the unique situation involving the land the railroad acquired for the depot, wye track, and railway line that adjoined the Bird Bay property. Id.[49]

[48] The railway line between Sarasota and Venice was built in 1910; but, in the early 1920s, the southern two miles of the railway south of Curry Creek needed to be relocated. In a complicated series of transactions, the southern two miles of Seaboard's existing railway line – including the wye track (used to turn locomotives around to return north) and the depot – were relocated two miles to the east. Relocating the existing railway line required recording a number of documents describing the property used for the new relocated railway line and the depot. The development of the Venice community and ownership of the land became even more complicated when BLE went bankrupt and the property – including the land across which the railroad was built – was foreclosed upon and sold at an auction. The conveyances executed as part of relocating the existing railway line were the subject of Bird Bay v. United States, No. 07-426, and Bay Plaza v. United States, No. 08-198, which were subsets of the Rogers litigation but were bifurcated and decided separately because the conveyances at issue were unique.

[49] Judge Williams reviewed this history and the transactions concerning the ownership of this property used for the relocated southern two miles of the Seaboard railway line and depot. See Rogers II, 93 Fed. Cl. at 612-16. Judge Williams noted that, "[c]onspicuously absent from the chain of title, however, is the instrument that first conveyed the right-of-way, and the attendant

Judge Williams concluded that "Seaboard obtained fee simple title in the railroad corridor abutting Bird Bay's property." Rogers II, 93 Fed. Cl. at 612. To reach this conclusion Judge Williams had to consider dozens of recorded documents and the complicated context concerning the relocation of this segment of Seaboard's existing railway line and depot including BLE's bankruptcy and the mortgage holder's foreclosure. Judge Williams devoted eleven pages of her two decisions to an analysis of the circumstances by which the railroad obtained an interest in the land adjoining the Bird Bay property. See id. at 612-16; Rogers I, 90 Fed. Cl. at 422-27.

Bird Bay Golf Club appealed Judge Williams' decision. The principle argument Bird Bay raised was that, under Florida's Special Powers of Railroad Statute, the interest the railroad acquitted in the land adjoining Bird Bay's property was limited to only an easement, even if BLE intended to sell the railroad fee simple title to the land for valuable consideration. Judge Williams concluded that the instruments describing the relocated railway line and depot "unambiguously" on their face conveyed title to the fee estate in the tracts and strips of land from the original landowners to the railroad. Rogers II, 93 Fed. Cl. at 622. Judge Williams determined the grantors intended to convey title to the fee estate in the land to Seaboard as part of the relocation of the existing railway line and depot. See id. at 625.

The Federal Circuit assumed the BLE and Venice deeds were an unambiguous conveyance of the fee simple estate and that these conveyances were not voluntary grants for nominal interests or rights, to Seaboard." Rogers I, 90 Fed. Cl. at 433. "In the absence of an original instrument, the Court relies upon subsequent instruments in the chain of title, extrinsic evidence demonstrating the parties' intent, and Florida law in effect at the time of the instruments' executions." Id. Judge Williams also noted that the land used for the railway line and depot had always been described as a separate and distinct tract of land. See Rogers II, 93 Fed. Cl. at 618 ("the instruments conveying the lands abutting the corridor have treated the corridor as a separate parcel of land, separate and distinct from the larger parcels bordering the corridor").

consideration subject to Florida's statute directing that a voluntary conveyance grants railroads only an easement. Given this premise (that the grantors of the BLE and Venice deeds unambiguously intended to sell the railroad, for valuable consideration, the fee simple estate in the tracts of land for the depot, wye track, and relocated railway line), the Federal Circuit asked the Florida Supreme Court whether the Florida Special Powers of Railroad Act of 1892 nonetheless limited the railroad's interest to only an easement even when the grantor "unambiguously" intended to sell the railroad title to the fee simple estate and the railroad paid the grantor valuable consideration. The Federal Circuit asked whether, "[a]ssuming that a deed on, on its face, conveys a strip of land in fee simple from a private party to a railroad corporation in exchange for stated consideration, does [the Florida Special Powers of Railroad Act]...limit the railroad's interest in the property, regardless of the language in the deed?" Rogers III, 814 F.3d at 1308.

In Rogers IV, 184 So.3d at 1090, the Florida Supreme Court understood the Federal Circuit's certified question as asking the court to address three points:

> (1) Does Section 2241 [of the Florida Special Powers of Railroad Act], limit railroads' interest in property, regardless of the language of the deeds? (2) Does state policy limit the railroad's interest in the property, regardless of the language of the deeds? And, (3) Do factual considerations, such as whether the railroad surveys land or lays track and begins running trains before the conveyance of a deed, limit the railroad's interest in the property, regardless of the language of the deeds?

As to the third question, the Florida Supreme Court noted that, for this relocated section of railroad, it was "after receiving these deeds, [that] Seaboard laid track." Id. In other words, Seaboard had not entered the land acting under Seaboard's eminent domain authority under the voluntary conveyance and consideration of provisions of Fla. Stat. §2241. The Florida Supreme Court further noted these deeds were not "voluntary conveyances" for nominal consideration "because the deeds were grants by bargain and sale for valuable consideration and conveyed fee simple title." Rogers IV, 184 So.3d at 1094 (emphasis added).

The Florida Supreme Court's opinion in Rogers IV did not direct how a court is to determine whether a grantor intended to convey title to the fee estate or grant an easement. Rather, the Florida Supreme Court assumed the premise that BLE, as the grantor, "unambiguously" intended to sell the railroad title to the fee simple estate for valuable (not nominal) consideration. The Florida Supreme Court recited and premised its decision upon the "Statement of All Facts Relevant to the Questions Certified" provided by the Federal Circuit, which stated,

> Those deeds appear, on their face, to unambiguously convey a fee simple interest to Seaboard. After receiving these deeds, Seaboard laid track and began to operate trains along the entire corridor as of November 1911. [And the BLE deed] appears, on its face, to unambiguously convey a fee simple interest in the property corresponding to the relocated southern portion of the rail corridor.[50]

Rogers IV affirmed Florida's voluntary grant provisions (which is identical to the Missouri statute the Federal Circuit considered in Behrens) but said this provision did not apply to the BLE and other deed at issue in Rogers. To define a "voluntary conveyance," the Florida Supreme Court adopted the same definition of a "voluntary grant" as did the Missouri Supreme Court, and the Florida Supreme Court looked to and quoted the Missouri Supreme Court. "A 'voluntary conveyance' is '[a] conveyance made without valuable consideration.'" Rogers IV, 184 So.3d at 1094 (quoting BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY (10th ed. 2014), p. 408). The Florida Supreme Court continued, "[c]onstruing a similar state statute on the subject of railroad rights of way, the Supreme Court of Missouri has held that the term 'voluntary grant' was used by the legislature to mean a conveyance without valuable consideration." Id. (citing Clay, 239 S.W.2d at 508, and Brown, 152 S.W.2d at 653).

The BLE and Venice deeds that were the subject of the certified question in Rogers III were not subject to Florida's voluntary conveyance statute. Florida's Supreme Court explained that the "provision in subsection (2) of the Florida statute, to the effect that 'real estate received by voluntary grant shall be held and used for purposes of such grant only,' does not apply in this case because the deeds were grants by bargain and sale for valuable consideration and conveyed fee simple title." Id. at 1094, n.3 (quoting and citing Seaboard Air Line Ry. Co. v. Bd. of Bond Trustees of Special Road & Bridge Dist., 108 So. 689, 698 (Fla. 1926), and Armstrong v. Seaboard Air Line Ry. Co., 95 So. 506, 506-07 (Fla. 1922)). The Florida Supreme Court stated, "[w]e need not discuss the language of the deeds in this case in detail or the circumstances of their execution because the Court of Federal Claims did a thorough job of it in reaching the conclusion that the deeds by their language appeared to convey fee simple title." Rogers IV, 184 So.3d at 1095. The Florida Supreme Court then reaffirmed the fundamental tenet of deed construction that, "[t]he effect of a deed, both as to the property conveyed and the character of the estate conveyed, is determined by the intent of the grantor." Id. (citing Reid, 112 So. at 852, and Saltzman v. Ahern, 306 So.2d 537, 539 (Fla. Ct. App. 1975).

Given the assumption that the grantors executing the BLE and Venice deeds in Rogers "unambiguously" intended to sell fee simple title to the railroad for valuable consideration and that the BLE and Venice deeds were not voluntary grants for nominal consideration, the Florida Supreme Court told the Federal Circuit that, when a grantor unambiguously intends to sell the fee estate in a tract of land to a railroad for valuable consideration, the Florida's Special Powers of Railroads Act does not limit the interest the railroad acquires to an easement. Rogers IV, 184 So.3d at 1096. The Florida Supreme Court then explicitly conditioned its answer by qualifying it "[u]nder the circumstances found to exist by the Court of Federal Claims." Id. (emphasis added). With this qualification the Florida Supreme Court told the Federal Circuit that the Florida Special Powers of Railroad Act did not "limit[ ] the railroad's interest in the property regardless of the language of the deed." Id.

In short, Rogers IV does not answer the question this Court must decide. In Rogers III, the certified question the Federal Circuit asked the Florida Supreme Court to answer assumed the grantor (BLE and Venice) intended to convey title to the fee estate for valuable consideration and assumed the deeds granted a fee simple estate and were not voluntary conveyances.

2. When she wrote Rogers II, Judge Williams did not have the benefit of subsequent authority.

Judge Williams also wrote Rogers II more than thirteen years ago. As such, she did not have the benefit of the Florida Supreme Court's decision in Rogers IV, nor the United States Supreme Court's decisions in Brandt and Cowpasture, nor the Federal Circuit's decisions in Castillo and Behrens. Thus, Judge Williams' decision in Rogers II must be read through the lens of this subsequent authority.

(i) Judge Williams misunderstood Preseault II as applying only when the railroad acquired its interest by condemnation.

Judge Williams misread the Federal Circuit's decision in Preseault II as applying only to conveyances made in the context of condemnation. In Preseault II the Federal Circuit determined what interest a railroad acquired by condemnation in a strip of land across the Barker Estate. See discussion, supra, pp. 13-17. Across a third parcel, the railroad acquired its interest by a deed that "appear[ed] to be the standard form used to convey a fee simple title from a grantor to [the railroad]." Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1535-36. Thus, in Preseault II the Federal Circuit determined the interest a railroad acquired by both condemnation and by a deed that appeared to "convey a fee simple title" was an easement. See id.

Judge Williams wrongly cabined the Federal Circuit's interpretation of the Manwell deed by saying "it was the actual exercise of the railroad's eminent domain power that resulted in a limitation of the interests conveyed in the [Manwell] warranty deed.… According to the court, the 'act of survey and location [was] the operative determination, and not the particular form of transfer.'" 93 Fed. Cl. at 623 (quoting Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1587) (emphasis in original). But on this point Judge Williams was wrong. The Manwell deed was not the result of the railroad's actual exercise of eminent domain.

Judge Williams wrote, "In contrast, there is no evidence in this record that Seaboard acquired the corridor [land for the relocated depot, wye track and two miles of railway line south of Curry Creek] by exercising eminent domain derived under Florida law." Rogers II, 93 Fed. Cl. at 623. This cannot be said of the northern segment of the Legacy Trail corridor that is at issue here. The 1926 Condemnation Decree demonstrates that the conveyances these owners signed were under threat of condemnation. Furthermore, unlike the conveyances Judge Williams considered in Rogers, where the railroad entered the land and built the railway line after the grantor executed the deed, here the railroad had already entered the owner's land and surveyed the railway line before the grantors executed the deed. If the owner would not execute a voluntary conveyance granting the railroad a right-of-way across the owner's land, the railroad would condemn the owner's land. The conveyances granted the railroad were made in the shadow of, and under threat of, Seaboard's ability to take the owner's land by eminent domain if the owner did not agree to grant Seaboard a right-of-way across the owner's land. Indeed, Seaboard had already entered the owner's land and surveyed the location of a railway line across the owner's land. See Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1537 ("the proceeding retained its eminent domain flavor, and the railroad acquired only that which it needed, an easement for its roadway").

The Florida Supreme Court, in Dade County v. Brigham, 47 So.2d 602, 604-05 (Fla. 1950), reiterated the words of the New York Court of Appeals, in In re Water Supply in City of New York, to explain a property owner's predicament when faced with threatened condemnation:

> [The owner] does not want to sell. The property is taken from him through the exertion of the high powers of the state, and the spirit of the Constitution clearly required that he shall not be thus compelled to part with what belongs to him > without the payment, not alone of the abstract value of the property, but of all the necessary expenses incurred in fixing that value. This would seem to be dictated by sound morals, as well as by the spirit of the Constitution....

> 109 N.Y.S. 652, 654-55 (N.Y. Ct. App. 1908).

Seaboard and its affiliated railroads not only could acquire an easement across the strip of land by eminent domain, but the railroad did in fact exercise its power of eminent domain to acquire a right-of-way easement across the owner's land. See, infra, pp. 56-59.

(ii) A right-of-way is an easement.

Judge Williams wrote, "[i]n Florida, the term right-of-way, as it relates to railroads, can refer to either a "right of crossing' – an easement – or to a 'strip of land which a railroad takes, upon which to construct its railroad.' An estate in fee." Rogers II, 93 Fed. Cl. at 623. The only authority Judge Williams cites for this proposition is an annotation in a legal encyclopedia, 43 Fla. Jur. 2d Railroads §32.

On this point Judge Williams is incorrect, and her conclusion is contrary to both the law as declared by Florida's Supreme Court and the United States Supreme Court reference to a "right-of-way" is reference to an easement. Occasionally Atlas shrugs and Homer nods. Judge Williams did not have the benefit of the Florida Supreme Court's decision in Rogers IV, nor the Supreme Court's decisions in Brandt and Cowpasture, nor the Federal Circuit's decisions in Behrens and Castillo. Should Judge Williams have had the benefit of this subsequent authority, it is doubtful she would have concluded the term "right-of-way" refers to an interest other than an easement.

Cowpasture is a Trails Act case the Supreme Court decided in 2020. In Cowpasture the Supreme Court held that the "Trails Act refers to the granted interests as 'rights-of-way,' both when describing agreements with the Federal Government and with private and state property owners. When applied to a private or state property owner, 'right-of-way' would carry its ordinary meaning of a limited right to enjoy another's land." 140 S.Ct. at 1845.[51] After Rogers IV, in Mills, Judge Bruggink examined Florida law and concluded that, under Florida law, the conveyance of a "right-of-way" is best interpreted as granting an easement. 147 Fed. Cl. at 347 (citing, inter alia, Rogers IV, 184 So.3d at 1095).

(iii) In a conveyance, "excepting" the land used for a railway means the fee estate in the land is subject to the right-of-way easement.

A point that frequently arises in the interpretation of documents conveying interests in land bordered by or encumbered with easements and rights-of-way is the phrase "excepting the right-of-way." The government argues that a conveyance containing such "excepting" or "less" language does not convey title to the land under the adjoining right-of-way was withheld from the conveyance. This is an incorrect interpretation of the phrases "excepting" or "less" the referenced adjoining right-of-way. In Castillo, the Federal Circuit explained that, under Florida law, this "excepting" or "less" language "served simply to exclude the recorded easement in favor of the [easement beneficiary] from the title interest being conveyed and to prevent the recorded easement from constituting a breach of the covenants of warranty in each deed." 952 F.3d at 1322 (quoting Dean, 528 So.2d at 434), supra, pp. 34-35. This is true regardless of whether the conveyances refers to the right-of-way as an "easement" or as a "strip of land." Id.

In her analysis of the deeds in the Bird Bay chain of title, Judge Williams did not properly apply this principle. Judge Williams concluded the land used for the railway line adjoining the Bird Bay property was not included in the conveyances describing the relocated railway line and depot because "the right-of-way was not excepted as an easement, but as land withheld from the conveyance." Rogers II, 93 Fed. Cl. 618. Judge Williams stated, "the instruments conveying the lands abutting the [railroad] corridor have treated the corridor as a separate parcel of land, separate and distinct from the larger parcels bordering the corridor." Id. Judge Horn made this same error in Castillo and the Federal Circuit overturned Judge Horn's decision.

(iv) The amount of consideration determines the nature of the property interest conveyed even if it does not determine the validity of the deed.

The Florida Supreme Court wrote, "[t]he law of Florida, however, is that the amount of consideration stated in a deed provides no basis for questioning the validity of the deed." Rogers IV, 184 So.3d at 1097. The Florida Supreme Court cited two lower appellate court decisions as authority for this proposition, Kingsland v. Godbold, 456 So.2d 501 (Fla. Ct. App. 1984), and Venice East, Inc. v. Manno, 186 So.2d 71 (Fla. Ct. App. 1966). These cases confirm this distinction between the amount of compensation as informing the nature of the interest versus the validity of the conveyance in that they held, simply, that a deed is valid regardless of the amount of consideration provided.[52] The Florida Supreme Court in Rogers IV continued, "[t]he language of the deed determines the nature of the estate conveyed." 184 So.3d at 1097 (emphasis added). Thus, the amount of consideration is relevant to determine the nature of the interest conveyed, not the validity of the conveyance.

3. The Florida Supreme Court's opinion in Rogers IV cannot be read as a new rule by which to define established property interests.

The Florida Supreme Court's 2015 opinion in Rogers IV cannot be read as announcing a new rule by which to determine these owners' interest in a strip of land used for a railway line for a hundred years. Redefining Florida law governing the interpretation of established property interests. To read Rogers IV as announcing a new rule by which to determine the property interests [52] In Kingsland, the court held, "[e]ven nominal consideration [of $10] will support a deed." 456 So.2d at 502. In Venice East, the court held that "the law will not consider the adequacy or the sufficiency of the consideration given for a conveyance or transaction." 186 So.2d at 75.

established in these early 1900s documents violates the Supreme Court's injunction against courts redefining the rules governing established understandings of property. See Preseault I, 494 U.S. at 23 ("[A] sovereign, 'by ipse dixit, may not transform private property into public property without compensation.... This is the very kind of thing that the Taking Clause of the Fifth Amendment was meant to prevent'") (O'Connor, J., concurring).[53] See also Leo Sheep, 440 U.S. at 687-88 ("this Court has traditionally recognized the special need for certainty and predictability where land titles are concerned, and we are unwilling to upset settled expectations to accommodate some ill-defined power to construct public thoroughfares without compensation").

This term, in Tyler v. Hennepin County, 143 S.Ct. at 1375, the Supreme Court explained, the "Takings Clause does not itself define property. For that, the Court draws on 'existing rules or understandings' about property rights." 143 S.Ct. at 1375 (internal quotation and citation omitted). The Court further explained that "[s]tate law is one important source [of property rights, b]ut state law cannot be the only source." Id. If this were so, "a State could sidestep the Takings Clause by disavowing traditional property interests in assets it wishes to appropriate." Id. (internal quotation and citation omitted). Thus, the Court continued, "we also look to traditional property law principles, plus historical practice and this Court's precedents."[54] Similarly, in Stop the Beach Renourishment, the Supreme Court wrote,

> In sum, the Takings Clause bars the State from taking private property without paying for it, no matter which branch is the instrument of the taking. To be sure, the manner of state action may matter: Condemnation by eminent domain, for example, is always a taking, while a legislative, executive, or judicial restriction of property use may or may not be, depending in its nature and extent. But the particular state actor is irrelevant. If a legislature or a court declares that what was Meisner*, 51 F.4th 185, 190 (6th Cir. 2022) (Kethledge, J., for the Court) ("[T]he Takings Clause would be a dead letter if a state could simply exclude from its definition of property any interest that the state wished to take.").

> once an established right of private property no longer exists, it has taken that property, no less than if the State had physically appropriated it or destroyed its value by regulation. "[A] State, by ipse dixit, may not transform private property into public property without compensation."

560 U.S. at 715 (emphasis in original).

The interest in the property the landowners granted the railroad memorialized by the documents recorded in the early 1900s with the intent and understanding defined by the established law of the day define the nature and extent of the railroad's interest. Furthermore, Florida's statutory law that voluntary grants convey only an easement and Florida's common law defining property interests were the juridical furniture that defined the grantors' understanding and intention. In other words, what interest the railroad acquired in these present-day landowners' property is defined by that interest these present-day owners' predecessors-in-title intended to grant the railroad. Nothing more. Nothing less. The railroad's interest in the strip of land and the original landowner's (and his or her successor-in-title's) interest were sealed in amber when those respective property interests were established. The federal government may not redefine these established property interests without paying the owner "just compensation."

To read the Florida Supreme Court's 2015 Rogers IV opinion as announcing a new rule redefining the rules governing established property interests in land subject to railroad rights-of-way would, itself, be a violation of the Fifth Amendment. "States effect a taking if they recharacterize as public property what was previously private property." Stop the Beach, 560 U.S. at 714.

III. The text of each document, the context and purpose for which the documents were created, and the "traditional property law principles" and "historical practice" at the time the documents were created demonstrate the railroad was only granted an easement to use the strip of land for a railway line.

The recorded documents (or in some cases the lack of any recorded document) defining the railroad's interest in the strip of land across these present-day owners' land fall into four groups. The first group of properties are those in which Seaboard acquired its interest by reason of a 1926 condemnation decree. (the Condemnation Properties). See Exhibit 1 for a table of the ten Condemnation Properties.

A second group of plaintiffs own land in which the present-day owners' predecessor-in-title signed a voluntary grant in the early 1900s granting or memorializing the railroad's right to operate a railway line across a strip of land. This second group of properties (the Voluntary Grant Properties) are divided into nine subgroups based upon the original document. For all these properties, the owners and the government agree upon the original "source deed" applicable to the owner's property. See Exhibit 1; Exhibit 6 (ICC valuation maps of railway corridor).[55] A total of 199 properties are in this second group (not including the two Pendley document properties).

A third group of five plaintiffs own land for which there is no recorded instrument granting the railroad any interest in the land. These are the Prescriptive Easement Properties. For three of these owners (where the val maps indicate the railroad gained its right-of-way "By Possession") the owners and the government agree that Seaboard (or Seaboard's affiliated-railroad companies) built and operated a railway line across a strip of these owners' land without the benefit of any recorded document. For the other two owners (the Pendley document properties), the railroad also gained its easement by prescription because the Pendley document is a nullity.[56]

[55] Under the Valuation Act of 1913, Congress required the ICC to create a Valuation Bureau to assess, survey, and catalog the country's railroad property in order to regulate fair shipping rates. The Bureau mapped all railroad rights-of-way and determined the source conveyances, if they existed, by which each railroad gained its interest in its right-of-way. These valuation maps are maintained by the National Archives. See Exhibit 6 (ICC valuation maps of railway corridor).

[56] The property described in the unexecuted, unrecorded Pendley document (Exhibit 3) is included in the Prescriptive Easement group because, as explained below, the Pendley document is not a valid conveyance lawfully executed by Oscar Pendley or his wife.

For a fourth group of thirteen properties (the Platted Properties), the government admits the plaintiffs own their land on the date of taking, but the government contends that the plaintiffs' properties are separated from and do not underlie the railroad corridor. The government argues these plaintiffs' deeds to their properties describe that property by reference to a recorded plat the government contends did not extend to the centerline of the adjoining railroad right-of-way, and accordingly, an "intervening parcel" owned by a third party (either the county or the neighborhood association) cuts-off their claims. See Exhibit 19 (government's interrogatory answers).

A. Group One: The 1926 Condemnation Decree granted only a right-of-way easement for a railway line across ten owners' properties.

Bonnie Tankersley and Mattie Davis owned the fee estate in land across which the Tampa Southern Railroad wanted to build a railway line. Tankersley and Davis did not want to sell their land to the Tampa Southern Railroad and did not want a railway line across their land. So, in September 1925, Tampa Southern Railroad Company sued Bonnie Tankersley and Mattie Davis in federal district court. See Exhibit 7 (condemnation decree and pleadings). The federal district court's jurisdiction was invoked under diversity of citizenship. See id. The railroad filed a condemnation lawsuit for the purpose of acquiring a "right-of-way" to extend the railroad's railway line from Tampa to Sarasota. In its petition, the railroad stated, under oath, that it was condemning the property "for use as a right of way" and further that "the taking of the said property by your petitioner [Tampa Southern Railroad] is for the purpose of its use as a right of way for the construction of its railroad...." Id. at US_0000046-47 (emphasis added). The pleadings further characterize the property as "DESCRIPTION FOR CONDEMNATION OF RIGHT OF WAY FOR TAMPA SOUTHERN RAILROAD THRU LANDS OF J.C. BISHOP."[57]

[57] Id. at US_0000037 (capitalization in original; emphasis added). J.C. Bishop was Tankersley and Davis' predecessor-in-title. See Exhibit 7, p. US_0000046 (petition's property description refers to J.C. Bishop as conveying an interest to the railroad by deed dated June 2, 1923).

Federal District Court Judge Lake Jones ordered Tankersley and Davis to "show cause why said property should not be taken for the uses and purposes set forth in the petition filed by the Tampa Southern Railroad Company…and more particularly, why the said lands should not be taken for use as a right-of-way by the Tampa Southern Railroad Company...." Exhibit 7, p. US_0000031 (emphasis added). Tankersley and Davis opposed the railroad's condemnation, arguing the Tampa Southern Railroad's charter, which allowed Tampa Southern to extend its railway line from Tampa to Sarasota, did not authorize the railroad to condemn property south of downtown Sarasota. See id. at US_0000039. The railroad had not paid the compensation for the taking of its right-of-way, and accordingly, the landowners pointed out that the railroad "should not have or maintain its said [condemnation action against these defendants for the reason and because of the fact that the Tampa Southern Railroad Company," as a "private corporation[, is] entitled only to maintain an action of condemnation upon and when it has filed a petition praying the compensation of the property sought to be taken...." Id. Tankersley and Davis further stated that because the railroad is a "corporation duly incorporated under the laws of the State of Florida as a public carrier for the operation of a commercial railroad and is authorized to construct, maintain and operate a railroad," the railroad is not authorized to condemn property for the "construction or for its right-of-way...beyon[d] its terminus in the City of Sarasota." Exhibit 7, pp. US_0000039-40 (emphasis added). The owners argued that a right-of-way across their land (which was south of Sarasota) was "not essential for the construction of its line of railroad from the City of Tampa to the City of Sarasota but [is] beyond the destiny and termination of its purposes and authority and its power to extend and proceed with its said road and with condemnation for its construction or for its right-of-way." Id. at US_0000040 (emphasis added).

Judge Jones ruled in favor of the railroad, granting the railroad's petition and condemning what the railroad asked the court to condemn – a "right-of-way." See Exhibit 7, pp. US_0000013-

15. The court's Judgment provided, "It is considered by the Court that the property therein described by appropriated by the Tampa Southern Railroad Company for use as a right of way for said Railroad Company...." Id. at US_0000015 (emphasis added). The compensation Tampa Southern Railway must pay Tankersley and Davis was tried to a jury. See id. at US_0000015. The jury determined Tampa Southern Railway must pay Tankersley and Davis $61,500 for the 8.98-acre "piece, parcel or strip of land" taken for the right-of-way and pay $5,000 in attorney fees. Id. at US_000014-15.[58]

By condemning a "right of way," the district court's 1926 Condemnation Decree granted the railroad only an easement. In Rogers II, 93 Fed. Cl. at 623, this Court recognized that "Florida adheres to the unremarkable principle of eminent domain law that the condemnor only acquires interests sufficient to satisfy the purpose of the taking."[59] See also Ely, RAILROADS & AMERICAN LAW, pp. 197-98 ("Prominent experts took the position that, absent statutory provisions expressly authorizing the taking of a fee simple, railroads should receive just an easement in land condemned for their use.") (citing, inter alia, Simon F. Baldwin, AMERICAN RAILROAD LAW (1904), p. 77; Isaac F. Redfield, 1 THE LAW OF RAILROADS 270 (6th ed. 1888)).

[58] The jury's verdict in this condemnation lawsuit provides a measure of what comparable property in Sarasota County taken for a railway line was worth in the 1920s. The jury determined the fair market value of the 8.98-acre right-of-way was $61,500 in March 1926, which is $6,849 per acre. By contrast, seven of the other instruments at issue in this case provide consideration of less than $1 per acre, and another deed provides $26.32 per acre (Clough deed).

Instrument	Area	Consideration	Price per acre
Honoré	Over 47.6 acres	$1	Less than $0.02

[59] Citing Robertson v. Brooksville & Inverness Ry., 129 So. 582, 584 (Fla. 1930), and Trailer Ranch, 500 So.2d at 507.

In Seaboard All-Florida Ry. v. Leavitt, 141 So. 886, 890 (Fla. 1932), the Supreme Court of Florida explained that "the tremendous power of eminent domain, while frequently necessary to be resorted to for the promotion of needful public purposes, is a power which can be abused unless properly safeguarded." As one of the "safeguards," Florida adopted the principle that, "[a] condemning authority exercising the power of eminent domain is not permitted to acquire a greater quantity of property or interest therein than is necessary to serve the public purpose for which the property is acquired." Trailer Ranch, 500 So.2d at 507. See also Canal Authority v. Miller, 243 So.2d 131, 133 (Fla. 1970) ("It is equally well recognized, however, that an acquiring authority will not be permitted to take a greater quantity of property, or greater interest or estate therein, than is necessary to serve the particular public use for which the property is being acquired.") (citing Wilton v. St. John's County, 123 So. 527 (Fla. 1929), and Staplin v. Canal Authority, 208 So.2d 853 (Fla. Ct. App. 1968)). In Robertson v. Brookville & Inverness Ry., the Florida Supreme Court further explained, "[o]f course, a railroad corporation may not exercise the power of eminent domain to take any land or material it may desire for the economical conduct of its business…. It can only condemn land in its public capacity for purposes essential to the proper exercise of its franchise." 129 So. 582, 584-85 (Fla. 1930) (emphasis added).

Thus, under the explicit terms of the condemnation decree, under Florida statute and under common law, the Tampa Southern Railroad Company obtained only an easement allowing the railroad to operate a railway line across the strip of land. Tankersley and Davis and their present-day successors-in-title retained ownership of the fee estate. And, when the strip of land was no longer used for the operation of a railway line, the easement terminated, and the present-day owners held unencumbered title to the land. See Brandt, 572 U.S. at 105.

B. Group Two – The Voluntary Conveyance Properties.

Florida and other states adopted statutes providing that interest a railroad obtained in land taken by condemnation or by a voluntary grant was only an easement for a railway line not title to the fee estate in the strip of land.

> Every railroad…shall be empowered to cause such examinations and surveys for the proposed railroad…and for such purposes…to enter upon the lands…of any person for that purpose. [And] to take and hold such voluntary grants of real estate…as shall be made to it to aid in the construction, maintenance and accommodation of its road…but the real estate received by voluntary grant shall be held and used for purposes of such grant only.
> Fla. Stat. §4354 (1920) (emphasis added).

All of the conveyances between the original landowners and the railroad in Group Two state the railroad paid the landowner only nominal consideration of, in most cases, "One Dollar." The most the railroad paid any owner was the "Fifty Dollars" paid to the Cloughs. This is nominal when considered in light of the $61,500 the jury determined the property condemned for a right-of-way across the Tankersley and Davis land was worth in 1926.

In Behrens the Federal Circuit explained, > a conveyance of property to a railroad for nominal consideration is treated as a voluntary grant, and one dollar is nominal consideration. Each grant in this case was to a railroad and for one dollar. These conveyances were thus voluntary grants. Voluntary grants to railroads are easements even if they are formally worded as grants of fee simple estates.[60]

In addition to the nominal consideration the railroad paid the owner, these voluntary grants also share the common fact that they describe the property as a "strip of land" conveyed to a railroad corporation for a railway line that already existed or was already surveyed across the land.

[60] 59 F.4th at 1345 (emphasis added; citations omitted) (citing Brown, 152 S.W.2d at 653-54, and Boyles, 981 S.W.2d at 648).

1. Adrian Honoré granted Seaboard only an easement for the limited purpose of operating a railway line.

Adrian Honoré was Bertha Palmer's brother. He, along with Bertha and her sons, bought much of the land in (what is now) Sarasota County in the early 1900s.[61] To establish a railway line from Sarasota to Venice, Adrian Honoré gave Seaboard Air Line Railway a right-of-way across a strip of his land. See Exhibit 8 (Honoré conveyance). Forty-seven plaintiffs in this litigation are Adrian Honoré's successors-in-title. See Exhibit 9 (joint title stipulations, filed as ECF No. 44); Exhibit 1. See also Statement of Facts ¶15. The Honoré deed included an explicit reversionary clause, providing,

> This conveyance is made upon the express condition, however that if the Seaboard Air Line Railway shall not construct upon said land and commence the operation thereon with one year of the date hereof of a line of railroad, or, if at any time thereafter the said Seaboard Air Line Railway shall abandon said land for railroad purposes then the above described pieces and parcels of land shall ipso facto revert to and again become the property of the undersigned, his heirs, administrators and assigns.[62]

In Rogers I, 90 Fed. Cl. at 430-31, Judge Williams held, > [T]he words of the Honoré conveyance indicate that the parties intended to create an easement. The Honoré conveyance transferred a "right of way for railroad purposes over and across the...described parcels of land." Further, like the deed in Irv Enterprises, the Honoré conveyance placed an explicit limitation on the use of the property interest conveyed and contained an unequivocal stipulation that title would revert to the grantor upon discontinuance of the use of the parcel for its intended railroad purpose. See Irv Enters. [v. Atl. Island Civic Ass'n, 90 So.2d 607, 609 (Fla. 1956)].

Judge Williams continued and held,

> Like the easements before the Preseault II Court, the Honoré conveyance is an express easement, and the extent of the easement created by that conveyance is fixed. [Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1542-43] (quoting 5 RESTATEMENT OF PROPERTY

[61] Sarasota County was created in 1921. Prior to 1921 the property that is now in Sarasota County was in Manatee County.

> §482 (1944)). In Florida, the scope of an easement does not increase with time, and accordingly, the "burden of a right of way upon the servient estate must not be increased to any greater extent than reasonably necessary and contemplated at the time of initial acquisition." Crutchfield v. F.A. Sebring Realty Co., 69 So.2d 328, 330 (Fla. 1954).
> Here, as in Preseault II, the use of the right-of-way as a public trail while preserving the right-of-way for future railroad activity was not something contemplated by the original parties to the Honoré conveyance back in 1910. As the Federal Circuit explained, when examining a right-of-way acquired in 1899, the usage of a right-of-way as a recreational trail is "clearly different" from the usage of the same parcel of land as a railroad corridor. Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1542. As such, the terms of the Honoré easement were limited to use for railroad purposes and did not contemplate use for public trails. Thus, the governmental action converting the railroad right-of-way to a public trail right-of-way imposed a new easement on the landowners and effected a Fifth Amendment taking of their property. Id. at 1550.[63]

The government now stipulates the Honoré deed conveyed only an easement for railroad purposes to Seaboard. See Exhibit 9 (joint title stipulations). See also Barron v. United States, No. 21-2181, Gov. Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment, ECF No. 32, p. 10 ("the parties agree

[63] 90 Fed. Cl. at 432 (emphasis and paragraph break added). In Rogers the government argued Adrian Honoré gave the railroad title to the fee estate in the strip of land despite the "explicit limitation" and "unequivocal stipulation" in the deed's reversionary clause. Id. at 430. Given the plain text of the Honoré conveyance, the government's argument was absurd, and Judge Williams held the deed granted an easement. See id. at 432. But after the government lost its liability argument, the government then irresponsibly argued that because the Honoré deed's reversionary clause used the word "abandon," the landowners must prove "as a matter of Florida law that the railroad 'abandoned' the corridor prior to the NITU" – and failing to do so, the property must be valued as being burdened with a railroad easement in the before-condition. Rogers v. United States, 101 Fed. Cl. 287, 293 (2011). Thus, after losing its "fee-simple" argument, the government attempted to greatly reduce, if not eliminate, the landowners' compensation by twisting the Honoré deed's reversionary clause against itself. Judge Williams exposed the government's new argument as "misunderstand[ing] the operation of the Trails Act and misconstrue[ing] the conveyance...." Id. at 293. Judge Williams further explained that "[i]mposing a requirement that Plaintiffs prove a common law abandonment would also thwart a proper construction of the Honoré deed...." Id. at 294 (emphasis added). Furthermore, the government's reading of the deed would "imbu[e] the term 'abandon'" in the deed "with a technical legalistic meaning instead of looking at the deed as a whole to discover the intent of the grantor, [which reading] would contravene fundamental principles of interpreting conveyances." Id. at 295. Judge Williams concluded by stating the government's argument was a "misguided attempt to inject the issue of common law abandonment into this litigation," which issue was nothing more than "a red herring." Id. at 296.

[the Honoré conveyance] granted only an easement"). Therefore, the Court should grant the landowners' motion for summary judgment regarding the Honoré deed.

2. Bertha Palmer's estate granted Seaboard only an easement to operate a railway line across a strip of the estate's land.

One landowner's predecessor-in-title was Bertha Palmer's estate. See Statement of Facts ¶16; Exhibit 1. Bertha Palmer died May 5, 1918. Her two sons, Potter Palmer, II, and Honoré Palmer were trustees of her estate. On June 15, 1923, Bertha Palmer's sons executed a document with Tampa Southern Railroad Company "for the sole purpose of transferring to [the railroad] a right of way for railroad purposes...." Exhibit 10 (Palmer conveyance), p. 4. Like the document from Bertha Palmer's brother, Adrian Honoré, the 1923 deed from Bertha's estate included an explicit reversionary clause providing:

> This deed is given for the sole purpose of transferring to [Tampa Southern Railroad Company] a right of way for railroad purposes, and upon the express provision that [Tampa Southern Railroad Company] shall construct its railroad from Bradentown to Sarasota, Florida over said right of way within twenty-four months from the date of this instrument. Should [Tampa Southern Railroad Company] not construct said railroad as herein set out, or should any part of the said land not be used for railroad purposes, or should same at any time be abandoned for railroad purposes, then the land so abandoned for such purposes, or not used for such purposes shall revert to Honoré Palmer and Potter Palmer, Trustees under the will of Bertha Honoré Palmer, deceased, their heirs, successors or assigns.[64]

Judge Williams found the almost identical language in the document from Adrian Honoré to be an "explicit limitation on the use of the property interest conveyed and contained an unequivocal stipulation" upon which the right-of-way easement was conditioned. Rogers I, 90 Fed. Cl. at 430. Accordingly, the railroad also gained only an easement by means of the Palmer conveyance.

[64] Id. (emphasis added).

3. Oscar and Alice Burton memorialized the easement Seaboard was granted for a railway line across the strip of land upon which Seaboard had already built its railway line.

The railroad gained its right-of-way over and across forty-three landowners' properties by the Burton instrument. See Statement of Facts ¶17; Exhibit 1. According to the 1910 census, Dr. Oscar Burton was then forty years old, and his wife Alice Burton (née Alice H. Hibbs) was thirty-two years old. See Exhibit 11 (copy of 1910 census record). Dr. Burton was born in Vermont and his wife Alice was born in Minnesota. Dr. Burton and Alice Burton had four children. In addition to his medical practice, Dr. Burton invested in Sarasota real estate. In 1914, in partnership with Arthur B. Edwards (the first Mayor of Sarasota), the Burtons platted and developed the land in what is now the Avondale Heights community of Sarasota. See Exhibit 12 (photographs and text of Avondale Heights historic marker).[65]

On February 20, 1909, Oscar and Alice Burton "contracted in writing to sell to Frank S. Colton and Neville Bailey" certain tracts of land in what was then Manatee County, later Sarasota County. Colton and Bailey "transferred to [Sarasota Land Company] all their right and interest in said contract." Exhibit 13 (Burton conveyance), p. 1. "[The Burtons], with the consent of [Sarasota Land Company]…have agreed to convey unto [Seaboard Air Line Railway]" a "strip of land one hundred (100) feet wide being fifty (50) feet on each side of the center line of the Seaboard Air Line Railway as located across the lands owned by the [Burtons]." Id. (emphasis added).

The land described in the document is a 100-feet wide, 2,700-feet long strip of land. Seaboard paid the Burtons "Five Dollars ($5.00)" for a right-of-way across this land. The Burton's granted the right-of-way to Seaboard and "its successors and assigns, to its or their own proper use [65] Photographs of this marker are available on the "Sarasota County Centennial" website at: https://www.sarasotacountycentennial.com/category/history. The marker is located at 1100 S. Tamiami Trail in Sarasota.

[and] benefit." Exhibit 13, p. 1. The Burtons signed the document in Freeborn County, Minnesota, on October 5, 1910, and George Brown and W.W. Stevenson signed the document on October 18, 1910 in New York City on behalf of Sarasota Land Company. See id. at 2. The dower provision states that Alice Burton "executed such deed of conveyance for such purposes…." Id. (emphasis added). The corporate attestation by Brown and Stevenson states they signed on behalf of Sarasota Land Company "for the uses and purposes therein expressed." Id. (emphasis added).

Like the Clough and Sarasota Land Company conveyances, the Burton document describes the railroad's interest in the strip of land by reference to the already existing railway line.[66] The interest in the strip of land is described "as located across the lands owned by the Burtons." Exhibit 13, p. 1 (emphasis added). And the land is described as fifty feet on either side "of said center line." Id.

Thus, considering the entirety of the document Oscar and Alice Burton signed, the governing principles of Florida law, and the context in which (and the purpose for which) this document was created, the interest Seaboard obtained in the strip of land was an easement to operate a railway line across the strip of land, not the fee simple estate in the strip of land. When Seaboard's successor-railroads no longer operated a railway across the strip of land, the easement

[66] Lawyers for the railroad corporation almost certainly prepared the form deed Dr. Burton and his wife signed. See RESTATEMENT OF THE LAW (THIRD): SERVITUDES §2.2, pp. 69-70 ("The fact that the grantee is a railroad may also tend to indicate that the instrument should be construed to convey an easement only."). See also Heath v. First Nat. Bank in Milton, 213 So.2d 883, 888 (Fla. Ct. App. 1968) ("Any errors or ambiguities in the language of the instrument must be construed more strongly against the drafter of such instrument."); Consolidated Development & Engineering Corp. v. Ortega Co., 158 So. 94, 96 (Fla. 1933) ("any ambiguity in language, or doubt as to the meaning of such release clauses, must be construed most strongly against the [party who drafted the document]") (emphasis added); Security First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Jarchin, 479 So.2d 767, 770 (Fla. Ct. App. 1985) ("Insofar as the language may be deemed ambiguous, Florida law is clear that any ambiguity in contractual language will be interpreted against the party who selected that language.…"); Beres v. United States, 97 Fed. Cl. 757, 801 (2011) (under Washington law, where the railroad drafted the deeds, "any ambiguity in the language of the deeds should be construed against the railroad").

terminated, and the present-day successors-in-title to Oscar and Alice Burton held unencumbered title to the land. See Brandt, 572 U.S. at 105; Preseault I, 494 U.S. at 8.

4. Sarasota Land Company granted Seaboard an easement for a railway line.

Sixty-one landowners' predecessor-in-title was the Sarasota Land Company. See Statement of Facts ¶18; Exhibit 1. In July 1910 the Delaware corporation, Sarasota Land Company's president, George C. Brown, and the company's secretary W.W. Stevenson, signed an instrument that, for "Five Dollars," memorialized Seaboard's interest in "a strip of land one hundred (100) feet wide, being fifty (50) feet on each side of the center line of the Seaboard Air Line Railway as located across lands owned by the [Sarasota Land Company]...." Exhibit 14 (Sarasota Land Co. conveyance) (emphasis added). The 100-foot-wide strip of land was 6,239 feet-long and contained 14.32 acres. See id. Five dollars for 14.32 acres of land is a voluntary conveyance under Florida's statute §2241. See, supra, p. 39. See also Behrens, 59 F.4th at 1345. This is 35 cents per-acre, which, even in 1910 dollars, is essentially nothing. See, supra, note 58. This document memorialized the location of the railroad's already existing right-of-way easement across a strip of land the railway had already entered, surveyed and across which the railroad would build a railway line. The document further acknowledges that the strip of land underlying the railway line was "across land owned" by Sarasota Land Company.

Like the Burton conveyance, the language of the Sarasota Land Company document demonstrates the parties understood and intended the interest granted Seaboard to be an easement to operate a railway line "across" a strip of land "owned by" Sarasota Land Co. Exhibit 14. Furthermore, the fact that the conveyance's language is identical to the Clough deed indicates Seaboard or its agents likely drafted the deed or used a pre-printed form. Thus, any ambiguity is construed in favor of these landowners. See, supra, note 66.

5. Allen and Flora Clough signed an instrument acknowledging Seaboard had an easement across their land for operation of a railway line.

The railroad gained its right-of-way over and across three landowners' properties by means of the Clough instrument. See Statement of Facts ¶19; Exhibit 1. On July 27, 1910, Allen and Flora signed a document describing "a strip of land one hundred (100) feet wide, being fifty (50) feet on each side of the center line of the Seaboard Air Line Railway as located across lands owned by the [Cloughs]." See Exhibit 15, p. 1 (Clough conveyance) (emphasis added). The strip of land described in this document was 1.9 acres, and the document states Seaboard paid the Cloughs nominal consideration of $50.00. See id. Like the documents Sarasota Land Company and the Burtons signed, the Clough document described the strip of land as encumbered by Seaboard's existing railway line. See id. The Clough document is a voluntary grant that recognizes the railroad's existing right-of-way to operate a railway line over and "across the lands" that Allen and Flora Clough "owned" in 1910. Id. This document did not give Seaboard title to the fee estate in the Cloughs' land.

6. The Florida Mortgage & Investment Company documents recognize Seaboard had only a "right-of-way" easement for railroad purposes.

The Florida Mortgage & Investment Company executed two form documents in 1905 describing strips of land in what was then Manatee County, Florida. See Exhibit 16 (conveyance recorded at Book 10, Page 532) and Exhibit 16-A (conveyance recorded at Book 10, Page 536).[67] The other party to these instruments was the Florida West Shore Railway, a subsidiary of Seaboard. These two documents contain identical wording with regard to everything except the specific dimensions of the strips of land. The Florida Mortgage & Investment Company was the predecessor-in-title to thirty-one landowners. See Statement of Facts ¶20; Exhibit 1.

[67] See also Exhibit 16-B (transcript of conveyance recorded at Book 10, Page 532) and Exhibit 16-C (transcript of conveyance recorded at Book 10, Page 536).

The Florida Mortgage & Investment Company instrument describes itself as an "indenture" and states Florida West Shore Railway paid "One Dollar" for the purpose of obtaining a "right-of-way." Exhibit 16, p. 1. The indenture describes the interest obtained by the railroad as "part of the right-of-way to be obtained from Col. J. H. Gillespie." Id. (emphasis added). The right-of-way across Florida Mortgage & Investment Company's land is described as a strip of land "more clearly shown in red on the attached blue-print dated February 13th, 1905, and made in the office of the Assistant Engineer, Savannah, Ga., which blue-print is hereby made a part of this description." Exhibit 16-A, p. 2. See also Exhibit 16-A, p. 5 (blueprint of railroad titled, "RIGHT OF WAY ON PART OF FRUITVILLE EXTENSION"). This reference to the blueprints in the "office of the Assistant Engineer in Savannah, Georgia" tells us two additional important points. First, the railroad had already surveyed and located the railroad right-of-way. Second, the railroad drafted the instruments because the Florida Mortgage Co. did not have an "Assistant Engineer" with an "office in Savannah," but the railroad did. The only rational conclusion from the text of these documents is that these documents were prepared by the railroad in order that the Florida Mortgage & Investment Co. could acknowledge a railroad "right of way" easement the Florida West Shore Railway had already established across the land owned by Florida Mortgage and Investment.

The conveyance of a "right-of-way" to a railroad means that the railroad was granted only an easement for railroad purposes. As we explain above at pp. 20-22, the grant of a "right-of-way" is an easement for railroad purposes. See Mills, 147 Fed. Cl. at 347. In Mills, Judge Bruggink explained that under Florida law, "[i]t is incorrect...to assume that a grant to a railroad of a right-of-way in Florida is necessarily a fee. We think the better view is that a 'right-of-way' for railroad purposes should be construed according to its natural meaning, i.e. '[t]he right to pass through property owned by another.'"[68]

7. Moses Neihardt signed a document acknowledging the railroad's existing easement for a railway line across his land.

In January 1905, Moses Neihardt, then a widower living in rural Missouri, signed a document describing a fifty-foot by fifty-foot tract of land across which he granted an interest in to the Florida West Shore Railways Company. See Exhibit 17 (Neihardt conveyance), p. 1. Moses Neihardt was the predecessor-in-title to seven landowners. See Statement of Facts ¶21; Exhibit 1. The railroad paid Moses Neihardt "One Dollar" for the fifty-foot strip of land. As such, this is a voluntary conveyance under Florida's §2241. See, supra, p. 39. See also Behrens, 59 F.4th at 1345. According to the government's valuation maps, Moses Neihardt's tract of land was used by the railroad for a railway line. Why would Moses Neihardt, a Missouri widower, intend to convey the railroad title to the fee estate in a fifty-foot-by-fifty-foot strip of land, and why would the railroad desire any greater interest than an easement across this strip of Moses Neihardt's land? Once abandoned as part of a railroad corridor, the fifty-by-fifty-foot strip of land would have no commercial value unless it could be developed with the adjoining land. The Neihardt instrument must be interpreted according to the intent of the parties, which was to convey an easement for operation of a railway. See RESTATEMENT (THIRD): SERVITUDES §2.2, Comment g; Rogers IV, 184 So.3d at 1095 (citing Reid, 112 So. at 852, and Saltzman, 306 So.2d at 539.

See also Bruce & Ely, THE LAW OF EASEMENTS & LICENSES IN LAND §1:22 ("Generally, courts conclude that a conveyance of a "right-of-way" creates only an easement whether the grantee is an individual, a railroad, or another entity."); Rogers I, 90 Fed. Cl. at 428-433; Nerbonne, 692 So.2d at 928 n.1; Brandt, 572 U.S. at 93; Cowpasture, 140 S.Ct. at 1845.

8. The document with Oscar Pendley's name gave the railroad no interest in the strip of land described in the document.

The government alleges that the source of the railroad's interest in the land upon which the railroad built its railway line across two plaintiffs' properties was the unexecuted "Pendley document." See Exhibit 4; Exhibit 1; Statement of Facts ¶26. The Pendley document is a preprinted form with blanks. "Tampa Southern Railroad Company" is typed into the blank for the "party of the second part" and the name "Oscar H. Pendley" is handwritten into the blank for "party of the first part" but without completing the blanks for Oscar Pendley's state and county of residence. See Exhibit 4, p. 1. The signature blocks are blank, as are the notary blocks. See id. at 1-2. A typewritten description of a strip of land is included on the preprinted form. See id. at 1. Three blueprints of the railway line are attached to the form. See id. at 3, 5-6. A typewritten "declaration" by W.G. Forlong, a "Real Estate Agent of the Tampa Southern Railroad Company" made August 28, 1923, in New Hanover County, North Carolina, is attached. See id. at 4. Mr. Forlong states on "August 26, 1923, I received a deed executed by O.H. Pendley, dated July 17th, 1923, conveying to Tampa Southern Railroad Company," a strip of land...." Id. Mr. Forlong also states, "[t]his deed was not signed by the wife of O.H. Pendley, and was sent out for her signature but has never been returned." Id.

The preprinted form has a handwritten name "Oscar H. Pendley," but there is no signature by any party to the document – not even Oscar H. Pendley's – and the document has no executed notarization attesting to the authenticity of the document. See Exhibit 4, pp. 1-2, 4. The typewritten description of the property to be conveyed states "a strip of land fifty (50) feet wide, being twenty-five (25) feet on each side of the center line of the Tampa Southern Railroad, as located and to be constructed thru…and adjoining the right of way of the S.A.L. Railway." Id. at 1. Three partial copies of blueprints prepared by railroad are attached to the document. Id. at 3, 5-6. The blueprints note the right-of-way across and adjoining a tract of land owned by "Oscar H. Pendley & Wife." Id. at 5-6.

The Pendley document provides a perfect illustration of how railroad rights-of-way were established or memorialized in the early 1900s. Railroad companies' surveyors would locate a route for the railway line. See, supra, pp. 15-16. See also Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1536-37.[69] The railroad's agent would then identify the landowner and then obtain the landowner's signature on a preprinted document providing nominal consideration to acknowledge the railroad's right-of-way.

Here, the unsigned Pendley document granted the railroad nothing. The document is a nullity as a conveyance of any interest in real property. The Pendley document does not satisfy or conform to any of Florida's requirement for conveyance of an interest in real property. See Fla. Stat. §689.01 ("No estate or interest...shall be created, made, granted, transferred, or released in any manner other than by instrument in writing, signed in the presence of two subscribing witnesses by the party creating, making, granting, conveying, transferring, or releasing such estate, interest, or term...."). Thus, the greatest interest Florida Southern Railroad could have acquired in the property Oscar Pendley and his wife owned was a prescriptive easement to operate a railway line across the strip of land, and that is only if the government or railroad could first satisfy the elements required to obtain a prescriptive easement. See discussion, infra, pp. 73-75.

[69] The Federal Circuit in Preseault II explained, "Here, the evidence is that the Railroad had obtained a survey and location of its right-of-way, after which the Manwell deed was executed confirming and memorializing the Railroad's action. On balance it would seem that, consistent with the view expressed in Hill, [where there was some dispute over whether a conveying document had been properly executed and recorded,] the proceeding retained its eminent domain flavor, and the railroad acquired only that which it needed, an easement for its roadway." 100 F.3d at 1536-37.

9. The Charles Ringling Company granted Tampa Southern Railroad Company an easement across a strip of land for a railway line.

The railroad obtained its right-of-way over and across the properties of six landowners by means of the Ringling indenture. See Statement of Facts ¶22; Exhibit 1. On May 18, 1925 John Ringling and Louis Lancaster (as secretary of the Charles Ringling Company) signed an "Indenture" dated April 30, 1925 on behalf of Charles Ringling Company as the grantor. Exhibit 18 (Ringling conveyance). The Tampa Southern Railroad Company paid nominal consideration of "One Dollar." Id. at 1. The property is described as "a strip of land fifty (50) feet wide through Lots Numbered" 14, 16, 10, 12 of "Lord's Second Addition to Sarasota Florida" and "also a Strip of land fifty (50) feet wide, being twenty-five feet on each side of the centerline of the Tampa Southern Railroad, as located and to be constructed…." Id. at 1-2. The land "through" the lots of Lord's Second addition also describe the interest granted the railroad as "a strip of land fifty (50) feet wide, being twenty-five (25) feet on each side of the centerline of the Tampa Southern Railroad, as located and to be constructed."[70] Id. The description of the strip of land through the platted lots in Lord's Second Addition describe the interest as "said strip of land being bounded on the south by north line of the right of way of the Seaboard Air Line Railway." Id.

The Ringling conveyance contains the following features: (a) it is for consideration of "One Dollar;" (b) it was for a "strip of land;" (c) the interest was described as "through" platted lots; (d) the strip of land was described by reference to the existing…right of way of the Seaboard Air Line Railway; and (e) the interest conveyed to Tampa Southern Railroad Company was described as twenty-five feet "or each side of the centerline of the Tampa Southern Railroad, as located and to be constructed through" the land described. Exhibit 18, pp. 1-2 (emphasis added). These features mean this is a voluntary grant of a railroad right-of-way for nominal consideration. The boilerplate language "fee simple forever" does not change this conclusion. See Preseault II, 100 F.3d at 1535-36. The word "fee" means the interest is inheritable and must be read in light of the entire document. A servitude, such as an easement, can be inheritable. See, supra, pp. 28-29. Thus, even though the Ringling instrument "appears to be the standard form used to convey a fee simple title," as the Federal Circuit held in Preseault II, "despite the apparent terms of the deed indicating a transfer in fee, the legal effect was to convey only an easement." 100 F.3d at 1535-36

The valuation maps demonstrate that, when the Ringling Company granted this right-of-way in 1925, Seaboard had already built its railway line between Sarasota and Venice. Tampa Southern Railroad was extending a railway line from Tampa into downtown Sarasota, and Tampa Southern's new railway line paralleled a segment of the existing Seaboard Air Line Railway's line. See Exhibit 6 (valuation maps). The Charles Ringling Company did not intend to give Tampa Southern title to the fee estate in the strip of land "through" the Charles Ringling Company's land.

C. Group Three – The Prescriptive Easement Properties.

For a group of properties, the government agrees there is no recorded document granting the railroad any interest in the land across which the railway line was built. See Exhibit 5 (joint title stipulations regarding source conveyances); Exhibit 1; Statement of Facts ¶¶24-25. The government's valuation maps describe the railroad's interest in these segments of the railway line as acquired "By Possession." See Exhibit 6 (valuation maps). See also Exhibit 5 (joint title stipulations) (stating "By Possession"); Exhibit 21 (Appendix A to government interrogatory answers) (stating "No recorded conveyance").[71]

[71] For the reasons explained above, the railroad only gained an easement by prescription over and across the properties relevant to the Pendley document. See, supra, pp. 70-71.

When a railroad enters an owner's land, builds a railway line across a strip of the owner's land and runs trains across this strip of land for one hundred years without ever obtaining any recorded deed from the owner, the railroad has only an easement to use the owner's land for railroad purposes. See Rogers I, 90 Fed. Cl. at 429 ("Under Florida Law, and easement by prescription is created by methods substantially similar to those by which title is obtained through adverse possession.") (citing Downing v. Bird, 100 So.2d 57, 64 (Fla. 1958)). As this Court held with regard to this same rail-trail corridor, "the rights obtained from a prescriptive easement are akin to an ordinary easement, in which title to the land remains with the owner of the servient estate." Id. (citing Downing, 100 So.2d at 64). In Mills, Judge Bruggink held,

> The best distillation of the law in Florida is that, when a railroad company takes land under color of its statutory charter but without an agreement and without a condemnation proceeding, it does not divest the landowners of title and that the railroad merely obtains perpetual use of the land for the purposes of its incorporation, i.e. an easement for railroad purposes.[72]

These prescriptive easement properties do not present a close question. The government admits there is no recorded document granting the railroad any interest in the strip of land. See Exhibit 5 (joint title stipulations regarding source conveyances). The government's own valuation maps state the railroad's interest was only acquired "by possession." As such, the railroad's interest in the strip of land across which the railroad operated a railway line was an easement limited to the use of the strip of land for operation of a railway line. As Professors Bruce and Ely explain in THE LAW OF EASEMENTS & LICENSES IN LAND §5.1,

> [e]asements may arise by adverse use of another's land. Prescriptive easements are based on the notion that if one uses the property of another for a certain period without permission and the owner fails to prevent such use, the prolonged usage should be treated as conclusive evidence that the use is by right. The process of > obtaining an easement by prescription is closely analogous to that of securing title to land by adverse possession.

Furthermore, the government (as the party in the position of the railroad claiming an interest in property by longstanding use of the land) has the burden of establishing the existence of a prescriptive easement. See id. §5.3 ("courts carefully scrutinize claims of easement by prescription because the recognition of such a servitude is inconsistent with the right of the servient owner to fully utilize the servient land"). Bruce and Ely continue, "it follows that the burden of providing the existence of a prescriptive easement rests on the claimant, and doubt will be resolved in favor of the landowner." Id. See also Downing, 100 So.2d at 65. To establish its claim to this property the government must establish the railroad's use of the property was (a) adverse to the interest of the owner of the land, (b) open and notorious, (c) continuous and uninterrupted. See generally Bruce & Ely §5:3.

The government has not established these elements. And, even if the government can establish these elements, the greatest interest the government could claim is a prescriptive easement not title to the fee estate in the strip of land.

D. Group Four – the Platted Properties.

Thirteen plaintiffs acquired title to their property by deeds describing the property they acquired by reference to a platted lot adjoining the railway line. These lots are in four platted subdivisions, including Oakwood Manor, Hagar Park, the Oaks at Woodland Park, and Old Forest Lakes. According to the Valuation Maps and stipulations, the railroad's interest in the strip of land across these owners' properties was established by the Pendley document (which, as discussed above, is a prescriptive easement), the Palmer conveyance (executed in 1923), the Florida Mortgage Co. conveyance (executed in 1905), and the Sarasota Land Company conveyance (executed in 1910). See Exhibit 1; Statement of Facts ¶¶28-30. The government contends these thirteen landowners' properties are not adjacent to the abandoned railroad corridor because a third party owns an intervening strip of land. See Exhibit 19 (Appendix B to government interrogatory answers).

The land was platted as platted subdivisions with individual lots identified by lot numbers referencing the recorded plat rather than individual metes and bounds descriptions of the boundaries of each lot. See discussion of centerline presumption and the Federal Circuit's decision in Castillo, supra, pp. 31-35. Robert Cunningham and other experts of the Stantec civil engineering firm mapped these owners properties and overlaid the government's valuation maps onto aerial photographs and Global Information System (GIS) property boundaries obtained from the Sarasota County records. Exhibit 20 (Stantec decl.) ¶¶2-5 and exhibits A-1, A-2, and A-3.

Some of these owner's property parallels the former railroad right-of-way easement and a drainage easement. Under Florida's centerline presumption, the owners of these platted lots own the land extending to the centerline of the former railroad right-of-way. See Castillo, 952 F.3d at 1321-22. The subsequent creation of a right-of-way easement for a drainage canal did not overcome the centerline presumption.

These thirteen plaintiffs whose title references recorded plats owned the fee estate in the land extending to the centerline of the former railroad right-of-way. When the federal government encumbered these owners' land with a new easement for a rail-trail corridor the government took these owners' private property for which the government must pay the owners just compensation.

1. Oakwood Manor, Hagar Park, and the Drainage Easement.

The railroad's interest in the land platted and developed as Oakwood Manor was, at most, a prescriptive easement. See, supra, pp. 24-25, 70-71 (discussion of the Pendley document). A portion of this land is also encumbered for a drainage canal. The drainage canal easement was established after and paralleled the railway line. Sarasota County and its predecessor drainage district never held title to the fee estate in the land encumbered with the drainage easement.

The development of land in Florida required canals to drain swamp land for cultivation and development and to provide stormwater drainage to ameliorate flooding from hurricanes.[73] Section 1099 of Florida's statutes created drainage districts to establish drainage canals.

The Sarasota-Fruitville Drainage District was formed in 1921. See Exhibit 20 ¶6 and attached Exhibit B. In July 1961, the Sarasota Fruitville Drainage District was dissolved with all of the drainage district's assets including, "all right-of-ways described in [the] Chancery order … All right-of-ways and easements of said district gained by prescription, [and] all other right-of-ways and easements…and all interests in land" to Sarasota County by a quit-claim indenture recorded at Book 315, Page 378. Exhibit 20 (Exhibit B), p. 1 (emphasis added).

As successor to the Sarasota-Fruitville Drainage District, Sarasota County holds a fifty-two-foot-wide stormwater drainage easement running across the Oakwood Manor owners' land. See Exhibit 20 (Stantec decl.) ¶6 and accompanying Exhibit B.[74] These records are attached as an exhibit to the Stantec declaration. These records describe the drainage easement as "a strip of land 75 feet wide" with "metes and bounds descriptions...taken and condemned for rights of way for [the Fruitville] drainage district...." Exhibit B, p. 9 ¶470, p. 8 (emphasis added). As depicted in Exhibit C to the Stantec declaration, the Sarasota County drainage easement runs adjacent to and across the plaintiffs' properties and the Legacy Trail right-of-way. See also Statement of Facts ¶29(a). The fifty-two-foot-wide drainage easement also encumbers the Booth property, which was part of the Hager Park subdivision. See Exhibit 20 (Stantec decl.) ¶7 and accompanying Exhibit [73] See Erin Preston, History of St. John's River Water Management District, available at: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Xl6Re90qamQ.

[74] The documents relating to Sarasota County's drainage easement are recorded at Book 315, Pages 378 and 379 (including a court condemnation order in In the Matter of Petition for Formation of Sarasota Fruitville Drainage District, dated October 2, 1923), and Chancery Book 3, Pages 206 and 240 (Paragraph 470), and the original Oakwood Manor Estates deed in Official Records Book 2076, Page 655. See Statement of Facts ¶29(a).

D and Exhibit E; Statement of Facts ¶29(b).[75] The Oakwood Park and Hagar Park predecessor-in-title was O.H. Pendley. See Exhibit 20 ¶5. The railroad obtained its railway right-of-way easement across the Hagar Park subdivision land by means of the Florida Mortgage Company conveyance recorded in Book 10, Page 532. Id.

Thus, Sarasota County does not own the fee estate in the strip of land used for the drainage canal easement. The existence of a parallel easement for a drainage canal now held by Sarasota County does not change the boundaries of the land to which the owners of the platted lots hold title. The plaintiffs own the fee estate in the land extending to the center of the former railroad right-of-way.

2. The Oaks at Woodland Park.

Six plaintiffs own land described in the Oaks at Woodland Park plat adjoining the former railroad right-of-way. See Exhibit 20 ¶5. These plaintiffs' predecessor-in-title was the Florida Mortgage Company. See id.; Statement of Facts ¶29(c). Under Florida's centerline presumption, these plaintiffs hold title to the fee estate in the land extending to the centerline of the former railroad right-of-way. See Castillo, 952 F.3d at 1321-22. The government disputes these owners' title to the land under the railway line, contending a maintenance easement "intervenes" between the Oaks at Woodland Park owners' property and the rail-trail corridor. See Exhibit 19. But, as the Cunningham declaration and Stantec mapping demonstrate, the owners hold title to the center of the former railroad line. See Exhibit 20 (Stantec decl.) ¶8 and accompanying Exhibit F and Exhibit G.[76] Accordingly, the plaintiffs own the fee estate in the land extending to the center of the former railroad right-of-way.

3. The Old Forest Lakes subdivision.

Sarasota Land Company was the predecessor in title to the present-day owners of property in the Old Forest Lakes subdivision. Exhibit 20 ¶5. In 1910 Sarasota Land Company memorialized the easement the railroad was granted for a railway line across a strip of land Sarasota Land Company owned. See Exhibit 14 and discussion, supra, p. 66. The Old Forest Lakes subdivision was platted in 1912. See Exhibit 20 ¶9 and accompanying Exhibit H (plat). At the time, the land was owned by Bertha Palmer and Adrian Honoré, who platted and developed the tract of land and sold the lots to individual owners describing the property by reference to the recorded plat. The Forest Lakes Association deed described a five-foot-wide drainage easement dedicated to the Old Forest Lakes Association. See Exhibit 20 ¶9 and accompanying Exhibit H, [76] On March 26, 1996, Woodlands Park Development, Ltd., and Atlantic Assets, Inc., granted an easement to Florida Power & Light Company recorded at Book 2865, Pages 2458-66, for construction, operation, maintenance of electric equipment, adjacent to the railroad right-of-way. Exhibit 20 ¶8(a). Then, on July 29, 1996, Atlantic Assets, Inc., quitclaimed its interest in the property described in a quit claim deed recorded at Book 2894, Pages 2041-43, to Woodlands Park Development, Ltd. Id. On September 28, 1998, Woodlands Park Development, Ltd., quitclaimed its interest in the property described in Official Record Instrument No. 1998130381 to Oaks at Woodland Park Homeowners Association, Inc. Id. Woodland Park Homeowners Association is the plaintiff and present-day owner of this land. Id. The property described in the Quit Claim Deed between Woodlands Park Development, Ltd., and the Oaks at Woodland Park Homeowners Association, Inc., includes "Tract A" of the property described in the Oaks at Woodland Park Phase I plat, executed on June 8, 1996, recorded in Plat Book 38, Page 11D. Id. The Oaks at Woodland Park Phase I plat depicts Tract A as abutting the Seminole Gulf Railway right-of-way (now the Legacy Trail right-of-way). Id. ¶8(b). The plat also depicts Plaintiff Kimberly Dawn Hewitt's property as lot 39 (the Hewitt property is also depicted as lot 39 on Page 11C of Plat Book 38, with the Dodson property depicted as lot 41 and the Puccio property depicted as lot 42 on Page 11C of Plat Book 38). Id. The Oaks at Woodland Park Phase I plat also depicts the "utility and access easement" corresponding to the easement granted to Florida Power & Light Company as abutting the Seminole Gulf railroad right-of-way and running over and across Tract A (Oaks at Woodland Park Homeowner's Assoc. property) and lot 39 (Hewitt property). Id.

pp. 2, 4 and Exhibit I. Three plaintiffs own the land under the drainage easement and the rail-trail. See id. ¶9 ("As depicted on Exhibit I, the five-foot-wide drainage easement runs adjacent to and abuts the plaintiffs' properties and the right-of-way."); Statement of Facts ¶¶29(d), 30.

CONCLUSION

This Court should grant these 214 landowners' motion for summary judgment. For the condemnation and prescriptive easement claims, the government can advance no credible argument that the interest the railroad obtained was anything more than an easement. And for the voluntary conveyances, the interest these owners' predecessors-in-title granted or gave the railroad in the strip of land across which the railroad operated a railway line for a century was an easement, not title to the fee simple estate. All agree that the grantors' intent governs the interpretation of these documents, and the documents manifest the grantors' intent to grant the railroad an easement for railroad purposes across their land. And the grantors' intent to convey an easement is clear when the Court, as it must, considers the circumstances and context in which these documents were created in the early 1900s, the nominal consideration the railroad paid, and the undisputed understanding that the purpose for which these documents were created was to establish a railway.

Under the Federal Circuit's guidance in Preseault II, which has recently been further expounded upon by the Federal Circuit in Behrens and Castillo, and with relevant Florida law recently determined by this Court in Mills (analyzing this Court's decisions and the Florida Supreme Court's decision in Rogers), this Court must conclude that all of the instruments at issue conveyed only an easement to the railroad for operation of a railway. Accordingly, this Court should grant summary judgment in favor of these plaintiffs and find the government obligated to pay these owners "just compensation" and proceed to determine the specific compensation the government must pay each plaintiff.

Counsel for the Landowners

IN THE UNITED STATES COURT OF FEDERAL CLAIMS

4023 SAWYER ROAD I, LLC, et al., Plaintiffs, v. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Defendant.	No. 19-757L Judge Edward H. Meyers

PLAINTIFF-LANDOWNERS' STATEMENT OF UNCONTROVERTED MATERIAL FACTS

This statement of uncontroverted material facts is submitted in support of the plaintiff-landowners' motion for partial summary judgment under Rule 56(c).

1. The rights-of-way Sarasota landowners granted the Seaboard Air Line Railway and its affiliated railroad companies in the early 1900s were for the purpose of building and operating a railway line between Sarasota and Venice. The Seaboard Air Line Railway was an amalgamation of more than ten southeastern railroad companies created in the late 1880s.[1]

2. The Seaboard Air Line Railway was chartered and incorporated on April 10, 1900, by the Virginia Legislature Act of January 12, 1900.[2] At the turn of the last century much of the

[1] The development of Sarasota County, Florida, and the creation of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad (Seaboard) railway line from Sarasota to Venice informs the context and purpose for which the these plaintiff-landowners' predecessors-in-title granted Seaboard the right-of-way that is at issue in this litigation. For a fuller discussion of the relevant history of Sarasota and the details of the establishment and demise of the Sarasota-to-Venice railway line and creation of the Legacy Trail, see the Fourth Amended Complaint, ECF No. 34 ¶¶4-9. See also the plaintiffs' memorandum in support of their motion for summary judgment in the related Legacy Trail cases, Barron v. United States, No. 21-2181L, ECF No. 31-2, pp. 5-13. See also this Court's decisions in Rogers v. United States, 90 Fed. Cl. 418 (2009), McCann Holdings, Ltd. v. United States, 111 Fed. Cl. 608 (2013), and Childers v. United States, 116 Fed. Cl. 486 (2013).

[2] A 1946 district court receivership reorganized the railroad as the Seaboard Air Line Railroad. In 1967 Seaboard merged with its rival, Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, to become the Seaboard Coast Line Railroad. The Chesapeake & Ohio acquired Seaboard, and these railway lines became part land in what is now Sarasota County, Florida, was owned by Bertha Palmer and members of her family, including her son Adrian Honoré.

3. Under the Valuation Act of 1913, Congress required the Interstate Commerce Commission to create a Valuation Bureau to assess, survey, and catalog the country's railroad property in order to regulate fair shipping rates. The Valuation Bureau inventoried railroad company property and mapped all railroads' interest in their rights-of-way. These valuation maps are maintained by the National Archives. Using the federal government's valuation maps and recorded land title documents in Manatee and Sarasota counties, the landowners have determined the original conveyances by which Seaboard and its related railroad companies acquired an interest in the land used for the railway line between Sarasota and Venice. Stantec, plaintiffs' mapping expert, overlayed the valuation maps on Sarasota County's GIS aerial photos and property information for each plaintiff that is publicly available. See Exhibit 20 (Stantec decl.) ¶5 (parcels were digitally overlayed "on top of the valuation maps of the railroad corridor in order to determine the specific instrument" that "applied to each portion of the railroad corridor by which the railroad obtained its interest in the property then-owned by each of the plaintiffs' predecessors-in-title").

4. By forcing these plaintiff-landowners to file this inverse condemnation action – instead of affirmatively condemning their land – the government forced upon these landowners the burden and expense of retrieving these government-created maps, researching more than a century of title documents, and mapping their properties to bring their claims for compensation. Using the valuation maps and publicly-recorded conveyances and other documents in the Sarasota and Manatee County court records and land title records, the government and plaintiffs agreed upon the original conveyance that relates to each present-day landowner's property. See Exhibit 1 (listing of plaintiff-landowners by conveyance instrument or lack thereof); Exhibit 5 (joint title stipulations); Exhibit 9 (joint title stipulations regarding most Honoré properties); Exhibit 21 (government discovery responses).

of what is today the CSX System. See CORPORATE HISTORY OF THE SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY COMPANY (1922), p. 83. 1. Seaboard was the first railroad to extend a railway line from Tampa to Sarasota. Karl Grismer, THE STORY OF SARASOTA (1946), pp. 133-135. The first Seaboard train reached downtown Sarasota in March 1903. Id. The Atlantic Coast Line (through its subsidiary the Tampa Southern Railroad) began extending its railway line from Tampa toward Sarasota in 1917, eventually reaching downtown Sarasota in 1923. The Tampa Southern Railroad was chartered in January 1917 and became a subsidiary of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad. The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad and Seaboard merged in 1957.

5. Over a half-million people used the Legacy Trail from March 2021 to March 2022 with nearly 100,000 people using the trail in March 2022.[3]

I. The invocation of the Trails Act[4] and the taking of these plaintiff-landowners' properties for the extension of the Sarasota Legacy Trail federal recreational rail-trail.

6. After acquiring its railroad right-of-way, Seaboard Air Line Railway went through a series of bankruptcies, and Seaboard's assets (including its interest in the Sarasota-to-Venice railroad right-of-way) wound up in the hands of successor-railroads. The right-of-way at issue in this case was transferred to CSX Transportation, Inc. (CSX), which leased the railway line to Seminole Gulf Railway, L.P. (Seminole Gulf).

7. In March 2019, Seminole Gulf requested that the Surface Transportation Board (the Board) authorize the railroad to abandon a 7.68-mile-long segment of rail line known as the Venice Branch Line between milepost SW 890.29, on the north side of Ashton Road, and milepost SW 884.70, and between milepost AZA 930.30 and milepost AZA 928.21, on the north side of State Highway 780 (Fruitville Road) within the City of Sarasota, Sarasota County, Florida. See Exhibit

2 to Plaintiffs' Fourth Amended Complaint, ECF No. 34-1 (Abandonment Petition, (STB Docket No. AB-400 (Sub-No. 7X)) March 8, 2019). Seminole Gulf affirmed that "No local or overhead traffic has moved over the Subject Line since prior to 2007, a period of more than ten years." Id. at 3.

8. Seminole Gulf told the Board the railroad wanted to abandon the railway line between Sarasota and Venice. Sarasota County asked the Board to invoke section 8(d) of the Trails Act and authorize Seminole Gulf and CSX to transfer the otherwise-abandoned right-of-way to Sarasota County to create the northern extension of the Legacy Trail. See Exhibit 3 to Plaintiffs' Fourth Amended Complaint, ECF No. 34-1 (letter of April 22, 2019, requesting interim trail use (STB Docket No. AB 400 (Sub No. 7X)).[5]

9. On May 14, 2019, the Board issued an order (called a Notice of Interim Trail Use or Abandonment (NITU)) invoking section 8(d) of the Trails Act. See Exhibit 4 to Plaintiffs' Fourth Amended Complaint, ECF No. 34-1. The Board's order invoked the Trails Act providing that "[u]se of the right-of-way for trail purposes is subject to possible future reconstruction and reactivation of the right-of-way for rail service." Id. at 2. This same Seaboard railroad right-of-way was also the subject of the Trails Act litigation in the Rogers series of cases. See Rogers v. United States, 90 Fed. Cl. 418 (2009); Childers v. United States, 116 Fed. Cl. 486, 497 (2014); McCann Holdings v. United States, 111 Fed. Cl. 608, 614 (2013). The Rogers litigation involved an April 2004 NITU invoking section 8(d) for a twelve-and-one-half-mile-long segment of the Sarasota-to-Venice Legacy Trail corridor. The portion of the Sarasota-to-Venice right-of-way that was the subject of the Rogers litigation is south of the segment of abandoned railway right-of-way that is the subject of this litigation.

10. Seaboard gained its railroad right-of-way across the landowners' property by prescription, by condemnation, and through several written conveyance instruments. These instruments included the right-of-way easement conveyed by Adrian Honoré.

II. The 214 plaintiff-landowners' in this case (organized for convenience into four groups) owned their property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor on the date of taking, May 14, 2019.

A. Group 1 Condemnation Decree Properties – for ten landowners, the railroad gained its right-of-way by condemnation.

11. For a group of ten plaintiff-landowners listed in Exhibit 1 (Group 1 Condemnation Decree Properties), the railroad condemned its railroad right-of-way over and across their land as set forth in the Judgment of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida in Tampa Southern Railroad v. Tankersley, et al. See Exhibit 5 (Joint Title Stipulations, filed as ECF No. 70, stipulating that the U.S. District Court Condemnation Judgment is the relevant source conveyance for these ten plaintiffs). See also Exhibit 7 (U.S. District Court Condemnation Judgment).

12. Dominic and Kathleen Booth acquired their property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2007. See Fourth Amended Compl., ECF No. 34 ¶¶45-48 and accompanying exhibits 29-30.[6] Sean and Darcy Byrnes acquired their property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2004. Id. ¶¶65-68 and accompanying exhibits 41-42. John Ermilio acquired his property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2005. See Fourth Amended Compl., ECF No. 34 ¶¶141-144 and accompanying exhibits 79-80. Steven and Linda Fineout acquired their property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2001. Id. ¶¶153-156 and accompanying Patricia, Richard, and Jonathan Varley acquired their property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2014. Id. ¶¶537-540 and accompanying exhibits 278-279.

13. All of the Group 1 plaintiffs owned their property abutting and underlying the railroad right-of-way on May 14, 2019, the date the Board issued the NITU. See Exhibits 5 through 452 to Plaintiffs' Fourth Amended Complaint, ECF No. 34. See also Exhibit 6 (valuation maps); Exhibit 5 (joint title stipulations).

B. Group 2 Voluntary Conveyance Properties – for 199 landowners, the railroad gained its right-of-way by means of a written conveyance instrument, including the Honoré, Burton, Clough, Florida Mortgage, Neihardt, Palmer, Ringling, and Sarasota Land Company instruments.

14. For a group of 199 plaintiff-landowners listed in Exhibit 1 (Group 2 Voluntary Conveyance Properties), the railroad gained its right-of-way over and across their land by means of a written conveyance. See Exhibit 1; Exhibit 5 (Joint Title Stipulations); Exhibit 9 (Joint Title Stipulations regarding Honoré properties).[7]

[7] Exhibit 9 lists all but three of the Honoré properties. Exhibit 5 lists, inter alia, the remaining three Honoré properties (the claims of John and Joanne Cisler, Kassandra Luebke and Elaine Luebke, and Thomas Pearson).

15. For forty-seven landowners, listed on Exhibit 1, the railroad gained its right-of-way over and across their land by means of the written instrument between Adrian Honoré and the Seaboard Air Line Railway, executed in 1910, recorded in Book 23, Page 127, of the county records (Honoré conveyance). See Exhibit 8 (Honoré conveyance); Exhibit 8-A (transcript of Honoré conveyance); Exhibit 5 (joint title stipulations); Exhibit 9 (joint title stipulations regarding Honoré landowners). 4023 Sawyer Road 1, LLC, acquired its property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2013. property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2018. Id. ¶¶349-352 and accompanying exhibits 183-184. Michael McLaughlin acquired his property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2014. Id. ¶¶365-368 and accompanying exhibits 193-194.

22. For six landowners listed on Exhibit 1, the railroad gained its right-of-way over and across their land by means of the written instrument between the Charles Ringling Company and the Tampa Southern Railroad Company, executed in 1925, recorded in Book 42, Page 569, of the county records. See Exhibit 18 (Ringling conveyance); Exhibit 5 (joint title stipulations). See also Exhibit 18-A (transcription of Ringling conveyance). Denise Doucette Erb and Lorraine E. Colby acquired their property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2010. Fourth Amended Compl., ECF No. 34 ¶¶137-140 and accompanying exhibits 77-78. Joyce P. and Julie Gwen Hardie acquired their property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2011. Id. ¶¶821-824 and accompanying exhibits 420-421. Rood acquired her property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2009. Id. ¶¶461-464 and accompanying exhibits 241-242. Sarasota County Agricultural Fair Association acquired its property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor prior to 2019. Id. ¶¶481-484 and accompanying exhibit 251.

23. All of the Group 2 plaintiffs owned their property abutting and underlying the railroad right-of-way on May 14, 2019, the date the Board issued the NITU. See Exhibits 5 through 452 to Plaintiffs' Fourth Amended Complaint, ECF No. 34. See also Exhibit 6 (valuation maps); Exhibit 5 (joint title stipulations); Exhibit 9 (joint title stipulations).

C. Group 3 Prescriptive Easement Properties – for five landowners, the railroad gained its right-of-way by prescription.

24. The railroad acquired a prescriptive easement for railroad purposes over and across the property of the five plaintiffs' land, listed in Exhibit 1 as the Group 3 Prescriptive Easement Properties.

25. For three landowners listed in Exhibit 1, the I.C.C. valuation maps and schedules state that the railroad gained its right-of-way "By Possession." See Exhibit 6 (valuation maps and schedules), pp. US-ICC 000004, US-ICC 000005, and US-ICC 000006; Exhibit 5 (joint title stipulations), p. 1 ("For three claims (the claims of John W. and Christine L. Fordham, Bradley Blum Morrison, and Shirley P. Ramsey), the parties stipulate that I.C.C. Valuation Schedules state the railroad obtained the relevant parcel "By Possession" from these plaintiffs' predecessors-in-interest."). These include the claims of John and Christine Fordham, Bradley Blum Morrison, and Shirley P. Ramsey. See Exhibit 5 (joint title stipulations). John and Christine Fordham acquired their property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2004. See Fourth Amended Compl., ECF No. 34 ¶¶161-64 and accompanying exhibits 89 and 90.[14] Bradley Blum Morrison acquired his property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2017. Id. ¶¶33-36 and accompanying exhibits 23 and 24. Shirley P. Ramsey acquired her property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 1992. Id. ¶¶441-44 and accompanying exhibits 231 and 232.

26. For two landowners listed in Exhibit 1, an unexecuted document naming Oscar H. Pendley purports to convey a right-of-way to the railroad over and across their land. The document is unsigned, unexecuted, and does not appear to have been recorded. See Exhibit 4 (Pendley document); Exhibit 5 (joint title stipulations). See also Exhibit 4-A (transcription of Pendley document). Because the Pendley document is a nullity, the railroad gained its right-of-way over these two owners' properties by prescription. Jeffrey Doyle, as Trustee of the Wallace David Brunton Testamentary Trust, and Mabel Brunton acquired their property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2013. See Fourth Amended Compl., ECF No. 34 ¶¶61-64 and accompanying exhibits 39-40. Gary L. Cathey and Victoria L. Goodrich acquired their property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2013. Id. ¶¶81-84 and accompanying exhibits 49-50.

See Exhibits 5 through 452 to Plaintiffs' Fourth Amended Complaint, ECF No. 34. See also Exhibit 6 (valuation maps); Exhibit 5 (joint title stipulations).

D. Group 4 Platted Properties – for thirteen landowners, the government wrongly disputes their land is adjacent to the Legacy Trail rail-trail corridor.

28. For thirteen landowners listed in Exhibit 1 as the Platted Properties, the government wrongly disputes that their properties are located adjacent to and underlying the abandoned railway corridor. These thirteen landowners are included in Groups 2 and 3 above and are set forth separately in Group 4 because the government disputes title issues for these owners. See Exhibit 19 (Appendix B to government interrogatory answers). Thomas and Michelle M. Dodson acquired their property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2002. See Fourth Amended Compl., ECF No. 34 ¶¶117-120 and accompanying exhibits 67-68.[15] Mark T. and Angela D. Flaherty acquired their property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2001. Id. ¶¶157-160 and accompanying exhibits 87-88. Timothy G. And Alisa J. Sanborn acquired his property adjacent to the abandoned railway corridor in 2008. Id. ¶¶477-480 and accompanying exhibits 249-250.

29. These thirteen plaintiffs owned their properties in the Oakwood Manor, Hagar Park, Oaks at Woodland Park, and Old Forest Lakes subdivisions on the date of taking, May 14, 2019, and their properties are adjacent to and underlie the Legacy Trail rail-trail corridor.

a. Three plaintiffs own land in the Oakwood Manor subdivision, including: 1) Jeffrey Doyle, as Trustee of the Wallace David Brunton Trust, and Mabel Brunton; 2) Gary Cathey and Victoria Goodrich; and 3) Thomas and Joyce Fay. These plaintiffs' properties are adjacent to and underlie the Legacy Trail rail-trail corridor. Exhibit 20 (Stantec decl.) ¶¶5-6.

NOTICE OF EXEMPT ABANDONMENT

Seminole Gulf Railway, L.P. ("SGLR" or "Applicant") is seeking an exemption under the Board's class exemption procedures at 49 C.F.R. Part 1152, Subpart F to abandon a segment of its line of railroad known as the Venice Branch extending between Milepost SW 890.29 on the north side of Ashton Road and Milepost SW 884.70, and between Milepost AZA 930.30 and Milepost AZA 928.21 on the north side of State Highway 780 (Fruitville Road), partly lying within the City of Sarasota, Sarasota County, Florida, with the remainder lying within unincorporated Sarasota County (the "Subject Line"), a total distance of 7.68 miles. A map of the Subject Line is attached hereto as Exhibit A.

There has been no local or overhead freight service on the Subject Line for over two years (in fact, although the tracks have been used in connection with car storage, there has been no local or overhead freight service for over 10 years). Because this is a stub-ended line there is no overhead traffic to be rerouted over other lines.

The Subject Line connects to two additional segments of the Venice Branch for which

SGLR received abandonment authority in 2004 and in 2017[1], and which were subsequently transferred for interim trail use and rail banking to Sarasota County for development into the "Legacy Trail."

This Notice of Exempt Abandonment is being filed pursuant to the requirements of 49 C.F.R. §1152.50 regarding exemptions for out of service rail lines. In accordance with such requirements, Applicant hereby states as follows:

1. The exact name of Applicant is Seminole Gulf Railway, L.P.

2. Applicant is a common carrier by railroad subject to 49 U.S.C. Subtitle IV, chapter 105. Applicant originally acquired the Subject Line in 1987. See Seminole Gulf Railway, L.P. – Exemption to Acquire and Operate – CSX Transportation, Inc., ICC Finance Docket No. 31155 (served November 30, 1987).[2]

3. The relief sought is an exemption for the abandonment of the Subject Line, being the line of railroad known as the Venice Branch extending between Milepost SW 890.29 on the north side of Ashton Road and Milepost SW 884.70, and between Milepost AZA 930.30 and Milepost AZA 928.21 on the north side of State Highway 780 (Fruitville Road), partly lying within the City of Sarasota, Sarasota County, Florida, with the remainder lying within unincorporated Sarasota County (the "Subject Line"), a total distance of 7.68 miles.

[1] See Seminole Gulf Railway, L.P. – Abandonment Exemption – In Sarasota County, FL, STB Docket No. AB 400 (Sub-No. 3X)(served April 2, 2004); and Seminole Gulf Railway, L.P. – Abandonment Exemption – In Sarasota County, FL, STB Docket No. AB 400 (Sub-No. 6X) (served November 6, 2017).

[2] SGLR acquired the full common carrier obligation when it purchased the rail lines, including the Subject Line. CSX Transportation, Inc. ("CSXT") as the owner of the underlying land is not subject to the Board's jurisdiction. See Seminole Gulf Railway, Inc. – Abandonment Exemption – In Lee County, FL, ICC Docket No. AB-400 (Sub-No. 2X)(served December 22, 1994), slip op. at 5.

4. A detailed map of the Subject Line is attached hereto as Exhibit A. More detailed topographic maps were included in the Environmental and Historic Report filed with the Board on February 15, 2019.

5. The representative of Applicant to whom correspondence should be sent is:

Eric M. Hocky, Esquire
Clark Hill, PLC
One Commerce Square
2005 Market Street, Suite 1000
Philadelphia, PA 19103
(215) 640-8500
ehocky@clarkhill.com

6. The Subject Line traverses through United States Postal Service ZIP Codes 34232, 24233 and 34237.

7. Information in Applicant's possession regarding any restrictions on title will be made available by Applicant on reasonable request. Applicant believes that the right of way, or portions thereof, may be suitable for trail use or other public purposes. SGLR, together with CSXT as the underlying landowner, have granted The Trust for Public Land, or its designee, an option to acquire the rail line for conversion to a trail that will extend the Legacy Trail.

8. Applicant proposes to consummate the abandonment on or after April 27, 2019.

9. Applicant certifies that:

(a) No local or overhead traffic has moved over the Subject Line since prior to 2007, a period of more than ten years. Because the Subject Line is not a "through line," there was no overhead traffic on the Subject Line.

(b) No formal complaint by a user of rail service on the Subject Line, or a state or local government entity acting on behalf of such user, regarding cessation of service over the Subject Line either is pending with the Board or any U.S. District Court, or has been decided in favor of the complainant within the two year period.

10. Although no employees of the Applicant will be affected by the proposed abandonment, Applicant recognizes that the abandonment of the Subject Line will be made subject to the standard employee protective conditions as set forth in Oregon Short Subject Line Railroad Co .- Abandonment -- Goshen, 360 I.C.C. 91 (1979).

11. Applicant filed an Environmental and Historic Report with the Board on February 15, 2019, more than twenty days prior to this filing. Since the filing of the Environmental and Historic Report, Applicant has received two additional response from consulted agencies. A copy of the responses from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, both of which express no concerns, are attached hereto as Exhibit B.

12. Applicant certifies that it has complied with the legal (newspaper) notice requirements of 49 C.F.R. §1105.11. Notice of the proposed abandonment was published in the Sarasota Herald Tribune on February 12, 2019. A copy of the proof of publication is attached hereto as Exhibit C.

13. Applicant certifies that it has complied with the notice requirements of 49 C.F.R. §1152.50(d)(1). A copy of the notice dated February 19, 2019, sent to the required governmental agencies is attached hereto as Exhibit D.

For the reasons set forth above, the Board should find that Applicant's proposed abandonment satisfies the exemption requirements of 49 C.F.R. §1152, and should issue the appropriate notice.

Respectfully submitted,

Eric M. Hocky

Re: Seminole Gulf Railway, L.P. - Abandonment Exemption - In Sarasota County, FL
Surface Transportation Board Docket No. AB 400 (Sub. No. 7X)

To Whom It May Concern:

This letter is to advise you that Seminole Gulf Railway, L.P. ("SGLR") intends to file for the abandonment of a segment of its line of railroad known as the Venice Branch extending between Milepost SW 890.29 on the north side of Ashton Road and Milepost SW 884.70, and between Milepost AZA 930.30 and Milepost AZA 928.21 on the north side of State Highway 780 (Fruitville Road), partly within the City of Sarasota, and partly outside the City, in Sarasota County, Florida (the "Subject Line"). The Subject Line traverses through United States Postal Service ZIP Codes 34232, 24233 and 34237. A map of the Subject Line is enclosed herewith as Exhibit A.

SGLR plans to seek Surface Transportation Board ("STB") authorization for its abandonment through a notice of exempt abandonment pursuant to the provisions of 49 CFR §1152.50 on or about March 1, 2019 in Surface Transportation Board Docket No. AB 400 (Sub-No. 7X).

Based upon information in SGLR's possession, the Subject Line does not contain federally granted rights of way. Any documentation in SGLR's possession will be made available promptly to those requesting it. SGLR, together with the underlying landowner CSX Transportation, Inc., has granted the Trust for Public Land an option to acquire the Subject Line, once authorized for abandonment, for conversion to a trail extension of the existing "Legacy Trail." SGLR believes that this is a reasonable alternative public purpose for the right of way.

No local service has been provided on the Subject Line for over ten years. SGLR does not believe that there are any alternatives to the proposed action. At this time, SGLR intends to remove and reuse the track and signals. All salvage work would be done within the right of way of the Subject Line. SGLR believes that the abandonment will not have a significant effect upon the environment.

In advance of preparing an environmental report as required by applicable STB regulations, we are consulting with appropriate agencies such as yours as to any concerns which they may have as to environmental effects of the proposed abandonment.

We would appreciate an expression from you by January 25, 2019 that, within the area of your authority, you do not perceive that the abandonment will have a significant effect upon the environment (or expressing any concerns that you have). If you have any questions about the railroad's proposal or if you need assistance in this matter, please call me at (215) 640-8523.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely,

CLARK HILL PLC

Re: STB Docket No. AB 400 (Sub-No. 7X)
Seminole Gulf Railway, L.P. -
- Abandonment Exemption -
In Sarasota County, FL

Dear Sir or Madam:

This letter is being sent to you pursuant to the requirements of 49 C.F.R. §1152.50(d), to advise you that Seminole Gulf Railway, L.P. ("SGLR") intends to file a notice of exemption under 49 CFR 1152 Subpart F – Exempt Abandonments, permitting the abandonment of a segment of its line of railroad known as the Venice Branch extending between Milepost SW 890.29 on the north side of Ashton Road and Milepost SW 884.70, and between Milepost AZA 930.30 and Milepost AZA 928.21 located at the north side of State Highway 780 (Fruitville Road), partly within the City of Sarasota, and partly outside the City (the "Subject Line"). The Subject Line traverses through United States Postal Service ZIP Codes 34232, 24233 and 34237, a total distance of 7.68 miles, entirely in Sarasota County, Florida. A map of the Subject Line is enclosed with this letter.

Based upon information in SGLR's possession, the Subject Line does not contain federally granted rights of way. Any documentation in SGLR's possession will be made available promptly to those requesting it. SGLR, together with the underlying landowners CSX Transportation, Inc. and its affiliate The Atlantic Land and Improvement Company, have granted the Trust for Public Land an option to acquire the Subject Line, once approved for abandonment, for conversion to a trail extension of the existing "Legacy Trail." SGLR believes that this is a reasonable alternative public purpose for the right of way.

SGLR intends to salvage and reuse the track and track materials elsewhere on its system to the extent possible. All salvage activities will take place within the right of way of the Subject Line.

SGLR expects to file its notice of exemption with the STB on or about March 7, 2019.

Respectfully,

CLARK HILL, PLC

Re: Seminole Gulf Railway, L.P. - Exempt Abandonment - In Sarasota County, Florida, STB Docket No. AB 400 (Sub No. 7X)

Dear Ms. Brown:

This request is filed on behalf of Sarasota County, which is a political subdivision of the State of Florida, hereinafter referred to as "proponent." Proponent understands that in accordance with the Board's policy as set forth in 49 C.F.R. 1002.2(e)(l), any applicable filing fees will be waived by the Board for filings made by a local government entity such as Sarasota County.

Proponent requests issuance of a Public Use Condition as well as an Interim Trail Use Condition rather than an outright abandonment authorization for the rail line between Milepost SW 890.29 on the north side of Ashton Road and Milepost SW 884.70, and between Milepost AZA 930.30 and Milepost AZA 928.21 on the north side of State Highway 780 (Fruitville Road), partly lying within the City of Sarasota, Sarasota County, Florida, with the remainder lying within unincorporated Sarasota County, Florida, identified on Exhibit "A" attached.

A. Request for Public Use Condition

Proponent asks the STB to find that this property is suitable for other public use, specifically trail use, and to place the following conditions on the abandonment:

1. An order prohibiting the carrier from disposing of the corridor, other than the tracks, ties and signal equipment, except for public use on reasonable terms. Justification for this condition is the corridor would make an excellent recreational trail and conversion of the property to trail use is in accordance with local plans. In addition, the corridor provides open space and its preservation as a recreational trail is consistent with those purposes. Further, the proposed trail would extend an inter regional trail network from the City of Sarasota, to the City of Venice as part of an existing 14.14 mile rails-to-trails facility to the south (The Legacy Trail). The time period sought is 180 days from the effective date of the abandonment authorization in order to allow time to consummate a trail use agreement with Seminole Gulf Railway on this rail corridor.

2. An order barring removal or destruction of potential trail-related structures such as bridges, trestles, culverts and tunnels. The justification for this condition is that these structures have considerable value for recreational trail purposes. The time period requested is 180 days from the effective date of the abandonment authorization for the same reason as indicated above.

B. Request for Interim Trail Use.

The railroad right-of-way in this proceeding is suitable for rail banking. In addition to the public use conditions sought above, proponent also makes the following request:

STATEMENT OF WILLINGNESS TO ASSUME FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY

In order to establish interim trail use and rail banking under Section 8(d) of the National Trails System Act, 16 U.S.C. §1247(d), and 49 CFR 1152.29, Sarasota County is willing to assume full responsibility for management of, for any legal liability arising out of the transfer of use of (unless the user is immune from liability, in which case it need only indemnify the railroad against any potential liability), and for payment of any and all taxes that may be levied or assessed against the right-of-way leased and operated by Seminole Gulf Railway, L.P. (and owned by CSX Transportation, Inc. and its affiliate The Atlantic Land and Improvement Company).

The property, known as the North Legacy Trail Extension, Phase 2, extends between railroad Milepost SW 890.29 on the north side of Ashton Road and Milepost SW 884.70, and between Milepost AZA 930.30 and Milepost AZA 928.21 on the north side of State Highway 780 (Fruitville Road), partly lying within the City of Sarasota, Sarasota County, Florida, with the remainder lying within unincorporated Sarasota County, Florida, a total distance of 7.68 miles. The right-of-way is all of the line of railroad proposed for abandonment in STB Docket No. AB- 400 (Sub No. 7X).

A map depicting the right-if-way is attached as Exhibit A.

Sarasota County acknowledges that use of the right-of-way is subject to the user's continuing to meet its responsibilities described above and subject to possible future reconstruction and reactivation of the right-of-way for rail service.

By my signature below, I certify service of a copy of this request upon:

DECISION AND NOTICE OF INTERIM TRAIL USE OR ABANDONMENT

Docket No. AB 400 (Sub-No. 7X)

SEMINOLE GULF RAILWAY, L.P.—EXEMPT ABANDONMENT—IN SARASOTA COUNTY, FLA.

Decided: May 13, 2019

By filings dated March 8, 2019, and March 26, 2019, Seminole Gulf Railway, L.P. (SGLR), filed a verified notice of exemption under 49 C.F.R. pt. 1152 subpart F—Exempt Abandonments to abandon an approximately 7.68-mile segment of its rail line known as the Venice Branch. The segment to be abandoned extends between milepost SW 890.29 on the north side of Ashton Road and milepost SW 884.70, and between milepost AZA 930.30 and milepost AZA 928.21 on the north side of State Highway 780 (Fruitville Road), partly lying within the City of Sarasota, Sarasota County, Fla., with the remainder lying within unincorporated Sarasota County (the Line). Notice of the exemption was served and published in the Federal Register on April 15, 2019 (84 Fed. Reg. 15,278). The exemption is scheduled to become effective on May 15, 2019.

The Board's Office of Environmental Analysis (OEA) served an Environmental Assessment (EA) on April 19, 2019, recommending that two conditions be imposed on any decision granting abandonment authority. In the EA, OEA stated that the Florida State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO), by letter dated April 16, 2019, informed OEA that the proposed abandonment is unlikely to affect historic properties but recommended adding to any decision granting abandonment authority a condition requiring SGLR to immediately stop salvaging the rail line if unanticipated discoveries of prehistoric and historic artifacts or human remains that could be associated with Native American, early European, or American settlement are encountered during salvage activities.

Considering information provided by SGLR and the SHPO, OEA determined that no historic properties would be affected by the proposed abandonment, but found the SHPO's recommended condition appropriate and reasonable. Accordingly, OEA recommended a condition providing that, if prehistoric or historic artifacts (such as pottery or ceramics, projectile points, dugout canoes, metal implements, historic building materials, or any other physical remains that could be associated with Native American, early European, or American settlement) or unmarked human remains are encountered at any time within the project site area, SGLR shall cease all activities involving subsurface disturbance in the vicinity of the discovery, contact both OEA and the Florida Department of State, Division of Historical Resources, Compliance Review Section, and resume salvage activities within the vicinity of the discovery when it receives appropriate authorization.

OEA also stated that the National Geodetic Survey (NGS) identified 11 geodetic station markers that may be located within the area of the proposed abandonment. Accordingly, OEA recommended that SGLR be required to consult with the NGS and notify NGS at least 90 days prior to beginning any salvage activities that will disturb or destroy any geodetic station marker.

OEA issued its Final EA on May 10, 2019, noting that no comments to the EA were received and recommending again that the two conditions recommended in the EA be imposed. Accordingly, based on OEA's recommendation, the conditions proposed in the EA will be imposed.

In the EA, OEA stated that the right-of-way may be suitable for other public use following abandonment and salvage of the Line. On April 22, 2019, the Sarasota County Board of County Commissioners (the County) filed a request for issuance of a notice of interim trail use or abandonment (NITU) to negotiate with SGLR for acquisition of the Line for use as a trail under the National Trails System Act (Trails Act), 16 U.S.C.§ 1247(d), and for a public use condition under 49 U.S.C. § 10905. In a response filed on April 26, 2019, SGLR notified the Board that it is willing to negotiate an agreement for interim trail use with the County and takes no position on the request for a public use condition.

With respect to its request for issuance of a NITU, pursuant to 49 C.F.R. § 1152.29, the County submitted a statement of willingness to assume financial responsibility for the right-of-way and acknowledged that the use of the right-of-way for trail purposes is subject to possible future reconstruction and reactivation of the right-of-way for rail service. Because the County's request complies with the requirements of 49 C.F.R. § 1152.29 and SGLR is willing to negotiate for trail use, a NITU will be issued. The parties may negotiate an interim trail use/rail banking agreement for the right-of-way during the 180-day period prescribed below. If an interim trail use agreement is reached (and thus, interim trail use is established) the parties shall jointly notify the Board within 10 days that an agreement has been reached. 49 C.F.R. § 1152.29(d)(2) and (h). If no agreement is reached within 180 days, SGLR may fully abandon the Line, subject to any outstanding conditions. 49 C.F.R. § 1152.29(d)(1). Use of the right-of-way for trail purposes is subject to possible future reconstruction and reactivation of the right-of-way for rail service.

As an alternative to interim trail use under the Trails Act, the right-of-way may be acquired for public use as a trail under 49 U.S.C. § 10905. See Rail Abans.—Use of Rights-of-Way as Trails, 2 I.C.C.2d 591, 609 (1986). Under § 10905, the Board may prohibit the disposal of rail properties that are proposed to be abandoned and are appropriate for public purposes for a period of not more than 180 days after the effective date of the decision approving or exempting the abandonment. Here, the County asks that SGLR be prohibited from disposing of the corridor, other than the tracks, ties, and signal equipment, except for public use on reasonable terms, for a 180-day period from the effective date of the abandonment authorization. The County states that the right-of-way would make an excellent recreational trail and that conversion to a trail would be consistent with local plans and would extend an existing regional trail network. The County also asks that SGLR be prohibited from removing or destroying potential trail-related structures such as bridges, trestles, culverts, and tunnels, because these structures have considerable value for public purposes. The County states that a 180-day period is needed to allow time to consummate a trail use agreement with SGLR.

To justify a public use condition, a party must set forth: (i) the condition sought; (ii) the public importance of the condition; (iii) the period of time for which the condition would be effective; and (iv) justification for the imposition of the period of time requested. 49 C.F.R. § 1152.28(a)(2). Because the County has satisfied these requirements, a 180-day public use condition will be imposed, requiring SGLR to keep intact the right-of-way (including trail-related structures such as bridges, trestles, culverts, and tunnels) and to refrain from disposing of the corridor, other than tracks, ties, and signal equipment, commencing from May 15, 2019, the effective date of the exemption.

When proper requests for interim trail use/rail banking and public use conditions are made, it is the Board's policy to impose both conditions concurrently, subject to the execution of a trail use agreement. Here, however, while both conditions will be imposed at this time, the public use condition will expire on November 11, 2019, while the trail use negotiating period will run 180 days from the service date of this decision and notice, until November 10, 2019. If a trail use agreement is reached for a portion of the right-of-way prior to November 10, 2019, SGLR must keep the remaining right-of-way intact for the remainder of the 180-day public use condition period to permit public use negotiations. Also, a public use condition is not imposed for the benefit of any one potential purchaser but rather to provide an opportunity for any interested person to acquire the right-of-way that has been found suitable for public purposes, including trail use. Therefore, with respect to the public use condition, SGLR is not required to deal exclusively with the County but may engage in negotiations with other interested persons.

This decision, and the proposed abandonment if implemented as conditioned, will not significantly affect either the quality of the human environment or the conservation of energy resources.

It is ordered:

1. This proceeding is reopened.

2. Upon reconsideration, the notice served and published in the Federal Register on April 15, 2019, exempting the abandonment of the Line described above is modified to the extent necessary to implement interim trail use/rail banking as set forth below to permit the County to negotiate with SGLR for trail use for the Line for a period of 180 days from the service date of this decision and notice, until November 10, 2019, and to permit public use negotiations as set forth below for the Line for a period of 180 days commencing from the effective date of the exemption, until November 11, 2019. The abandonment is also subject to the conditions that: (a) if prehistoric or historic artifacts (such as pottery or ceramics, projectile points, dugout canoes, metal implements, historic building materials, or any other physical remains that could be associated with Native American, early European, or American settlement) or unmarked human remains are encountered at any time within the project site area, SGLR shall (i) cease all activities involving subsurface disturbance in the vicinity of the discovery, (ii) contact both OEA and the Florida Department of State, Division of Historical Resources, Compliance Review Section at (850) 245-6333, and (iii) resume salvage activities within the vicinity of the discovery when it receives appropriate authorization; and (b) SGLR shall consult with NGS and notify NGS at least 90 days prior to beginning salvage activities that will disturb or destroy any geodetic station markers.

3. Consistent with the public use and interim trail/rail banking conditions imposed in this decision and notice, SGLR may discontinue service. SGLR shall keep intact the right-of-way for the Line including potential trail-related structures on the Line such as bridges, trestles, culverts, and tunnels, for a period of 180 days from the effective date of the exemption, until November 11, 2019, to enable any state or local government agency, or other interested person, to negotiate the acquisition of the right-of-way for public use. If an interim trail use/rail banking agreement is executed before expiration of the 180-day public use condition period, the public use condition will expire to the extent the trail use/rail banking agreement covers the same portion of the right-of-way.

4. If an interim trail use/rail banking agreement is reached, it must require the trail sponsor to assume, for the term of the agreement, full responsibility for: (i) managing the right-of-way; (ii) any legal liability arising out of the transfer or use of the right-of-way (unless the sponsor is immune from liability, in which case it need only indemnify the railroad against any potential liability); and (iii) the payment of any and all taxes that may be levied or assessed against the right-of-way.

5. Interim trail use/rail banking is subject to possible future reconstruction and reactivation of the right-of-way for rail service and to the trail sponsor's continuing to meet its responsibilities for the right-of-way described in paragraph 4 above.

6. If an interim trail use agreement is reached (and thus, interim trail use is established), the parties shall jointly notify the Board within 10 days that an agreement has been reached. See 49 C.F.R. § 1152.29(d)(2) and (h).

7. IX. TYPEWRITTEN OR HANDWRITTEN PROVISIONS: Typewritten or handwritten provisions, riders and addenda shall control all printed provisions of this Contract in conflict with them.

X. ASSIGNABILITY: (CHECK ONLY ONE): Buyer ❑ may assign and thereby be released from any further liability under this Contract; ❑ may assign but not be released from liability under this Contract; or ❑ may not assign this Contract.

XI. DISCLOSURES:

(a) The Property may be subject to unpaid special assessment lien(s) imposed by a public body ("public body" does not include a Condominium or Homeowners' Association). Such lien(s), if any, whether certified, confirmed and ratified, pending, or payable in installments, as of Closing, shall be paid as follows: ■ by Seller at closing ❑ by Buyer (if left blank, then Seller at Closing). If the amount of any assessment to be paid by Seller has not been finally determined as of Closing, Seller shall be charged at Closing an amount equal to the last estimate or assessment for the improvement by the public body.

(b) Radon is a naturally occurring radioactive gas that when accumulated in a building in sufficient quantities may present health risks to persons who are exposed to it over time. Levels of radon that exceed federal and state guidelines have been found in buildings in Florida. Additional information regarding radon or radon testing may be obtained from your County Public Health unit.

(c) Mold is naturally occurring and may cause health risks or damage to property. If Buyer is concerned or desires additional information regarding mold, Buyer should contact an appropriate professional.

(d) Buyer acknowledges receipt of the Florida Energy-Efficiency Rating Information Brochure required by Section 553.996, F.S.

(g) BUYER SHOULD NOT EXECUTE THIS CONTRACT UNTIL BUYER HAS RECEIVED AND READ THE HOMEOWNERS' ASSOCIATION/COMMUNITY DISCLOSURE.

(h) PROPERTY TAX DISCLOSURE SUMMARY: BUYER SHOULD NOT RELY ON THE SELLER'S CURRENT PROPERTY TAXES AS THE AMOUNT OF PROPERTY TAXES THAT THE BUYER MAY BE OBLIGATED TO PAY IN THE YEAR SUBSEQUENT TO PURCHASE. A CHANGE OF OWNERSHIP OR PROPERTY IMPROVEMENTS TRIGGERS REASSESSMENTS OF THE PROPERTY THAT COULD RESULT IN HIGHER PROPERTY TAXES. IF YOU HAVE ANY QUESTIONS CONCERNING VALUATION, CONTACT THE COUNTY PROPERTY APPRAISER'S OFFICE FOR INFORMATION.

XII. MAXIMUM REPAIR COSTS: Seller shall not be responsible for payments in excess of:

(a) $ 0.00 for treatment and repair under Standard D (if blank, then 1.5% of the Purchase Price).

STANDARDS FOR REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS

A. TITLE INSURANCE: The Title Commitment shall be issued by a Florida licensed title insurer agreeing to issue Buyer, upon recording of the deed to Buyer, an owner's policy of title insurance in the amount of the purchase price, insuring Buyer's marketable title to the Real Property, subject only to matters contained in Paragraph VII and those to be discharged by Seller at or before Closing. Marketable title shall be determined according to applicable Title Standards adopted by authority of The Florida Bar and in accordance with law. Buyer shall have 5 days from date of receiving the Title Commitment to examine it, and if title is found defective, notify Seller in writing specifying defect(s) which render title unmarketable. Seller shall have 30 days from receipt of notice to remove the defects, failing which Buyer shall, within 5 days after expiration of the 30 day period, deliver written notice to Seller either: (1) extending the time for a reasonable period not to exceed 120 days within which Seller shall use diligent effort to remove the defects; or (2) requesting a refund of deposit(s) paid which shall be returned to Buyer. If Buyer fails to so notify Seller, Buyer shall be deemed to have accepted the title as it then is. Seller shall, if title is found unmarketable, use diligent effort to correct defect(s) within the time provided. If, after diligent effort, Seller is unable to timely correct the defects, Buyer shall either waive the defects, or receive a refund of deposit(s), thereby releasing Buyer and Seller from all further obligations under this Contract. If Seller is to provide the Title Commitment and it is delivered to Buyer less than 5 days prior to Closing, Buyer may extend Closing so that Buyer shall have up to 5 days from date of receipt to examine same in accordance with this Standard.

B. PURCHASE MONEY MORTGAGE; SECURITY AGREEMENT TO SELLER: A purchase money mortgage and mortgage note to Seller shall provide for a 30 day grace period in the event of default if a first mortgage and a 15 day grace period if a second or lesser mortgage; shall provide for right of prepayment in whole or in part without penalty; shall permit acceleration in event of transfer of the Real Property; shall require all prior liens and encumbrances to be kept in good standing; shall forbid modifications of, or future advances under, prior mortgage(s); shall require Buyer to maintain policies of insurance containing a standard mortgagee clause covering all improvements located on the Real Property against fire and all perils included within the term "extended coverage endorsements" and such other risks and perils as Seller may reasonably require, in an amount equal to their highest insurable value; and the mortgage, note and security agreement shall be otherwise in form and content required by Seller, but Seller may only require clauses and coverage customarily found in mortgages, mortgage notes and security agreements generally utilized by savings and loan institutions or state or national banks located in the county wherein the Real Property is located. All Personal Property and leases being conveyed or assigned will, at Seller's option, be subject to the lien of a security agreement evidenced by recorded or filed financing statements or certificates of title. If a balloon mortgage, the final payment will exceed the periodic payments thereon.

C. SURVEY: Buyer, at Buyer's expense, within time allowed to deliver evidence of title and to examine same, may have the Real Property surveyed and certified by a registered Florida surveyor. If the survey discloses encroachments on the Real Property or that improvements located thereon encroach on setback lines, easements, lands of others or violate any restrictions, Contract covenants or applicable governmental regulations, the same shall constitute a title defect.

D. WOOD DESTROYING ORGANISMS: "Wood Destroying Organisms" (WDO) shall be deemed to include all wood destroying organisms required to be reported under the Florida Structural Pest Control Act, as amended. Buyer, at Buyer's expense, may have the Property inspected by a Florida Certified Pest Control Operator ("Operator") within 20 days after the Effective Date to determine if there is any visible active WDO infestation or visible damage from WDO infestation, excluding fences. If either or both are found, Buyer may within said 20 days (1) have cost of treatment of active infestation estimated by the Operator; (2) have all damage inspected and cost of repair estimated by an appropriately licensed contractor; and (3) report such cost(s) to Seller in writing. Seller shall cause the treatment and repair of all WDO damage to be made and pay the costs thereof up to the amount provided in Paragraph XII(a). If estimated costs exceed that amount, Buyer shall have the option of canceling this Contract by giving written notice to Seller within 20 days after the Effective Date, or Buyer may elect to proceed with the transaction and receive a credit at Closing equal to the amount provided in Paragraph XII(a). If Buyer's lender requires an updated WDO report, then Buyer shall, at Buyer's expense, have the opportunity to have the Property re-inspected for WDO infestation and have the cost of active infestation or new damage estimated and reported to Seller in writing at least 10 days prior to Closing, and thereafter, Seller shall cause such treatment and repair to be made and pay the cost thereof; provided, Seller's total obligation for treatment and repair costs required under both the first and second inspection shall not exceed the amount provided in Paragraph XII (a).

E. INGRESS AND EGRESS: Seller warrants and represents that there is ingress and egress to the Real Property sufficient for its intended use as described in Paragraph VII hereof and title to the Real Property is insurable in accordance with Standard A without exception for lack of legal right of access.

F. LEASES: Seller shall, at least 10 days before Closing, furnish to Buyer copies of all written leases and estoppel letters from each tenant specifying the nature and duration of the tenant's occupancy, rental rates, advanced rent and security deposits paid by tenant. If Seller is unable to obtain such letter from each tenant, the same information shall be furnished by Seller to Buyer within that time period in the form of a Seller's affidavit, and Buyer may thereafter contact tenant to confirm such information. If the terms of the leases differ materially from Seller's representations, Buyer may terminate this Contract by delivering written notice to Seller at least 5 days prior to Closing. Seller shall, at Closing, deliver and assign all original leases to Buyer.

G. LIENS: Seller shall furnish to Buyer at time of Closing an affidavit attesting to the absence, unless otherwise provided for herein, of any financing statement, claims of lien or potential lienors known to Seller and further attesting that there have been no improvements or repairs to the Real Property for 90 days immediately preceding date of Closing. If the Real Property has been improved or repaired within that time, Seller shall deliver releases or waivers of construction liens executed by all general contractors, subcontractors, suppliers and materialmen in addition to Seller's lien affidavit setting forth the names of all such general contractors, subcontractors, suppliers and materialmen, further affirming that all charges for improvements or repairs which could serve as a basis for a construction lien or a claim for damages have been paid or will be paid at the Closing of this Contract.

H. PLACE OF CLOSING: Closing shall be held in the county wherein the Real Property is located at the office of the attorney or other closing agent ("Closing Agent") designated by the party paying for title insurance, or, if no title insurance, designated by Seller.

I. TIME: Calendar days shall be used in computing time periods except periods of less than six (6) days, in which event Saturdays, Sundays and state or national legal holidays shall be excluded. Any time periods provided for herein which shall end on a Saturday, Sunday, or a legal holiday shall extend to 5:00 p.m. of the next business day. Time is of the essence in this Contract.

J. CLOSING DOCUMENTS: Seller shall furnish the deed, bill of sale, certificate of title, construction lien affidavit, owner's possession affidavit, assignments of leases, tenant and mortgagee estoppel letters and corrective instruments. Buyer shall furnish mortgage, mortgage note, security agreement and financing statements.

K. EXPENSES: Documentary stamps on the deed and recording of corrective instruments shall be paid by Seller. All costs of Buyer's loan (whether obtained from Seller or third party), including, but not limited to, documentary stamps and intangible tax on the purchase money mortgage and any mortgage assumed, mortgagee title insurance commitment with related fees, and recording of purchase money mortgage to Seller, deed and financing statements shall be paid by Buyer. Unless otherwise provided by law or rider to this Contract, charges for related closing services, title search, and closing fees (including preparation of closing statement), shall be paid by the party responsible for furnishing the title evidence in accordance with Paragraph V.

L. PRORATIONS; CREDITS: Taxes, assessments, rent, interest, insurance and other expenses of the Property shall be prorated through the day before Closing. Buyer shall have the option of taking over existing policies of insurance, if assumable, in which event premiums shall be prorated. Cash at Closing shall be increased or decreased as may be required by prorations to be made through day prior to Closing, or occupancy, if occupancy occurs before Closing. Advance rent and security deposits will be credited to Buyer. Escrow deposits held by mortgagee will be credited to Seller. Taxes shall be prorated based on the current year's tax with due allowance made for maximum allowable discount, homestead and other exemptions. If Closing occurs at a date when the current year's millage is not fixed and current year's assessment is available, taxes will be prorated based upon such assessment and prior year's millage. If current year's assessment is not available, then taxes will be prorated on prior year's tax. If there are completed improvements on the Real Property by January 1st of year of Closing, which improvements were not in existence on January 1st of prior year, then taxes shall be prorated based upon prior year's millage and at an equitable assessment to be agreed upon between the parties; failing which, request shall be made to the County Property Appraiser for an informal assessment taking into account available exemptions. A tax proration based on an estimate shall, at request of either party, be readjusted upon receipt of current year's tax bill.

M. (RESERVED - purposely left blank)

N. INSPECTION AND REPAIR: Seller warrants that the ceiling, roof (including the fascia and soffits), and exterior and interior walls, and foundation of the Property do not have any visible evidence of leaks, water damage, or structural damage and that dockage, seawalls, septic tank, pool, all appliances, mechanical items, heating, cooling, electrical, plumbing, septic, well, pool/spa equipment, and Working Condition. The foregoing warranty shall be limited to the items specified unless otherwise provided in an addendum. Buyer may inspect, or, at Buyer's expense, have a firm or individual specializing in home inspections and holding an occupational license for such purpose (if required), or by an appropriately licensed Florida contractor, make inspections of, those items within 20 days after the Effective Date. Buyer shall, prior to Buyer's occupancy but not more than 20 days after Effective Date, report in writing to Seller such items that do not meet the above standards as to defects. Unless Buyer timely reports such defects, Buyer shall be deemed to have waived Seller's warranties as to defects not reported. If repairs or replacements are required to comply with this Standard, Seller shall cause them to be made and shall pay up to the amount provided in Paragraph XII (b). Seller is not required to make repairs or replacements of a Cosmetic Condition unless caused by a defect Seller is responsible to repair or replace. If the cost for such repair or replacement exceeds the amount provided in Paragraph XII (b), Buyer or Seller may elect to pay such excess, failing which either party may cancel this Contract. If Seller is unable to correct the defects prior to Closing, the cost thereof shall be paid into escrow at Closing. For purposes of this Contract: (1) "Working Condition" means operating in the manner in which the item was designed to operate; (2) "Cosmetic Condition" means aesthetic imperfections that do not affect the Working Condition of the item, including, but not limited to: pitted marcite or other pool finishes; missing or torn screens; fogged windows; tears, worn spots, or discoloration of floor coverings, wallpaper, or window treatments; nail holes, scratches, dents, scrapes, chips or caulking in ceilings, walls, flooring, fixtures, or mirrors; and minor cracks in floors, tiles, windows, driveways, sidewalks, or pool decks; and (3) cracked roof tiles, curling or worn shingles, or limited roof life shall not be considered defects Seller must repair or replace, so long as there is no evidence of actual leaks or leakage or structural damage, but missing tiles will be Seller's responsibility to replace or repair.

Case 1:22-cv-00557-ELH-WC Document 31-8 Filed 08/05/22 Page 32 of 33

O. RISK OF LOSS: If, after the Effective Date, the Property is damaged by fire or other casualty ("Casualty Loss") before Closing and cost of restoration (which shall include the cost of pruning or removing damaged trees) does not exceed 1.5% of the Purchase Price, cost of restoration shall be an obligation of Seller and Closing shall proceed pursuant to the terms of this Contract and if restoration is not completed as of Closing, restoration costs will be escrowed at Closing. If the cost of restoration exceeds 1.5% of the Purchase Price, Buyer shall either take the Property as is, together with the 1.5% or receive a refund of deposit(s) thereby releasing Buyer and Seller from all further obligations under this Contract. Seller's sole obligation with respect to tree damage by casualty or other natural occurrence shall be the cost of pruning or removal.

P. CLOSING PROCEDURE: The deed shall be recorded upon clearance of funds. If the title agent insures adverse matters pursuant to Section 627.7841, F.S., as amended, the escrow and closing procedure required by this Standard shall be waived. Unless waived as set forth above the following closing procedures shall apply: (1) all closing proceeds shall be held in escrow by the Closing Agent for a period of not more than 5 days after Closing; (2) if Seller's title is rendered unmarketable, through no fault of Buyer, Buyer shall, within the 5 day period, notify Seller in writing of the defect and Seller shall have 30 days from date of receipt of such notification to cure the defect; (3) if Seller fails to timely cure the defect, all deposits and closing funds shall, upon written demand by Buyer and within 5 days after demand, be returned to Buyer and, simultaneously with such repayment, Buyer shall return the Personal Property, vacate the Real Property and reconvey the Property to Seller by special warranty deed and bill of sale; and (4) if Buyer fails to make timely demand for refund, Buyer shall take title as is, waiving all rights against Seller as to any intervening defect except as may be available to Buyer by virtue of warranties contained in the deed or bill of sale.

Q. ESCROW: Any Closing Agent or escrow agent (collectively "Agent") receiving funds or equivalent is authorized and agrees by acceptance of them to deposit them promptly, hold same in escrow and, subject to clearance, disburse them in accordance with terms and conditions of this Contract. Failure of funds to clear shall not excuse Buyer's performance. If in doubt as to Agent's duties or liabilities under the provisions of this Contract, Agent may, at Agent's option, continue to hold the subject matter of the escrow until the parties hereto agree to its disbursement or until a judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction shall determine the rights of the parties, or Agent may deposit same with the clerk of the circuit court having jurisdiction of the dispute. An attorney who represents a party and also acts as Agent may represent such party in such action. Upon notifying all parties concerned of such action, all liability on the part of Agent shall fully terminate, except to the extent of accounting for any items previously delivered out of escrow. If a licensed real estate broker, Agent will comply with provisions of Chapter 475, F.S., as amended. Any suit between Buyer and Seller wherein Agent is made a party because of acting as Agent hereunder, or in any suit wherein Agent interpleads the subject matter of the escrow, Agent shall recover reasonable attorney's fees and costs incurred with these amounts to be paid from and out of the escrowed funds or equivalent and charged and awarded as court costs in favor of the prevailing party. The Agent shall not be liable to any party or person for misdelivery to Buyer or Seller of items subject to the escrow, unless such misdelivery is due to willful breach of the provisions of this Contract or gross negligence of Agent.

R. ATTORNEY'S FEES; COSTS: In any litigation, including breach, enforcement or interpretation, arising out of this Contract, the prevailing party in such litigation, which, for purposes of this Standard, shall include Seller, Buyer and any brokers acting in agency or nonagency relationships authorized by Chapter 475, F.S., as amended, shall be entitled to recover from the non-prevailing party reasonable attorney's fees, costs and expenses.

S. FAILURE OF PERFORMANCE: If Buyer fails to perform this Contract within the time specified, including payment of all deposits, the deposit(s) paid by Buyer and deposit(s) agreed to be paid, may be recovered and retained by and for the account of Seller as agreed upon liquidated damages, consideration for the execution of this Contract and in full settlement of any claims; whereupon, Buyer and Seller shall be relieved of all obligations under this Contract; or Seller, at Seller's option, may proceed in equity to enforce Seller's rights under this Contract. If for any reason other than failure of Seller to make Seller's title marketable after diligent effort, Seller fails, neglects or refuses to perform this Contract, Buyer may seek specific performance or elect to receive the return of Buyer's deposit(s) without thereby waiving any action for damages resulting from Seller's breach.

T. CONTRACT NOT RECORDABLE; PERSONS BOUND; NOTICE; COPIES: Neither this Contract nor any notice of it shall be recorded in any public records. This Contract shall bind and inure to the benefit of the parties and their successors in interest. Whenever the context permits, singular shall include plural and one gender shall include all. Notice and delivery given by or to the attorney or broker representing any party shall be as effective as if given by or to that party. All notices must be in writing and may be made by mail, personal delivery or electronic media. A legible facsimile or electronic (including "pdf") copy of this Contract and any signatures hereon shall be considered for all purposes as an original.

U. CONVEYANCE: Seller shall convey marketable title to the Real Property by statutory warranty, trustee's, personal representative's, or guardian's deed, as appropriate to the status of Seller, subject only to matters contained in Paragraph VII and those otherwise accepted by Buyer. Personal Property shall, at the request of Buyer, be transferred by an absolute bill of sale with warranty of title, subject only to such matters as may be otherwise provided for herein.

V. OTHER AGREEMENTS: No prior or present agreements or representations shall be binding upon Buyer or Seller unless included in this Contract. No modification to or change in this Contract shall be valid or binding upon the parties unless in writing and executed by the parties intended to be bound by it.

W. SELLER DISCLOSURE: There are no facts known to Seller materially affecting the value of the Property which are not readily observable by Buyer or which have not been disclosed to Buyer.

X. PROPERTY MAINTENANCE; PROPERTY ACCESS; REPAIR STANDARDS; ASSIGNMENT OF CONTRACTS AND WARRANTIES: Seller shall maintain the Property, including, but not limited to lawn, shrubbery, and pool in the condition existing as of Effective Date, ordinary wear and tear and Casualty Loss excepted. Seller shall, upon reasonable notice, provide utilities service and access to the Property for appraisal and inspections, including a walk-through prior to Closing, to confirm that all items of Personal Property are on the Real Property and, subject to the foregoing, that all required repairs and replacements have been made, and that the Property has been maintained as required by this Standard. All repairs and replacements shall be completed in a good and workmanlike manner, in accordance with all requirements of law, and shall consist of materials or items of quality, value, capacity and performance comparable to, or better than, that existing as of the Effective Date. Seller will assign all assignable repair and treatment contracts and warranties to Buyer at Closing.

Y. 1031 EXCHANGE: If either Seller or Buyer wish to enter into a like-kind exchange (either simultaneous with Closing or deferred) with respect to the Property under Section 1031 of the Internal Revenue Code ("Exchange"), the other party shall cooperate in all reasonable respects to effectuate the Exchange, including the execution of documents; provided (1) the cooperating party shall incur no liability or expense related to the Exchange and (2) the Closing shall not be contingent upon, nor extended or delayed by, such Exchange.

Re: Action Needed to Address Private Encroachment on County-Owned Property

Dear Property Owner:

On June 30, 2019, Sarasota County acquired a former railroad corridor to become an extension of the Legacy Trail. On November 19, 2019, the Board of County Commissioners adopted the Legacy Trail Operation and Use Policy (the "Policy"), which prohibits encroachments onto the Legacy Trail by adjacent property owners.

As an adjacent property owner, your [insert type of encroachment] is extending beyond the legal boundaries onto the neighboring Sarasota County-owned Legacy Trail. This encroachment is a violation of the Policy and must be removed from the Legacy Trail by February 7, 2020 as construction on the Legacy Trail extension is expected to begin mid-2020. Please ensure compliance with this request by the aforementioned date to avoid any further actions.

Please contact encroachments@scgov.net or 941-861-5191 with questions.

Sincerely,

Hayley A. Baldinelli,
Manager, Property Management Division

Editors' Synopsis: In this Article, the Authors present a practitioner's view of the conflict between the worthy objective the Trails Act was intended to achieve and the realities of how the Act serves to take property from landowners without providing the just compensation the Fifth Amendment requires. The authors argue that several recommended changes to the Trails Act can reduce the inequities that result from its implementation.

I. PUBLIC RECREATIONAL TRAILS AND PRESERVATION OF RAILROAD CORRIDORS ARE WORTHY OBJECTIVES

Add our voices to the choir. A well-administered public recreational trail can be a valuable and appreciated public amenity.

The National Trails System Act Amendments of 1983 (1983 Amendments)[1] were adopted for the purpose of converting abandoned rail lines into public recreational trails and preserving the otherwise abandoned easements by allowing the federal Surface Transportation Board (STB) to grant any railroad the ability to build a new rail line across this land at some indefinite date in the future.

However, the fact that the object of legislation benefits the public does not excuse the government from its constitutional obligation to compensate a landowner whose land the government takes in pursuit of this objective. The Fifth Amendment to our Constitution requires the government to pay "just compensation" to a citizen whose property it takes for the benefit of the public.[2]

Justice Holmes noted this point in Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Mahon,[3] writing, "We are in danger of forgetting that a strong public desire to improve the public condition is not enough to warrant achieving the desire by a shorter cut than the constitutional way of paying for the change."[4]

Currently, more than fifty Trails Act Fifth Amendment takings cases are pending in the U.S. Court of Federal Claims (CFC) and federal district courts. These pending cases involve title to more than 780 miles of abandoned rail lines and more than 85,400 acres of land[5] owned by thousands of American citizens.

The Trails Act is legislation with a worthy objective, but the Trails Act is seriously flawed in the means by which it seeks to accomplish this objective. The flaws in the Trails Act, combined with the STB's implementation of the Act and the Department of Justice's (DOJ) legal strategy defending against claims arising under the Trails Act, have made the Trails Act massively and needlessly more costly for American taxpayers.

[5] Railroad easements typically vary in width from 50 feet to 200 feet. In eastern states and urban areas, the easement is normally 50 to 100 feet wide, while in western states and rural communities, the easements are typically 200 feet wide. The most common width is 100 feet. Assuming a uniform 100-foot width, more than 780 miles of abandoned rail line are currently the subject of pending Trails Act taking cases, and 85,400 acres of land are involved in this litigation. Because many of the pending cases involve abandoned rail lines in the Western United States, the actual acreage likely is greater.

Defenders of the Trails Act respond to criticisms of the law in its current form by extolling the virtues of public recreation. This response is like recommending we take an ocean voyage from Liverpool to New York because New York offers such fine entertainment. All true. But, accepting that premise does not mean we should make the voyage aboard the R.M.S. Titanic. So too the Trails Act. Granting the premise that creating public recreational trails and preserving otherwise abandoned rail corridors for possible future use are worthy objectives, it does not follow that the Trails Act in its current form is the most effective vehicle to achieve this objective.

Fortunately, the legitimate objectives of the Trails Act—establishing public recreational trails and preserving railroad corridors—may be achieved fairly and cost-effectively. But this can only be accomplished if Congress, the STB, and the DOJ change how the Trails Act is written, administered, and defended. If these changes are made, it will result in an act that treats landowners fairly, establishes more and better trails, and spends less of the taxpayers' money.

II. A TRAILS ACT PARABLE

Suppose you own a home. This home has been in your family for generations and is of cultural and historic interest—legend is that George Washington once spent the night and wrote his farewell address in this house. This home is on land your family has owned for generations and is next door to the house in which you live. You are not currently using this home, and a businessman would like to buy it. But you don't want to sell and would prefer to keep the home in your family. You do think it would be good for the neighborhood to have someone living in the home, and this businessman is a nice fellow—he is a retired railroad executive and would be a responsible neighbor who would maintain the home while he lives in it. So you agree to sell him a life estate in the home. The businessman can live in the home for the rest of his life; when the businessman dies—whether in a week or in thirty years—you (or your heirs) get the home back.

Several decades later, Congress passes a "historic preservation" law, which says a federal agency may authorize those living in historic homes to sell them to private groups or to local governments that will operate the homes as public museums. This law further allows the person living in the home to sell it, notwithstanding any principle of state property law (such as a life estate) that would otherwise prevent that person from selling the home.

The businessman who bought your home has become quite sick and fallen on hard times. So he tells the federal agency that he is terminally ill and soon will no longer need the home. The federal agency, without ever telling you, issues an edict authorizing the businessman to sell the home to a private group that wants to operate a public museum in it. Under this arrangement the private group gets the home when the businessman dies, notwithstanding state law that says the businessman has only a life estate and that you receive the home back upon his death. The businessman's only heirs are some estranged third cousins. A provision of this federal historic preservation law allows these estranged third cousins to move into the house in the future if the federal agency grants them permission to do so.

You, as the owner of this home, don't know anything about any of these arrangements. No one—not the businessman, not the private group, and not the federal government—ever told you about this scheme to sell your home and convert it to a museum, with the possibility of the businessman's third cousins moving in at some future date.

Fortunately for the businessman, he survives for several more years. When he finally does succumb, sad as you are at his passing, you go to reclaim your home. But when you do so, a private group comes to the door and tells you that they now own the land by reason of this federal historic preservation law and the order of the federal agency. This private group plans to operate a public museum in the home. It will charge admission and have a concession stand and bookstore in the home.

You protest. This is your home. The businessman had only a life estate. You argue that this law is unconstitutional. The U.S. Supreme Court hears your case and rules that Congress may constitutionally convert your home into a museum because Congress has the power of eminent domain. But the Supreme Court rules that the Fifth Amendment requires the federal government to pay you just compensation for the home it has taken from you.

We all agree—you most of all—that the home is of great historic and cultural importance. This importance is why you wanted to keep it in your family. Remembering where our first president slept and displaying dioramas portraying the event and books recounting his life are all of great national importance. After all, where would we be without George Washington? But none of these considerations change the fact that you owned the home until the federal law preempted your state law title to the home.

You would rather have your home back. Lacking that possibility, you would like to receive the just compensation that you are constitutionally entitled to receive. So you file a claim in the CFC seeking compensation.

The DOJ (funded by your tax payments) appears in court to prevent you from being paid compensation. The DOJ argues, "It may be true that the businessman only had a life estate in your home, but we have decided that a life estate in a historic home has been 'redefined' or has 'shifted' to include the right of a private museum group to operate the home as a public museum—including a concession stand and bookstore."

After five years of litigation with the federal government, you and the DOJ reach a settlement specifying the amount of compensation you are to receive for this home. A federal judge reviews this settlement and approves the compensation. But just two days before this order approving the settlement is final, the court of appeals issues a ruling in a different case involving a house the federal government has taken from a famous general in Georgia. (The federal government also took this Army general's home without paying him.) Under the court of appeals' new rule, a homeowner must file a claim for compensation within six years of when the federal agency issued its edict authorizing the sale of the house to the businessman. You protest, "This is not fair. No one ever told me about the federal agency's order. I didn't know anyone had taken my home until I heard about the deal between the businessman and the museum group, and even then I only heard about it because it was in the newspaper. Plus, I filed my claim before this new rule was announced and under the old rule I couldn't even file a claim until the businessman had died, and I had the right to my home under state law."

"Too bad," the DOJ says. In effect, "Gotcha. You're out of luck. The museum group gets your home, and we get out of our settlement agreement so the federal government doesn't have to pay you. Sometimes life is just not fair."[6]

[6] The DOJ argued before the CFC that although the government had admitted liability for taking the land of more than 100 Missouri property owners, the decision in an unrelated case retroactively changed the statute of limitations and the government was no longer bound to honor the settlement nor pay these citizens. The DOJ argued:

> [T]he extent that some of this discussion is really turning on the perceived equities, or inequities, of the government raising the statute of limitations' [sic] issue again after having litigated the case for a number of years, we have quoted in one or both of our brief [sic]. . . . It states: that age-old rule that a court may not, in any case, even in the interest of justice, extend its jurisdiction where none exists has always worked injustice in particular cases.

You cannot believe this result. So you ask if any other citizens have had the same thing happen to their homes. You learn that a lot of other citizens have also lost their homes under this federal program and very few have been paid.

One homeowner tells you that he lost his home under this program when the federal agency granted a county government the right to take the family home for a museum, but the county has never used the home as a museum. Rather, the home has been neglected and vandalized and the grounds are littered with trash. The county government that received the right to use this home had said it wanted the home for a museum, but the county really had no interest in opening a museum. Rather, the county wanted to use the federal law to acquire title to the land so the county could make money by leasing the home to a cell tower company and digging a sewage lagoon in the back yard for a community septic system.[7] The property owners complained to the federal agency about this abuse of the federal historic preservation law. But, the federal agency told them it had no statutory authority to regulate how a "museum group" used the land.[8] The DOJ says the museum group can use the land for anything it wants—it does not have to be a museum.[9] The only requirement is that the museum group not do something that would make it impossible for the estranged third cousins to move back to the land and build a new home. No one really knows what would make it "impossible" for the third cousins to do so. In one case the museum group tore down the home and built a heliport.[10]

In yet another case, the heirs of the deceased life estate tenant are using this program to try and get money for the home in a scheme to sell it to a Mexican corporation.[11] In the meantime, the home has fallen into disrepair, the pool has overflowed and flooded the owner's adjoining home, and a group of illegal aliens are using what is left of the home as a meth lab. Every few days, the police are called to break into the house and arrest them, but the house continues to be used as a meth lab and a shelter for illegal aliens. Whenever the owners try and lock the home and prevent it from being used for illegal activity, the police run them off, saying that under this federal program, the owners have no right to go onto the land, not even to protect their adjoining land from being flooded.[12]

For those fortunate enough to learn that the federal agency has issued an edict authorizing their home to be converted into a museum in time to file a claim for compensation, the DOJ will claim the government does not need to pay them for taking their ancestral home. In its defense of these "Museum-Act taking cases," the DOJ has pursued a litigation strategy that is both very expensive and greatly delays a homeowner being paid compensation. The DOJ makes three arguments:

Argument 1: The businessman still lives in the home and, therefore, the life estate is still in force. True enough, the DOJ concedes, the businessman is dead and buried, and he only had a life estate to use the property; but, because the federal agency may grant his estranged third cousins the right to move into the house sometime in the future, the businessman is really still living in the house.

If you don't buy Argument 1, the DOJ offers Argument 2 as justification for taking your home without having to pay you.

Argument 2: Your home is really a museum and was a museum all along. The original owners of the home allowed George Washington to sleep there because George Washington was a public figure. Therefore, a public museum commemorating George Washington's slumber in the home is a use of the property consistent with the original owner's invitation to

George Washington to spend the night. George Washington was a public figure so a public museum commemorating this event are both similarly permitted public uses of this home within the scope of the original invitation to George Washington. Additionally, because you granted the businessman the right to use this home for a single-family residence as long as he lived, you cannot complain about the use of your land as a public museum because, if the businessman had not died, he still could be living in the home. Therefore, the public museum imposes no "greater burden" on your ownership of the reversionary right to this home than was the case when the businessman used it.

Okay, okay. So that argument is an invalid syllogism on the order of: "God is love, love is blind; therefore, Stevie Wonder is God." But the DOJ has one last argument it marshals in its effort to avoid compensating property owners in Museum-Act taking cases.

Argument 3: The federal government still can take your property without having to pay compensation because the government—or a judge sympathetic to the government—can "redefine" or "shift" your property interest in your home. The argument goes like this: When you and the businessman negotiated the original agreement, he obtained a life estate to use your home. The life estate did not allow him to sell your home to a museum—nor did it allow his estranged third cousins to use the home after he died. "But," the DOJ argues, "Times have changed. It was several decades ago that you and the businessman negotiated the life estate. Since then, we have all come to share a much greater appreciation of George Washington and the importance of preserving our historical connection with our first president." It is, therefore, appropriate for the federal government—or a judge sympathetic to the federal government—to redefine the life estate granted the businessman in light of the current reality of our appreciation of George Washington. Thus, a life estate granted for the life of the businessman who lived in a home in which George Washington once slept should be redefined or "shifted" to be a life estate that endures so long as we remember the life of George Washington.

The preceding parable of a private home taken for a public museum is precisely analogous to the situation that property owners experience in "rails-to-trails" takings of their land under the federal Trails Act. If you substitute railroad for businessman, recreational trail for museum, easement for life estate and reversionary interest[13] for original landowner, you have an accurate statement of how the Trails Act functions.

[13] Throughout this Article, we use the term reversionary in the generic sense used by the Federal Circuit: "We note in passing that as a matter of traditional property law

III. IN REALITY, THE TRAILS ACT IS ALL ABOUT CREATING NEW PUBLIC RECREATIONAL TRAILS, NOT PRESERVING RAILROADS

The Trails Act is not, in reality, about preserving railroad corridors. This ostensible purpose is a fiction. The Trails Act is, in practice, about converting land the site of a now abandoned rail line to a new and different use as a public recreational trail. And, as the Federal Circuit and other courts have made clear, public recreational use is quite different from operating a railroad.[14] terminology, a termination of the easements would not cause anything to 'revert' to the landowner. Rather, the burden of the easement would simply be extinguished, and the landowner's property would be held free and clear of any such burden." Toews v. United States, 376 F.3d 1371, 1376 (Fed. Cir. 2004).

Judge Plager made some interesting comments on this topic:

> There is an alternative way, frequently used today . . . to describe property transactions involving easements. Instead of calling the property owner's retained interest a fee simple burdened by the easement, this alternative labels the property owner's retained interest following the creation of an easement as a "reversion" in fee. Upon the termination, however achieved, of the easement, the "reversion" is said to become fully possessory; it is sometimes loosely said that the estate "reverts" to the owner.
> Under traditional common law estates terminology, a "reversion" is a future interest remaining in the transferor following the conveyance of certain lesser estates to a transferee, typically when the transferee takes a possessory estate of freehold, for example a life estate. An easement is not such a possessory estate of freehold. Traditional characterization describes an easement as a "use" interest, sometimes an "incorporeal hereditament," but not a "possessory" interest in the land. Therefore labeling the retained interest a "reversion" is not consistent with the traditional classification scheme, which views the retained interest as a present estate in fee simple, subject to the burden of the easement.
>
> Be that as it may, whether the property owner's retained interest following the conveyance of an easement is denominated a fee simple estate or a reversion, it is uniformly treated at common law as a vested estate in fee. Under either characterization the result upon termination of the easement is the same. For consistency we use the traditional terminology which recognizes that the transferor remains seized of the freehold estate, and thus labels the owner's estate as a fee simple, burdened, during the life of the easement, by the easement-holder's rights.

[14] In Toews, the Federal Circuit noted:

> And it appears beyond cavil that use of these easements for a recreational trail—for walking, hiking, biking, picnicking, frisbee

In National Wildlife Federation v. Interstate Commerce Comm'n,[15] the D.C. Circuit described the history and purpose of the 1983 Amendments to the Trails Act:[16] "As originally enacted, the Trails Act made no specific provision for the conversion of abandoned railroad rights-of-way to trails. Congress's first effort to encourage this type of adaptive re-use appeared in section 809 of the Railroad Revitalization and Regulatory Reform [(4-R)] Act of 1976."[17] Section 809 of the 4-R Act authorized the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) to delay disposition of abandoned railroad corridors for up to 180 days after an effective abandonment order "unless the property at issue had been first offered on reasonable terms for sale for public purposes."[18] This section is referred to as a "Public Use Condition."[19]

This section did not, however, achieve Congress's desired result. As the D.C. Circuit noted, "Section [10905] has no railbanking provision that > playing, with newly-added tarmac pavement, park benches, occasional billboards, and fences to enclose the trailway—is not the same use made by a railroad, involving tracks, depots, and the running of trains. The different uses create different burdens. In the one case there was an occasional train passing through (no depots or turntables or other appurtenances are involved on these rights of way). In the other, individuals or groups use the property, some passing along the trail, others pausing to engage in activities for short or long periods of time. In the one case, the landowner could make such uses of the property as were not inconsistent with the railroad's use, crossing over the tracks, putting a fruit stand on one edge of the property, or whatever. In the other, the government fenced the trail in such a way as to deny access.

> Some might think it better to have people strolling on one's property than to have a freight train rumbling through. But that is not the point. The landowner's grant authorized one set of uses, not the other. Under the law, it is the landowner's intention as expressed in the grant that defines the burden to which the land will be subject.

would preempt state laws that could otherwise result in reversion of rights-of-way to abutting landowners upon a cessation of rail service."[20]

The lack of a railbanking provision preempting state laws created a problem in that the railroad would lose its rights of way under state law when the railroad abandoned the line. For this reason, "Congress renewed its effort to promote the conversion of railroad rights-of-way to trail use when it enacted the current [section] 8(d) as part of the 1983 Trails Act Amendments."[21] Section 8(d) was…. added to:

> reflect[] the concern that previous congressional efforts have not been successful in establishing a process through which railroad rights-of-way which are not immediately necessary for active service can be utilized for trail purposes . . . . [This provision] should eliminate many of the problems with this program. The concept of attempting to establish trails only after the formal abandonment of a railroad right-of-way is self-defeating; once a right-of-way is abandoned for railroad purposes there may be nothing left for trail use.[22]

The Eighth Circuit noted:

> One of the major impediments to preserving these rights-of-way existed in state property laws which prescribed that once rail service is discontinued after the ICC's approval of abandonment, such easements would automatically expire and the rights-of-way would revert to adjacent property owners. In response to this problem, Congress enacted the Trails Act Amendments of 1983.[23]

As the D.C. Circuit explained, "By deeming interim trail use to be like discontinuance rather than abandonment, Congress sought to prevent property interests from reverting to the landowners under state law."[24]

Section 8(d) of the 1983 Trails Act Amendments provides:

> Consistent with the purposes of that Act, and in furtherance of the national policy to preserve established railroad rights-of-way for future reactivation of rail service, to protect rail transportation corridors, and to encourage energy efficient transportation use, in the case of interim use of any established railroad rights-of-way pursuant to donation, transfer, lease, sale, or otherwise in a manner consistent with this chapter, if such interim use is subject to restoration or reconstruction for railroad purposes, such interim use shall not be treated, for purposes of any law or rule of law, as an abandonment of the use of such rights-of-way for railroad purposes.[25]

The Trails Act was codified at Title 16.[26] This section of the United States Code concerns "conservation." The provisions before and after the Trails Act concern estuaries and rivers.[27] By contrast, regulation of railroads and the STB's authority and procedures are codified under Title 49, which concerns "transportation."[28]

The Trails Act does not even come into play until the railroad and the STB first have concluded the property has no current or foreseeable future use as a rail line.[29] After a railroad has sought authority to abandon a rail line and the STB has determined that no current or foreseeable future use of the land for a rail line exists, a private or public group may request the authority to negotiate with the railroad to acquire the easement pursuant to the Trails Act.[30] If such a trail group requests the opportunity to negotiate a Trail Use Agreement with the railroad and if the railroad agrees to these negotiations, the STB will issue a Notice of Interim Trail Use or Abandonment (NITU).[31] The STB has no discretion over whether or not to issue a NITU.[32] If the railroad agrees to negotiate, the STB must issue a NITU.

The Legacy Trail running between Sarasota and Venice, Florida is a typical example. Seminole Gulf Railway, L.P. (SGLR) sought to abandon a twelve-mile long decrepit and unused segment of rail line it had acquired from CSX Transportation in 1987.[33] SGLR noted, "there has been no traffic on the line [for over two years] and there have been no rail movements over the last three miles of the line for over 10 years."[34] SGLR told the STB "there is little likelihood of traffic returning to the line."[35] The railroad and the STB agreed that:

> All of the former shippers have moved elsewhere or use other arrangements for their traffic. . . . Because of residential and recreational development of the land along the right-of-way there are few, if any, parcels available for industrial development for new rail shippers. . . . It is clear that the lack of traffic, and the development of the area around the Subject Line that there is little likelihood of there ever being a future demand for local rail service over > the Subject Line . . . there are no shippers remaining on the Subject Line, and no prospects of future shippers.[36]

The STB approved the abandonment of the rail line and issued a NITU. The Trust for Public Land, a 501(c)(3) public charity and land conservation group, negotiated with the railroad and acquired the easement under the Trails Act. The Trust for Public Land then assigned the trail to Sarasota County. The Legacy Trail is now a mostly paved public recreational trail with parking, rest room facilities, and a museum in the old depot.

Thus, while the Trails Act preserves the hypothetical possibility that the STB at some future time may grant some as-yet unidentified railroad the authority to build a new rail line across the land, the reality is that this grant rarely happens. In the vast majority of cases, the land has been converted permanently to public recreational use and never has or will be the site of a future railroad.

According to testimony submitted to the STB, out of 5,079 miles of track subject to a NITU, only 2,764 have been converted to trail use.[37] Of these 2,764 miles of trails, a rail line has been rebuilt on the land only nine times.[38] And, often only a small segment of the former rail line has been reactivated.[39] Many of the abandoned rail lines converted to public recreational use are spur lines or dead-end lines[40] that do not run anywhere any railroad will ever be needed again.[41] Most of these abandoned rail lines are not of significant value as a rail corridor.

Notably, the NITU does not guarantee there will be a trail or that a Trail Use Agreement will be reached within the six-month initial negotiating period. The NITU merely authorizes the railroad and trail group to negotiate for a possible Trail Use Agreement. The initial negotiating period is for six

IV. THE TRAILS ACT PROVIDES PRIVATE "TRAIL GROUPS" A MECHANISM TO TAKE LAND AND SELL THAT INTEREST TO A THIRD PARTY FOR PROFIT

All too often the Trails Act serves, not to build trails, but as a tool for a private or public "trail group" to acquire the rights to profit from the land. This use is especially outrageous because while landowners are not paid unless they pursue long and expensive litigation against the federal government, the trail group is able to sell the landowners' property for substantial profit.[43]

Consider the economics of a single two-mile long segment of abandoned rail line converted to trail use under the Trails Act. The STB issued a NITU on April 18, 1999. A not-for-profit, privately controlled trail group negotiated with the railroad to acquire the easement pursuant to the Trails Act. The Missouri Pacific Railroad appraised the easement as worth $3.5 million for tax purposes.[44] The private trail group paid the railroad only $330,000.[45] The railroad received a tax deduction worth more than $1.1 mil-

[43] "[I]n an abandonment proceeding the STB determines whether an abandonment is appropriate by weighing the potential harm to affected shippers and communities against the burden of continued operation of the railroad in interstate commerce. By contrast, under section 1247(d), the STB must issue a NITU or CITU when a private party files a statement of willingness to assume financial responsibility and the railroad agrees to negotiate." [44] See Ken Leiser, Park District Ditches Offer to Buy Trail: Officials Discover Nonprofit Had Paid Much Less, ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH, Dec. 4, 2003, at C1. The appraised interest in the corridor is not the value of the land but the value of the railroad's easement interest in the corridor that it was able to sell by reason of the Trails Act. Id. Under Missouri law, the Missouri Pacific Railroad had no interest in the land and had nothing it could sell. The only "interest" the Missouri Pacific Railroad had to sell was the interest created by operation of the federal Trails Act. See Town of Grantwood Vill. v. Mo. Pac. R.R. Co., 95 F.3d 654 (8th Cir. 1996). Essentially, the Trails Act created an easement interest that the Missouri Pacific could sell and donate for which it received a tax deduction. This same interest was then resold and leased by the private trail group for a substantial profit. The proposed $1.6 million sale did not go through. When the park department learned that the trail group was trying to reap a $1.3 million windfall from the sale, the sale was canceled. See Leiser, supra. However, the private trail group still received substantial funds from utilities for use of the corridor. See Illig. v. United States, 58 Fed. Cl. 619, 623–24 (2003).

[45] See Leiser, supra note 44.

lion for the difference.[46] The private trail group also received at least $200,000 from a utility company in payment for licensing a high-power electric line built on the property.[47] The private trail group then leased (for an undisclosed amount) the trail to the county park department.[48] The private trail group also tried to sell the two-mile segment of the rail line to the park department for $1.6 million.[49] The park department and private trail group received funds from the state transportation department (a part of which are from the federal government) to develop a trail across this two-mile long segment. Seven years after the NITU was issued, and three years after the lawsuit was filed in the CFC, the property owners were paid almost $4.7 million for the value of their land, $2.7 million in interest, and $800,000 in reimbursed attorney fees and litigation expenses.[50] The amount the DOJ paid in costs and expenses in this case is unknown.

So, this two-mile segment of recreational trail cost the federal government more than $10 million.[51] Additionally, the DOJ paid its own attorneys salaries and overhead, and it paid the government's litigation expenses, including appraisal fees and any federal funds appropriated to build the trail. The cost to the taxpayers is more than $5 million per mile.

The economics of this single two-mile segment illustrate how miserably inefficient and costly the Trails Act is in its current form. Had the federal government, directly or through the county park department, acquired the land, paid the landowners upfront, and built the trail, it could have been accomplished more quickly and at one-half the expense to taxpayers. This case also illustrates how private trail groups are able to use the Trails Act to make millions in profits by selling trail corridors to county or state parks departments and granting utility easements over the land, all at the expense of the American taxpayer and property owners.

V. THE TRAILS ACT CREATES A LEGAL PURGATORY FOR PROPERTY OWNERS WHEN A NITU IS ISSUED BUT A TRAIL USE AGREEMENT HAS NOT BEEN REACHED WITH A RESPONSIBLE TRAIL GROUP

In some cases the Trails Act results in a well-managed, attractive recreational trail that is maintained and managed by a responsible trail group. Unfortunately, in many cases the results are different. For many landowners, the STB's issuance of a NITU is the beginning of a nightmare that relegates their land to a legal purgatory.

The Trails Act has created a nightmare for the Ladd family and their neighboring ranchers in southern Arizona.[52] The Ladd family has owned a ranch on the Arizona-Mexico border since Teddy Roosevelt originally granted their family a land patent.[53] An abandoned eighty-mile long rail spur the El Paso & Southwestern Railroad Company once used to haul freight crosses their ranch.[54] Years ago, monsoon floods washed out the rail line, and the STB authorized the railroad to abandon the rail line and the rails and ties were removed. The now-abandoned rail line parallels the U.S.–Mexican border for forty miles and then turns north and runs forty miles toward Tucson.[55] Trail groups have expressed, and continue to express, interest in a possible trail on the forty-mile north-south segment.[56] However, more than three years after the NITU was issued, no trail has been built.[57] The abandoned railroad ballast provides an easy route for drug smugglers and illegal immigrants to enter the United States. The Ladds have tried to fence and build barriers across the abandoned rail line, but the border patrol and smugglers continue to cut the fence and remove the barriers.[58] The neglected railroad bed also has caused flooding of the Ladds' adjoining ranch property.[59] Because the Trails Act perpetuates an otherwise abandoned easement, the Ladds lack the ability to exclude others from this land.

National Public Radio reported in April 2010 on the murder of Robert Krentz, the Ladd's neighbor and fellow rancher. Mr. Krentz was "shot and killed along with his dog—presumably by a drug smuggler." NPR described how trails in this border community are now used by drug smugglers and illegal immigrants. "A century and a half ago, the Apache warrior Geronimo used the area's trails to elude the U.S. cavalry for decades. Now, the same trails are corridors for drug cartels using illegal immigrants who can't afford to pay for a guide."[60] NPR reported, "Ladd says he has counted 47 groups crossing onto his land in just the past three weeks—more than 300 people."

The Ladd family is not alone. Jerramy Pankratz is a Kansas landowner near Wichita.[61] The Trails Act was invoked to convert an abandoned ten-mile long rail spur to a recreational trail.[62] Butler County, Kansas used the Trails Act to acquire the easement from the railroad.[63] Trains have not run over the land in more than a decade and the rails and ties have been removed.[64] Since it reached a Trail Use Agreement on June 3, 2005, the County has done nothing to the land other than post several signs saying it is a "trail."[65] The STB filings suggest that the real reason the County was interested in acquiring the easement was not to develop a trail, but rather to profit from selling an easement across the land to a fiber-optic firm.[66]

The abandoned rail line has been neglected and is now used by motorcycles and other recreational off-road vehicles. The adjoining landowners complained about litter and wanted to restrict access to this strip of land. The county sent the property owners a letter denying them any use of the land over which the county now claimed an easement under the Trails Act. The county wrote, "[Y]ou do not have the right to make any improvements to the land within the right of way (including fencing, erecting structures, or grading out the rail bed). . . . [Y]ou can clean out the right of way of weeds, debris, etc.; however, no further improvements can be made."[67]

Totally apart from taking these landowners' state law ownership of this strip of land, the Trails Act has created a situation in which their remaining

VI. ALMOST EVERY TIME IT IS INVOKED, THE TRAILS ACT TAKES A CITIZEN'S LAND

It is now settled law that in the great majority of cases, the Trails Act operates to take a compensable interest in land.

A. Railroads Typically Hold Only An Easement In Land Used For A Rail Line

Justice Brennan observed in Preseault v. United States (Preseault II)[68] that "many railroads do not own their rights-of-way outright but rather hold them under easements or similar property interests . . . [and] frequently the easements provide that the property reverts to the abutting landowner upon abandonment of rail operations."[69] As noted by the Florida court in Davis v. MCI Telecommunications Corp.,[70] "Except to site a station house or similar land use here and there, the railroads had no need or desire for any interest except 'right-of-way.'"[71] Likewise, in Dean v. MOD Properties, Ltd.,[72] another Florida court noted, "[O]nly an easement is needed to lawfully construct and maintain a road right-of-way on and over land."[73]

[73] Id. at 434. Danaya C. Wright, an expert hired by the government to argue against landowners' right to be paid compensation in Trails Act cases, testified before the STB:

> I have examined over probably 3,000 and my students and I have examined over 7,000 railroad deeds from the 19th century, and I can attest that over 80 percent of those from states like Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Indiana, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Idaho, and Washington are clear, unambiguous fee simple absolute deeds in the railroads. Most of the remaining 20 percent were intended to be fee simple deeds, but contain what would later become in this later period of case law ambiguous elements, like use of the term "right-of-way."

Twenty-Five Years of Railbanking (testimony of Danaya C. Wright, Univ. of Fla. Levin School of Law), supra note 10, at 170–71.

Ms. Wright bases this statement on her research involving law students reviewing deeds and opining whether the instrument granted a fee simple interest or an easement. Any conclusion based upon this method of reviewing railroad conveyances is of dubious value. The more appropriate method would be to review cases in which the conveyance instruments by which a rail line was established actually were litigated. Whether a judge interprets an instrument as conveying an easement or fee simple, absolute title is more meaningful than

The Federal Circuit has construed instruments conveying a "right of way" to a railroad as granting the railroad only an easement to use the land for the construction and operation of a rail line, even when the instrument otherwise purported to convey a fee simple estate in the land and did not use the term right of way.[74] In Preseault v. United States (Preseault III), the court considered the "Manwell deed." The Federal Circuit ruled, "The deed appears to be the standard form used to convey a fee simple title from grantor to grantee. But did it? . . . [D]espite the apparent terms of the deed indicating a transfer in fee, the legal effect was to convey only an easement."[75]

Despite more than a century of settled law in almost every state holding that an instrument granting a right-of-way to a railroad grants the railroad only an easement, the government still frequently argues that such an instrument conveyed the railroad a fee simple estate in the land. Courts rightly reject such an interpretation. For example, in Rogers v. United States,[76] the court properly applied this principle and rejected the government's argument. "[T]he conveyance does not refer to the outright transfer of land; it refers to a 'right of way for railroad purposes over and across the . . . parcels of land,' thereby indicating that the grantor retained an interest in the land referenced in the conveyance and granted an easement to [the railroad]."[77]

Many states have provisions in their state constitutions or statutes that specify that a railroad corporation obtains only an easement to use the land, even when the document purported to be a conveyance in fee simple absolute.[78] For example, the Kansas Supreme Court repeatedly has held a rail-what a first-year law school student might think. When we consult a judge's view of these instruments, we find Justice Brennan's observation validated. For example, in Miller v. United States, 67 Fed. Cl. 542 (2005), the rail line involved more than 100 separate parcels of land. In only two of these properties did the court find that the railroad had acquired fee simple absolute title. In Hash v. United States, 403 F.3d 1308 (Fed. Cir. 2005), the court found the vast majority of an 83.1 mile-long right of way to be only an easement. Thus, Ms. Wright's conclusion that railroads acquire fee simple estate in the land upon which they build a rail line is wrong in practice and is based upon faulty research. Further, Ms. Wright's statement that the term right-of-way is ambiguous is incorrect. Most courts, including the U.S. Supreme Court, when confronted with the term right-of-way, rule that it is the grant of an easement, not a conveyance of a fee simple estate in the land itself.

road obtains only an easement in a strip of land used for a rail line, no matter what the conveyance document states.[79]

In Penn Central Corp. v. U.S.R.R. Vest Corp.,[80] Judge Posner referred to the fundamental presumption (recognized in almost every state) that a railroad's interest in land used for a rail line is only an easement granting the railroad use of the land, not a fee simple estate in the land itself. Judge Posner explained the public policy underlying this presumption:

> The presumption is that a deed to a railroad or other right of way company (pipeline company, telephone company, etc.) conveys a right of way, that is, an easement, terminable when the acquirer's use terminates, rather than a fee simple. . . Transaction costs are minimized by undivided ownership of a parcel of land, and such ownership is facilitated by the automatic reuniting of divided land once the reason for the division has ceased. If the railroad holds title in fee simple to a multitude of skinny strips of land now usable only by the owner of the surrounding or adjacent land, then before the strips can be put to their best use there must be expensive and time-consuming negotiation between the railroad and its

[79] The Kansas Supreme Court has written:

> [W]hen land is devoted to railroad purposes it is immaterial whether the railroad company acquired it by virtue of an easement, by condemnation, right-of-way, deed or other conveyance. If or when it ceases to be used for railway purposes, the land concerned returns to its prior status as an integral part of the freehold to which it belonged prior to its subjection to use for railway purposes [citation omitted]. This court has uniformly held that railroads do not own fee titles to narrow strips taken as right-of-way, regardless of whether they are taken by condemnation or right-of-way deed. The rule is in conformity with this state's long-standing public policy and gives full effect to the intent of the parties who execute right-of-way deeds rather than going through lengthy and expensive condemnation proceedings.

It is important to distinguish between a strip of land upon which a railroad corporation builds a rail line and a parcel of land a railroad acquires for other uses. For example, a railroad may acquire fee simple title to parcels of land purchases for depots, grain elevators, stations, and similar improvements. (The railroad's interest in land used for these can also be an easement.).

> neighbor—that or the gradual extinction of the railroad's interest through the operation of adverse possession. It is cleaner if the railroad's interest simply terminates upon the abandonment of railroad service. A further consideration is that railroads and other right of way companies have eminent domain powers, and they should not be encouraged to use those powers to take more than they need of another person's property—more, that is, than a right of way.[81]

The public policy identified by Judge Posner is an extension of the policy disfavoring creation of "strips" or "gores" of land identified by Judge Taft. Judge Taft noted this in his decision in Paine v. Consumers Freight Forwarding & Storage Co:[82]

> "The existence of 'strips or gores' of land along the margin of non-navigable lakes, to which the title may be held in abeyance for indefinite periods of time, is as great an evil as are 'strips and gores' of land along highways or running streams. The litigation that may arise therefrom after long years, or the happening of some unexpected event, is equally probable, and alike vexatious in each of the cases, and that public policy which would seek to prevent this by a construction that would carry the title to the center of a highway, running stream, or non-navigable lake that may be made a boundary of the lands conveyed applies indifferently, and with equal force, to all of them. It would seem, also, that whatever inference might arise from the presumed intention of the parties against the reservation of the land underlying the water would be as strong in one case as in either of the others."

> which then become valuable by reason of an abandonment of the public use, have led courts to strained constructions to include the fee of such gores and strips in deeds of the abutting lots. And modern decisions are even more radical in this regard than the older cases.[83]

The Trails Act exacerbates this concern about legally "orphaned" strips and gores of land. As the Arizona ranchers in Ladd, the Kansas farmers in Biery, and many landowners in other Trails Act taking cases can attest, perpetuating an easement across their land can be an evil.

B. An Easement Granted a Railroad for the Operation of a Railway Does Not Include the Right of a Non-Railroad to Use the Land for Public Recreation

When a railroad stops using a rail line and removes the tracks and ties, the easement is abandoned according to the law in essentially every state.[84] Literally hundreds of decisions of the various state supreme courts and courts of appeal hold that a railroad has abandoned an easement when the railroad no longer runs trains across the land and removes the tracks and ties.[85]

The concurring opinion noted that "[w]hile it is not disputed that an easement will not be extinguished through mere non-use, removing the tracks and switches from a railway cannot be termed non-use. Other states have passed statutes expressly providing that a railroad is abandoned when the railroad is authorized to cease rail service over the line and removes the rails and ties.[86]

The DOJ often cites Chevy Chase Land Co. v. United States,[87] Washington Wildlife Preservation, Inc. v. State,[88] and Moody v. Allegheny Valley Land Trust[89] for the proposition that a railroad easement includes the right to use the land for a public recreational trail or that a railroad easement is not abandoned when the land is converted to a public recreational trail. These cases do not so hold. In Chevy Chase Land, Washington Wildlife, and Moody, each court specifically held that the easements in those cases—which were acquired by voluntary conveyance and not condemnation—were not limited to use of the land for a railroad. In Washington Wildlife, the court premised its holding upon the finding that:

> It is assumed that the deeds conveyed only an easement. Significantly, however, none of the deeds expressly limit the easement to railroad purposes, provide that the interest conveyed terminates if use for railroad purposes ceases, or provide that the easement would exist only for so long as the right-of-way was used for railroad purposes. While the grantors were undoubtedly aware that a railroad would be constructed on the land, none of the deeds limit the use to railroad purposes.[90]

Moody involved landowners suing a railroad and a private trail group for trespass.[91] This case was not a Fifth Amendment takings case against the federal government; instead the plaintiffs' objective was to prevent the federal Trails Act from preempting their reversionary interest in their land. The Moody plaintiffs wanted their land returned, and they wanted a state court to issue an order barring a federally authorized trail group from using their property.[92]

As an initial matter, we note that the Moody appellants were in the wrong court. Because the Trails Act preempts state law, a state court does not possess the authority to hear a trespass action against a trail group.[93] The Moody plaintiffs should have addressed their taking claim to the federal courts.[94]

The four-judge majority in Moody held that the "plain language" of the easement was for a "Road" across the land, which was a broadly stated right-of-way across the land.[95] The majority held that the "broad terms" of the easement did not limit it to use of the land for a rail line.[96] On this basis, the majority held use of the land for a public trail was within the broadly stated grant of an easement for a road.[97]

Given its finding that the easement was granted for a road, the Moody majority held that interim trail use was "not a departure from the broadly-stated terms of the easement."[98] In so holding, the majority reached the same unremarkable conclusion that was reached in Chevy Chase Land and Washington Wildlife: an easement that is not limited to use of the land for the operation of a railroad may be used for purposes other than operating a railroad across the land.[99]

The Federal Circuit had certified several questions for decision by the Court of Appeals of Maryland,[100] that state's highest court. The Federal Circuit read the response of the Court of Appeals of Maryland, in Chevy Chase Land, as:

> The court unanimously held that the 1911 conveyance was an easement, and held that the terms of the original conveyance were sufficiently broad to embrace its use as a recreational trail. . . . Citing its law, the court held that since the easement is not limited in scope to railroad purposes, and embraces the current trail use, "a party alleging abandonment must show more than an intent to abandon railroad service."[101]

Public recreational use of land by a non-railroad (or even by a railroad) is not a "railroad purpose." The Oxford English Dictionary defines recreation as "an activity or pastime pursued"[102] and trail as "a beaten track or path or track, esp. in a wild or uninhabited region. Also, a marked route through countryside, around a town, etc., indicating points of interest or historical significance."[103] Hiking is defined as "to walk vigorously,"[104] and biking is described as "ride on a bike."[105] Concessionaire is defined as "[t]he holder of a concession or grant, esp. of the use of land or trading rights."[106] None of these terms includes or references anything that can be remotely characterized as relating to the operation of a railroad.

Congress has defined a railroad as follows: "The term 'railroad' means common carrier by railroad engaged in the transportation of individuals or property or owner of trackage facilities leased by such a common carrier."[107] State law also defines railroad in similar manner.[108]

The Federal Circuit, in Toews v. United States,[109] recognized that recreational activities are very different from those of a railroad:

> [I]t appears beyond cavil that use of these easements for a recreational trail—for walking, hiking, biking, picnicking, frisbee playing, with newly-added tarmac pavement, park benches, occasional billboards, and fences to enclose the trailway—is not the same use made by a railroad, involving tracks, depots, and the running of trains.[110]

No court—state or federal—has ever accepted the DOJ's argument that public recreational use of land by a non-railroad is within the limited railroad purposes allowed under an easement granted to a railroad for the construction and operation of a rail line.

C. Railbanking Is Not a Railroad Purpose

The government argued in Preseault III[111] that "railbanking" and recreational trail use were railroad purposes within the scope of the easement granted for the operation of a railroad under state law (in that case, Vermont law). The Federal Circuit rejected this argument, stating, "We find no support in Vermont law for the proposition . . . that the scope of an easement limited to railroad purposes should be read to include public recreational hiking and biking trails."[112]

In Glosemeyer v. United States[113] the government argued railbanking and recreational trail use were railroad purposes under Missouri law. The Court of Federal Claims rejected this argument, noting that "trail use, by itself, would not constitute a railroad purpose. The transportation use contemplated by a railroad purpose would clearly be the movement of trains over rails. Recreational hiking, jogging and cycling are not connected with railroad use in any meaningful way."[114] The court also stated:

> The term 'railroad purposes' . . . does not encompass other forms of transportation, such as walking or bicycling. . . . The proposed development of a hiking, biking, cross-country skiing, and nature trail is completely unrelated to the operation of a railway and consistent only with an intent to wholly and permanently cease railway operations.[115]

The concurrence in Preseault III[116] likewise stated:

> Realistically, nature trails are for recreation, not transportation. Thus, when the State sought to convert the easement into a recreational trail, it exceeded the scope of the original easement and caused a reversion.
> . . . [T]he State's transparent attempt to retain property condemned for a narrow transportation use crumbled when it converted that property to a recreational use. . . . [T]he United States and Vermont have converted a right to use > the [landowners'] land for a railroad into a right to hold the land in perpetuity. The vague notion that the State may at some time in the future return the property to the use for which it was originally granted, does not override its present use of that property inconsistent with the easement. That conversion demands compensation.[117]

The Oxford English Dictionary does not define railbanking. The term does not even appear in the text of the Trails Act.[118] Railbanking is the shorthand term that describes the operation of section 1247(d) of the 1983 Amendments to the Trails Act.[119]

Railbanking is "the conversion and use of the right of way for non-railroad purposes."[120] Railbanking does not refer to situations in which the railroad that had been using the rail line (or some other railroad corporation) continues to hold an interest in the land but simply chooses not to run trains over the railway. Railbanking also does not refer to the situation where a railroad company is holding a railroad easement over property with plans to build or construct a railway over the easement at some time in the future. Railbanking is not even the situation in which a non-railroad is holding the easement with a plan or hope of restoring railroad service across the land. By definition, railbanking is the use of a former rail line by a non-railroad for public recreational purposes with the possibility that at some indefinite time in the future, the STB may authorize some unidentified railroad to build a new rail line on that land.[121]

Before any rail line may be railbanked and converted to recreational trail use, railroad use over the rail line first must be abandoned. Abandonments are governed by 49 U.S.C., sections 10903 through 10904, which allow a rail carrier to abandon an existing line only if the STB finds "that the present or future public convenience and necessity require or permit the abandonment or discontinuance."[122] To assess "the present or future public convenience, the [STB] weighs the potential harm to affected shippers and communities against the burden of continued operation on the railroad and on interstate commerce."[123]

"The [STB] views abandonment and conversion as separate proceedings."[124] As a matter of federal law, railbanking can occur only after both the railroad and the STB first have determined that the easement is no longer needed for railroad service,[125] more than two years have passed since the easement was last used for railroad service,[126] and a non-railroad agrees to use the land for a public recreational purpose.

Although the term rail is used in the word railbanking, the use of the land during the time it is railbanked has absolutely nothing to do with a railroad. No railroad has an interest in the land.[127] The railroad tracks and ties are removed from the land.[128] A nonrailroad is using it for a purpose that has nothing to do with trains. At most there is a vague existential notion that perhaps someday a railroad will return.

"[The government] contends that holding out the possibility of a reactivation, even if remote and indefinite, is a railroad purpose in and of itself. This future potentiality thus becomes a present railroad purpose in the view of the [g]overnment."[129] The CFC rejected this contention: "In sum, neither component of railbanking—the preservation of the rail line for future use nor the 'interim' use of the easement as a recreational trail—constitutes a railroad purpose under Missouri law."[130] To contend "railbanking" is a railroad purpose recalls Alice's conversation in Wonderland.

The parody, Lawyers Handbook, teaches that "[w]ith regard to definitions, do not hesitate to define things in improbable ways. A good lawyer feels no compunction about defining 'person' to mean 'corporations, partnerships, and livestock'; 'automobile' to mean 'airplanes, submarines, and bicycles'; and 'cash' to mean 'stocks, bonds, and whiskey.'"[132]

Were we to follow the counsel of Humpty Dumpty or the Lawyers Handbook it might be possible to contend that a locomotive is a "bike," a railroad is a "hiking trail," and railbanking—the non-use of an abandoned right of way by a non-railroad—is a "railroad purpose."

Such use of language, however, empties words of their meaning and is an attempt to do precisely that which the Supreme Court has said the sovereign cannot do—redefine state property interests by ipse dixit in an effort to avoid paying compensation. The sovereign may indeed redefine state property interests. But, when doing so destroys a citizen's property interest, it must pay just compensation.

D. The 1983 Amendments to the Trails Act Were Adopted Precisely Because Railbanking Is Not a Railroad Purpose Under State Law

When the DOJ (or others) argue that both railbanking and recreational trail use are railroad purposes, the government is attempting to bootstrap into state law a concept invented by Congress in the 1983 Amendments to the Trails Act. This effort fails for the additional reason that it misinterprets the intent and meaning of the 1983 Trails Act Amendments. Congress adopted the 1983 Amendments precisely because it understood that railbanking and recreational trail use were not railroad purposes under state law. If railbanking and recreational trail use were railroad purposes under state law, the 1983 Amendments to the Trails Act would have been unnecessary.

The Supreme Court and the courts of appeal have detailed at length the intent and operation of the 1983 Amendments and how the Trails Act operates to work a taking of landowners' reversionary rights in their property.[133]

Congress itself has made clear that it intended the 1983 Amendments to the Trails Act to preempt state law and that, when the Trails Act operated to preempt property rights enjoyed by landowners under state law, just compensation would be paid to the landowners. Congressman Barr, then Chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee holding hearings into the Trails Act, noted:

> At first glance, it may appear Congress did not consider the fact that if the railroad land was not transferred in fee simple it may belong to the property owner, and not the railroad. However, Congress intended the railbanking aspect of this Federal law would preempt State law and hold the land essentially in perpetuity, until possible rail reactivation.
> In the 1996 en banc decision in Preseault v. United States, involving the same plaintiffs as in the Supreme Court case I just mentioned, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit held that railroad abandonment constituted a per se taking, and therefore would require payment of just compensation to the affected landowners, under the Fifth Amendment.[134]

Here is the point: It is beyond dispute that Congress, the U.S. Supreme Court, and the various courts of appeal all understand that the railbanking provision of the 1983 Trails Act amendments was intended to preempt contrary state law and, in so doing, to take a property owner's reversionary interest in their land. If railbanking and interim recreational trail use were understood to be railroad purposes under existing state law, there would have been no "problem" Congress needed to fix with the 1983 Amendments.

VII. THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT MAY NOT ESCAPE ITS CONSTITUTIONAL OBLIGATION TO PAY JUST COMPENSATION BY REDEFINING OR SHIFTING THE DEFINITION OF PROPERTY

The government argued in Preseault I that the Trails Act did not take a compensable interest in the land because the government had redefined railroad to include "trail use" as a matter of federal regulatory law.[135] The Second Circuit accepted this argument,[136] but the Supreme Court, Preseault II, unanimously rejected this view.[137] Justice O'Connor concurred separately, joined by Justice Scalia and Justice Kennedy, to emphasize the point that property interests are created by state law. Justice O'Connor wrote:

> In determining whether a taking has occurred, "we are mindful of the basic axiom that '[p]roperty interests . . . are not created by the Constitution. Rather, they are created and their dimensions are defined by existing rules or understandings that stem from an independent source such as state law.'" . . . Determining what interest petitioners would have enjoyed under Vermont law, in the absence of the ICC's recent actions, will establish whether petitioners possess the predicate property interest that must underlie any takings claim.[138]

The Supreme Court has rejected the notion that either Congress or a state may redefine existing property interests without violating the Fifth Amendment's obligation to pay just compensation for the taking of property.[139]

The government also argued that because the railroad held a perpetual easement, landowners are "not deprived of a property interest by [the Trails Act]. . . [it] takes nothing and changes nothing. [The Trails Act] leaves the landowners where they would be if the ICC had ordered the railroad to keep running."[140]

The courtroom broke into laughter when, in response to this argument, Chief Justice Rehnquist commented, "That is like saying if my aunt were a man she would be my uncle."[141] Justice Scalia similarly responded:

> The ICC didn't order the railroad to keep running. Saying the railroad could have continued using [the land] for rail purposes so you really haven't lost anything. In fact, they

Yet, the DOJ, in its defense of the government taking citizens' land without paying compensation, continues to make variations of this argument and invite courts to engage in such a judicial taking for the benefit of the federal government. The Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments prohibit this attempted end-run around the constitutional obligation to pay compensation.

Justice Stewart's concurrence in Hughes v. Washington[143] provides clear authority against the so-called "shifting public use" argument the government advocates. Justice Stewart emphasized that a property owner has a valid Fifth Amendment claim when a state court departs from settled law to redefine property interests:

> [T]o the extent that [the Washington Supreme Court's decision] constitutes a sudden change in state law, unpredictable in terms of the relevant precedents, no such deference would be appropriate. For a State cannot be permitted to defeat the constitutional prohibition against taking property without due process of law by the simple device of asserting retroactively that the property it has taken never existed at all.[144]

Webb's Fabulous Pharmacies v. Beckwith[145] is also instructive. In Webb, the Supreme Court's analysis focused more on the Florida Supreme Court's opinion than on the action of the Florida legislature. The Court held "[n]either the Florida [l]egislature by statute, nor the Florida courts by judicial decree, may accomplish the result the county seeks simply by recharacterizing the principal [private funds paid into court pending settlement of litigation] as 'public money' because it is held temporarily by the court."[146] The Court concluded with the rule (affirmed in Preseault II in the context of the Trails Act) that "a State, by ipse dixit, may not transform private property into public property without compensation."[147]

VIII. THE FIFTH AMENDMENT REQUIRES THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT TO PAY THE LANDOWNER JUST COMPENSATION FOR THE REVERSIONARY INTEREST TAKEN BY THE TRAILS ACT

Originally, the ICC argued the Trails Act did not take the reversionary owners' interest in land upon which the abandoned rail line had once been located.[148] The ICC was, of course, wrong on this point.[149] The U.S. Supreme Court and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit and Federal Circuit each have rejected the ICC's original position and ruled that the Trails Act can and does operate to take a landowner's reversionary interest in their land.[150] A taking caused by the Trails Act is a per se physical taking

The advocacy group Rails-to-Trails Conservancy is fond of characterizing the Preseault II and Preseault III decisions as "non-precedential." For example, in her written testimony presented to the STB, Marianne Wesley Fowler, Senior Vice President of Federal Relations for the Rails-to-Trails Conservancy, testified:

> There has been much sound and fury over the purported impact of railbanking orders on the putative "property rights" of adjacent landowners, or so-called "reversionary property owners." These adjacent landowners point to a questionable, and, most importantly, non-precedential decision rendered by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit [in Preseault III].

See Written Testimony of M. Fowler, at STB hearing, supra note 10, at 7.

This statement is, frankly, absurd. To characterize the decisions of a unanimous U.S. Supreme Court and a majority of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit sitting en for which the Fifth Amendment requires compensation.[151] (The distinction between a per se physical taking and a regulatory taking is discussed in Part IX.B.)

In Preseault II, Justice Brennan, writing for a unanimous Supreme Court, explained the nature of the taking that resulted from the Trails Act:

> This language [of 16 U.S.C. section 1247(d)] gives rise to a takings question in the typical rails-to-trails case because many railroads do not own their rights-of-way outright but rather hold them under easements or similar property interests. While the terms of these easements and applicable state law vary, frequently the easements provide that the property reverts to the abutting landowner upon abandonment of rail operations.[152]

This compensable taking occurs when the STB issues a Notice of Interim Trail Use. This event is what triggers the taking.[153] Solicitor General Kagen affirmed that a compensable Trails Act taking occurs when a NITU banc as "non precedential" is to make a statement that is jurisprudentially illiterate. Whether one agrees or disagrees with the decisions in Preseault II and Preseault III, they are settled law. The Federal Circuit itself has dismissed this mischaracterization of its decision in Preseault III:

> Since there was a written concurrence by two of the majority judges, the Government throughout its brief insists on referring to the opinion of the en banc court in Preseault as a "plurality" opinion, presumably to weaken its precedential value. Even a cursory reading of the concurrence shows that there was no disagreement on any of the issues, as well as on the result. Whether denominated as a "concurrence" or as "additional views," an appellation used in other cases under similar circumstances, the holding of the case reflects the considered view of a substantial majority of the court.

Cir. 2004). A Trails Act taking is a physical taking as in Loretto v. Teleprompter Manhattan CATV Corp., 458 U.S. 419 (1982) (stating permanent physical occupation authorized by government is a taking regardless of the public interest it may serve); *Kaiser-Aetna v. is issued, not when—or if—a trail is actually built.[154] The taking is of the property owner's reversionary interest in the land. This taking occurs when the STB "preempts" and "appropriates" the owner's reversionary interest by issuing a NITU—whether or not a trail subsequently is built on their land.[155]

IX. THE COMPENSABLE TAKING OCCURS WHEN THE STB ISSUES THE NITU EVEN IF THE RAILROAD HAS NOT YET CONSUMMATED ABANDONMENT AND EVEN IF A TRAIL GROUP HAS NOT YET ACQUIRED THE RIGHT TO BUILD A TRAIL ACROSS THE LAND

A. A Taking Occurs When the NITU Is Issued, Even If the Railroad Has Not Yet Consummated Abandonment of the Rail Line

The date of taking is important because it is the date when the claim accrues.[156] The date of claim accrual determines several important issues in any Trails Act taking case. The date of claim accrual is: (1) the date when the statute of limitations begins to run,[157] (2) the date when a party must be the owner of the land that has been taken—that is a property owner who sold the land prior to the date of taking or acquired title to the land after the date of taking is not eligible to make a claim for compensation;[158] (3) the date when the government's obligation to pay interest begins to accrue;[159] and, (4) the date when property value is determined for the purpose of establishing just compensation.[160] In his opinion in Palazzolo, Justice Stevens noted that "[p]recise specification of the moment a taking occurred and of the nature of the property interest taken is necessary in order to determine an appropriately compensatory remedy."[161]

The Federal Circuit wrote in Preseault III, "[W]e find the question of abandonment is not the defining issue, since whether abandoned or not the government's use of the property for a public trail constitutes a new, unauthorized use."[162] The Federal Circuit reiterated this point in Toews:

> Further, it is the government's view that, under California law, there was no abandonment or extinguishment of the easements caused by the federal actions under section 8(d) of the [Trails Act]. [T]he trial court concluded that, as a factual matter, the railroad's management had acted in an unequivocal and decisive manner clearly showing an intention to abandon that section of the line . . . However, just as the trial court itself indicated that its conclusion on this matter was not necessary to the result reached, for the reasons that follow we need not definitively decide this issue either.[163]

The Federal Circuit expressly held the landowners' taking claims arose upon issuance of the NITU, even though "the railroad continued to use the right-of-way for railroad purposes after the NITU was issued" and the railroad had not abandoned the right of way.[164] The court stated:

> But even if under Kansas law, the reversion would not occur until after federal authorization of abandonment, that state law reversion was still delayed by the issuance of the NITU, and the claim still accrued with the issuance of the NITU. It similarly makes no difference that the railroad use may have continued after the NITU issued. The > termination of railroad use was still delayed by the NITU.[165]

In both the main case in Barclay and the second, Renewal Body Works Inc. v. United States,[166] the landowners argued that a Trails Act taking does not occur until the railroad easement has been abandoned and the property converted to recreational trail use. The Renewal landowners argued their "claim did not accrue until [they were] physically ousted from the property when trail use began."[167] The Federal Circuit rejected this argument, writing, "The barrier to reversion [of the Renewal landowners' property] is the NITU, not physical ouster from possession."[168] Similarly, the court held:

> [The Barclay landowners] insist that the NITU would not itself block a reversion if the railroad continued to use the right-of-way for railroad purposes after the NITU was issued. They argue that . . . the taking can occur only after federal law authorized abandonment—that is, when the railroad ceases operations and the trail operator assumes physical possession. They thus urge that the trail operator's physical occupation, and not the Meadowlark trail NITU, blocked reversion.[169]

The Federal Circuit wrote that "state law reversion was still delayed by the issuance of the NITU, and the claim still accrued with the issuance of the NITU."[170] The Federal Circuit held thusly even though the railroad had not yet consummated its abandonment of the rail line.[171]

In Barclay the Federal Circuit relied on its holding in Caldwell that a Trails Act taking "occurs when state law reversionary property interests that would otherwise vest in the adjacent landowners are blocked from so vesting."[172] The court in that case held "the appropriate triggering event for any takings claim under the Trails Act occurs when the NITU is issued."[173]

In Caldwell, the Federal Circuit held the Trails Act works only a single taking and this taking occurs when the original NITU is issued—not when the Trail Use Agreement is reached or a trail is subsequently constructed.[174] The Federal Circuit reaffirmed in Bright v. United States that the taking claim arose upon the STB's issuance of the NITU.[175] "A further effect of the NITU was to accrue an action for compensation by any affected landowners based on a Fifth Amendment taking."[176]

Solicitor General Kagen has embraced Caldwell as adopting a single "bright line one size fits all" role that the Trails Act taking occurs when the NITU is issued, even if no trail is yet established.[177] "It is true that, under Caldwell, landowners may seek compensation for an alleged taking immediately upon issuance of the NITU, even though no trail use agreement is reached, and any taking that may later be found would only have been temporary."[178]

B. The Trails Act Is a Per Se Physical Taking of the Owner's Property, Not a Regulatory Taking

In Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Mahon,[179] Justice Holmes wrote that "if regulation goes too far it will be recognized as a taking."[180] As Justice Scalia has noted, "[P]rior to Justice Holmes's exposition in [Mahon], it was generally thought that the Takings Clause reached only a 'direct appropriation' of property . . . or the functional equivalent of a 'practical ouster of [the owner's] possession.'"[181]

Since Mahon, taking jurisprudence has fallen into one of two categories. The first category—per se takings—involves government "acquisition"

In Portsmouth, Holmes wrote the government had taken the owner's land (a summer resort) when the government established a naval gun battery at a nearby fort and could fire the guns "over and across" the land. Id. at 329. There was no allegation the government ever had—or would—fire a projectile onto the land. Nonetheless this government action was a taking even though there was no physical invasion of the land itself.

of property or "practical ouster" of the owner. The second category involves government "regulation ban[ning] certain private uses of a portion of an owner's property."[182]

Per se takings are occasionally labeled physical. But, we need to be careful to not let the label define the category. Per se takings are not limited only to cases in which government physically invades an owner's land. Justice Holmes included the circumstance when an owner is "practically ousted" from possession in the category of "traditional" (what we now call per se) takings.

In Tahoe, the majority described per se takings as "when the government appropriates"[183] or obtains "an interest in property,"[184] and—of particular note—when the government "redefine[s] the range of interests included in the ownership of property."[185] All of these events can happen without any physical possession or occupation of the land by the government. In other words, there can be a per se taking without having government "boots on the ground."[186]

Per se takings occur when the government requires the owner to grant a public easement across their land. In Nollan v. California Coastal Commission[187] and Dolan v. City of Tigard,[188] the taking occurred when the government issued orders compelling fee owners to grant public easements across their lands in exchange for permits allowing them to develop their lands. In Kaiser-Aetna v. United States,[189] the taking occurred when the government issued an order that imposed a navigational servitude upon the property. In these three easement cases the compensable taking occurred before there was any physical occupation of the owner's land.

Per se takings also occur when government redefines property interests. For example, in Webb's Fabulous Pharmacies, Inc. v. Beckwith,[190] a law deeming interest on funds deposited with the court to be state property was a Fifth Amendment taking. The Court wrote, "A State, by ipse dixit, may not transform private property into public property without compensation."[191] The Court later elaborated on this holding in Phillips v. Washington Legal Foundation,[192] stating, "In other words, at least as to confiscatory regulations (as opposed to those regulating the use of property), a State may not sidestep the Takings Clause by disavowing traditional property interests long recognized under state law."[193]

In United States v. Security Industrial Bank,[194] the Court, in dicta, reasoned that a federal bankruptcy law that abrogated or invalidated state lien rights would be an unconstitutional per se taking if "applied retrospectively to destroy pre-enactment property rights."[195]

The government in this case argued that the law impairing the liens was a regulatory taking to be evaluated under Penn Central factors and not a classical per se taking.[196] The government further argued that in a classical or per se taking, "the government acquire[s] for itself the property in question while in [Security Industrial] the government has simply imposed a general economic regulation which in effect transfers the property interest from a private creditor to a private debtor."[197]

The Court in Security Industrial rejected the government's regulatory taking argument: "While the classical taking is of the sort the government describes, our cases show that takings analysis is not necessarily limited to outright acquisitions by the government for itself."[198] The Court noted that "[s]ince the government action here would result in a complete destruction of the property right of the secured party, the case fits but awkwardly into the analytical framework employed in Penn Central where government action affected some but not all of the 'bundle of rights.'"[199]

A significant factor common to per se takings (but not present in regulatory takings) is the government denying a landowner the right to exclude others from their property. The Court in Kaiser-Aetna stated, "we hold that the 'right to exclude,' so universally held to be a fundamental element of a property right, falls within this category of interests that the government cannot take without compensation."[200] In Nollan, the Court noted that "the right to exclude [is] 'one of the most essential sticks in the bundle of rights that are commonly characterized as property.'"[201]

In Tahoe, the Court noted this distinction between per se and regulatory takings: "A regulatory taking . . . does [not] dispossess the owner or affect her right to exclude others."[202]

The court in R.J. Widen Co. v. United States,[203] noted:

> [T]o constitute a taking under the Fifth Amendment it is not necessary that property be absolutely "taken" in the narrow sense of that word to come within the protection of this constitutional provision; it is sufficient if the action by > the government involves a direct interference with or disturbance of property rights.[204]

As these cases demonstrate, it is not necessary to have government "boots on the ground" for a per se taking to have occurred. A government act that destroys or impairs an owner's state law interest in property or effects a transfer of that interest to a third party by redefining the range of state law property interests is a per se taking.

In a per se taking the Fifth Amendment mandates that the government "has a categorical duty to compensate the former owner."[205] This duty applies > regardless of whether the interest that is taken constitutes an entire parcel or merely a part thereof. Thus, compensation is mandated when a leasehold is taken and the government occupies the property for its own purposes, even though that use is temporary . . . [The government] is required to pay for that share [of property taken] no matter how small.[206]

The second category of takings are regulatory takings—the spawn of Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Mahon.[207] The Supreme Court describes these takings as "regulations prohibiting private uses," and as arising from a "public program adjusting the benefits and burdens of economic life to promote the common good."[208]

"A regulatory taking, by contrast [with a per se taking,] does not give the government any right to use the property, nor does it dispossess the owner or affect her right to exclude others."[209] Typically, a regulatory taking claim involves land-use regulations and a permitting process.[210] As the Supreme Court observed, since Mahon, "neither a physical appropriation nor a public use has ever been a necessary component of a 'regulatory taking.'"[211]

The Penn Central factors are used to evaluate whether a regulatory taking is compensable. "When presented with a regulatory taking claim, [the] court analyzes three separate criteria: (1) the character of the governmental action; (2) the economic impact of the regulation on the claimant; and, (3) the extent that the regulation interferes with distinct investment-backed expectations of the property owner."[212]

1. Because the Trails Act Redefines and Effectively Eliminates the Landowner's Reversionary Interest It is a Per Se Taking

In Preseault I, the government argued that the Trails Act did not take a compensable interest in land because the government had redefined railroad purposes to include public trail use as a matter of federal regulatory law.[213] The Second Circuit accepted this argument.[214] The Supreme Court unanimously rejected this view, while affirming the Second Circuit on other grounds.[215]

The Supreme Court had previously rejected the contention that either Congress or a state may redefine existing property interests without violating the Fifth Amendment's obligation to pay just compensation for the taking of property.[216]

The Federal Circuit has described the fee owner's reversionary interest in their land as being "effectively eliminated,"[217] perpetually "precluded,"[218] or "destroyed."[219] The Supreme Court has clearly held that when the government "impairs," "redefines," or "destroys" an owner's interest in property it is a per se taking.[220]

The Federal Circuit has ruled Trails Act takings are physical—not regulatory—takings.[221] The Federal Circuit (sitting en banc) rejected the government's argument that the Trails Act involves a regulatory taking to be analyzed under Penn Central factors, stating that "[t]he trial court erred in accepting the government's effort to inject into the analysis of this physical taking case the question of the owner's 'reasonable expectations.'"[222]

2. The NITU Takes a Landowner's Interest in Land and Gives It to a Railroad

In United States v. General Motors Corp.,[223] the Court held that property "denote[s] the group of rights inhering in the citizen's relation to the physical thing, as the right to . . . dispose of it."[224]

A NITU takes a landowner's right to use or sell his or her reversionary interest and gives this right to a railroad. The railroad now has the right—by reason of the NITU and not state law—to sell an interest in the landowner's property.

This redistribution of wealth from landowners to railroad corporations is not inconsequential. In the classic property law analogy, the fee owner holds the full bundle of sticks, less one (an easement held by the railroad allowing the railroad to operate a railroad across the land). The Trails Act takes this entire bundle of sticks from the owner and gives them to the railroad to sell or donate for a tax deduction. The landowner is left with nominal title, but the railroad and trail user—by reason of this federal law—have gained "virtual" fee title to the land.

The owner of land subject to a NITU issued under the Trails Act is no different from the owners in Nollan when "the taking occurred when the state agency compelled the petitioners to provide an easement of public access. . . . That event—a compelled transfer of an interest in property—occurred after the petitioners had become the owner of the property and unquestionably diminished the value of petitioner's property."[225]

3. The Trails Act Takes a Landowner's Right to Exclude Others From His or Her Property

"[T]he right to exclude [others is] 'one of the most essential sticks in the bundle of rights that are commonly characterized as property.'"[226] Landowners whose property is subject to a NITU are in the same situation as was Florence Dolan, the property owner in Dolan:

> [T]he city wants to impose a permanent recreational easement upon petitioner's property. . . . Petitioner would lose all rights to regulate the time in which the public entered onto the greenway, regardless of any interference it might pose with her retail store. Her right to exclude would not be regulated, it would be eviscerated.[227]

The taking in Dolan occurred when the city sought to impose this burden on Mrs. Dolan's property, not when the pedestrian and bicycle pathway was actually created.[228] In Dolan—like Nollan—there had been no physical invasion of the property at the time the Supreme Court found the taking to have occurred.[229]

4. The Trails Act Takes a Landowner's State Law Right To A Quiet Title Action

When the STB issues a NITU, it perpetually extends the Trails Act's preemption of the landowner's reversionary interest until the STB's jurisdiction over the land terminates. The STB's jurisdiction is exclusive and plenary,[230] and section 8(d) of the Trails Act extends this jurisdiction to the land itself.[231] The Trails Act specifically preempts the landowner's right to pursue a quiet title action under state law.[232]

5. The Trails Act Is Not a Regulation of the Landowners' Interest in Their Land

Regulatory takings involve some limitation upon owners' use of their property. Regulatory taking claims arise commonly in the context of permitting schemes.[233]

An essential feature of these regulatory taking cases is that the owners retain title to their land and may make use of their property, subject to first obtaining a permit.[234] Of course, the permit process itself may rise to the level of a compensable temporary or permanent taking.[235]

The Trails Act, by contrast, does not regulate the owners' use of their land, nor does it impose a permitting requirement on the owners. The owners never receive notice that an NITU affecting their land has been issued and there is no opportunity for the landowners to seek a permit from the STB.[236] The Trails Act is an unqualified preemption of the owners' state law reversionary right to their property.

6. The Government Agrees Trails Act Takings Are Per Se, Not Regulatory, Takings

The government has acknowledged that Trails Act takings are per se physical, not regulatory takings. In Barclay, the government argued, "The Circuit has held that this conversion is not a regulatory taking. . . . Since the Court's precedent identifies this type of claim as a physical taking, the landowners' lengthy discussion of regulatory takings law is irrelevant. . . ."[237]

Similarly, the government noted in its Opposition to Petition for Rehearing en banc in Renewal Body Works:

> Unlike the usual physical occupation case, the landowner in a Trails Act takings case has already been deprived of exclusive possession. Thus, in a Trails Act taking case, the question is not when the owner loses the right to exclusively occupy the property, but rather, when the owner would otherwise have recovered full possession of the easement, were it not for operation of the Trails Act.[238]

The government stated in opposition to a rehearing en banc in Barclay, "The landowners' argument about the potential for a temporary regulatory takings claim is inapposite in the context of a rails-to-trails conversion, which this Court's precedent seems to have characterized as a physical takings claim."[239]

In Tahoe, the Court wrote, "[T]his longstanding distinction between acquisitions of property for public use, on the one hand, and regulations prohibiting private uses, on the other, makes it inappropriate to treat cases involving physical takings as controlling precedents for the evaluation of a claim that there has been a 'regulatory taking,' and vice versa."[240]

Thus, when considering the Trails Act, it is important to do so in light of the precedent established in per se taking cases and not try to analyze a Trails Act taking under the Penn Central factors, which apply only to regulatory takings.

C. A Trails Act Taking May Be Only Temporary

In Palazzolo, Justice Stevens wrote, "A taking is a discrete event, a governmental acquisition of private property for which the State is required to provide just compensation. Like other transfers of property, it occurs at a particular time, that time being the moment when the relevant property interest is alienated from its owner."[241]

Justice Stevens went on to note that the date of taking is important because "it is the person who owned the property at the time of taking that is entitled" to receive payment.[242] The date of taking is when the property taken is valued and "interest on the award runs from that date."[243] The date of taking is also important because it determines when the statute of limitations for an owner to bring their claim begins to run.

Prior to the Federal Circuit's decision in Caldwell, the DOJ and counsel for landowners accepted the date of the Trail Use Agreement as the date of taking.[244] As discussed in detail in Part IX.A, this date changed in Caldwell when the Federal Circuit announced a new rule—the date of taking for both permanent and temporary Trails Act takings claims was the date on which the STB issued the original NITU.[245] The Federal Circuit emphatically reaffirmed this holding in the consolidated cases of Barclay and Renewal.[246]

The Federal Circuit ruled that the fact that "subsequent events might render the NITU only temporary"[247] does not change the fact that the landowners' reversionary rights to their land were taken upon the issuance of the NITU.[248]

This discussion in Caldwell and Barclay is important because it affirms the point that a landowner's right to be paid compensation is fully ripe upon the STB issuing the NITU.[249] A property owner need not wait for the railroad to consummate its abandonment of the rail line or the trail group to build the trail.[250] Indeed, the lesson of Caldwell and Barclay is that if a property owner waits until the railroad has consummated abandonment or until the trail group has acquired its interest (whether by quit claim deed from the railroad or a private Trail Use Agreement), the statute of limitations may already have run and the landowner will be denied their constitutional right to be paid just compensation.

Even when the Trails Act temporarily takes a landowner's reversionary interest, compensation is due. Justice O'Connor noted in Preseault II that "[t]he Court recently concluded that the government's burdening of property for a distinct period, short of a permanent taking, may nevertheless mandate compensation."[251] Justice O'Connor referred to First English, where the Court held, "'[T]emporary' takings which, as here, deny a landowner all use of his property, are not different in kind from permanent takings, for which the Constitution clearly requires compensation."[252]

The Federal Circuit ruled similarly in Yuba Natural Resources v. United States[253] that the duration of a taking goes to the issue of damages, not whether a compensable taking has in fact occurred, stating: "The [Supreme] Court has recognized that temporary reversible takings should be analyzed

[248] The Federal Circuit made clear that a Trails Act taking may be either permanent or temporary depending upon whether a Trails Use Agreement is subsequently reached between the railroad and the trail user. See Caldwell at 1234. However, this issue—temporary versus permanent taking—is a question for the damages phase of a Trails Act taking case, not the liability phase. As the Federal Circuit made clear in Preseault III all Trails Act takings—whether temporary or permanent—are physical, not regulatory takings. See Preseault III, 100 F.3d 1525, 1540 (Fed. in the same constitutional framework applied to permanent irreversible takings and has fashioned appropriate remedies."[254]

In Caldwell, the Federal Circuit applied this principle to Trails Act takings:

> Thus, the NITU operates as a single trigger to several possible outcomes. It may, as in this case, trigger a process that results in a permanent taking in the event that a trail use agreement is reached and abandonment of the right-of-way is effectively blocked. . . . Alternatively, negotiations may fail, and the NITU would then convert into a notice of abandonment. In these circumstances, a temporary taking may have occurred. . . . The NITU marks the "finite start" to either temporary or permanent takings claims by halting abandonment and the vesting of state law reversionary interests when issued.[255]

The D.C. Circuit has agreed with this reasoning:

> Nor does the [ICC] offer support for its suggestion that the reversionary interests are not taken merely because they are postponed indefinitely rather than terminated outright. This proposition is similarly problematic; as the Supreme Court recently reminded, "Nothing in the Just Compensation Clause suggests that 'takings' must be permanent and irrevocable."[256]

X. THE TRAILS ACT FAILS TO PROVIDE A FAIR AND COST EFFICIENT METHOD FOR LANDOWNERS TO BE PAID THE COMPENSATION THEY ARE CONSTITUTIONALLY ENTITLED TO RECEIVE. THIS FAILURE SUBSTANTIALLY INCREASES THE COST OF THE TRAILS ACT TO TAXPAYERS

A. Landowners Never Receive Actual Notice Their Lands Have Been Taken

Originally, the limitations clock in a Trails Act taking did not begin to run until the Trail Use Agreement had been reached. But, in December 2004 the Federal Circuit announced a new rule that retroactively started this clock ticking many months, and—in some cases—years earlier, when the NITU was issued.[257]

A landowner whose property has been taken by a NITU is never given actual notice that the STB has been issued.[258] The NITU grants a trail group the right to negotiate with a railroad to acquire a new easement for a recreational trail over a property owner's land. These negotiations may take many years, with the NITU being extended repeatedly. In some cases, the NITU has been extended for more than ten years—well past the expiration of the seven-year limitations period.[259]

A landowner has no reason to know their land is subject to a NITU during the time between the STB issuing a NITU and the trail group beginning construction of a trail. While the STB has taken the landowner's reversionary right to his or her property, the landowner is never told about this secret taking. When the NITU is issued, the railroad has not yet consummated the agreement by which it conveys the easement to the trail group. Typically, the railroad salvages the tracks and ties during this negotiating period but there is no activity on the land inconsistent with a property owner's understanding that the rail line has been abandoned and the landowner's fee interest in the land now is unburdened by the former railroad easement. The trail group does not begin building a trail across the land until some time after the Trail Use Agreement has been reached. In many cases, the trail construction does not begin until many years after a Trail Use Agreement has been reached. Even the Trail Use Agreement is a secret document. Occasionally, after a Trail Use Agreement is reached, the railroad will record a quit claim deed. Should it do so, this deed would be the first recorded public document evidencing the taking. And, even this recordation does not really put a landowner on effective notice the property has been taken because the quit claim deeds used in rail-to-trail conversions describe the land as a railroad right-of-way between two designated mileposts.

B. There Is No Fair and Cost-Efficient Method for Landowners to Be Paid Compensation

When Congress created the Trails Act, even though Congress understood it would take some citizens' reversionary interest in their land, Congress did not provide a means to pay these landowners compensation when their land was taken. Instead, Congress left landowners with an inverse condemnation action under the Tucker Act[260] as the only means to vindicate their constitutional right to be paid compensation for the land taken from them. Claims under the Tucker Act have proven to be time consuming and expensive to bring and to defend.[261]

When the government takes land for a recreational trail it must pay (1) severance damages, which are calculated as the difference in value of the specific parcel of land before the taking (with no easements) and the value of the land after the taking (with two new easements on the property—one for public recreational use and a second easement held by the STB allowing it to authorize future building of a new rail line across the land); (2) attorneys fees and costs;[262] and (3) interest from the date the STB issues the NITU until compensation is finally paid.[263]

C. The Costly Nature of Tucker Act Claims Is Compounded By the Justice Department's Scorched Earth Litigation Strategy

As President Lincoln wrote, "It is as much the duty of Government to render prompt justice against itself, in favor of citizens, as it is to administer the same, between private individuals."[264]

Congress has been critical of the DOJ's litigation strategy in Trails Act taking cases. The House Judiciary Committee held hearings into the DOJ's handling of Trails Act taking claims[265] and the excessive cost and expense the government has paid to litigate Trails Act taking cases. During these hearings, witnesses described the DOJ's strategy as "unrestrained litigation."[266] In other Trails Act taking cases the court has criticized the DOJ for trying to re-litigate the same issue repeatedly and needlessly.[267] The CFC repeatedly has criticized the Justice Department for a similar scorched earth litigation strategy in the Winstar cases.[268]

Chief Judge of the CFC, Loren Smith, wrote:

> It is the obligation of the United States to do right. Every free government can be judged by the degree to which it respects the life, liberty and property of its citizens. The United States stands tall among the Nations because it is a just Nation. In the instant cases the United States has not acted in a manner worthy of the great just

Its tactics have been regarded as a type of "scorched earth policy," as the government concedes no ground regarding the applicability of established law or the implications of factual distinctions from one case to another. This court has at times regarded defendant's approach with skepticism or even disdain. Regrettably, that trend continues with defendant's Motion for Reconsideration of liability issues in this case. One judge of this court long ago lamented that "the government persists in ignoring or misrepresenting the law while failing to distinguish the cases factually." Cal. Fed. Bank v. United States, 39 Fed. Cl. 753 (1997). As the instant motion makes clear, reform is slow to come by.

[270] The cost of litigating Trails Act cases is a significant expense for the federal government. Assistant Attorney General Thomas Sansonetti told Congress:

> The defense of the rails-to-trails cases poses special challenges for the Environment Division. Although the total potential monetary exposure from these cases is only about one per cent of the total potential monetary exposure of the entire takings litigation docket presently being handled by the Environment and Natural Resources Division, three of the nine attorneys assigned to our ''Takings Team'' devote the majority of their time to these cases, along with two others who devote a considerable portion of their time as well.

ments. Only the federal government is capable of devising a system in which taxpayers would pay more than $300,000 in attorney fees and costs in a dispute over a $19,000 piece of land.[271]

Apart from the cost that this approach imposes on taxpayers, this strategy also frustrates the citizens' constitutional right to compensation. Congress has condemned the DOJ's use of the statute of limitations as a "gotcha game" to deny deserving citizens their right to compensation. During a Senate hearing, Senator Burr was harshly critical of the DOJ.[272]

See Litigation and Its Effect on the Rails-to-Trails Program, supra note 134, at 39 (prepared statement of Thomas L. Sansonetti, Asst. Att'y General, Environment and Natural Resources Division, U.S. Dept. of Justice).

[271] See Grantwood Vill., 95 F.3d 654 (1996), where the government paid $19,000 for the value of the land and reimbursed the property owner $300,000 in attorney fees and costs. This sum does not include the DOJ's cost litigating this case, which likely equals or exceeds the $300,000 incurred by the landowner.

> Mr. Chairman, my last statement is not a question, but it is a statement. I understand it's appropriate for the Park Service to come here and say that the issue of rails to trails and the clarification that's needed is not a National Parks Service issue. I can appreciate that.
> I hope you would take back to the individuals at the Justice Department that made this determination, that I take very seriously of takings. The DOJ has attempted to prevent the use of class-action procedures as a judicial tool to resolve Trails Act taking claims efficiently.[273] The DOJ argued that filing a class-action lawsuit does not satisfy the statute of limitations, and the "clock" continues to run until each class member individually and separately satisfies the limitation period. Judge Christine Miller of the CFC described the government's position as "draconian" and recognized that the government's theory would effectively eliminate use of class-actions against the federal government.[274] Nonetheless, Judge Miller accepted their argument. The DOJ celebrated this win as one of their "significant litigation accomplishments" in 2009, which was a "victor[y that] will help to limit the bringing of future claims and protect the United States against millions of dollars in liability."[275]

This legal strategy, quite simply, makes no sense. The class-action procedure frequently is the most cost-efficient manner to resolve Trails Act taking claims.[276] And, it is questionable whether the DOJ should be pursuing a litigation strategy intended "to limit the bringing of future claims" by citizens whose land the government has taken. The better course is to pursue the prompt, fair and cost-efficient resolution of these claims.

Judge Miller's decision was appealed to the Federal Circuit, which rejected the government's argument and held class action-tolling does apply to claims against the United States.[277]

In addition to the litigation expense, the delay in resolving Trails Act taking cases imposes substantial interest costs on the federal government. The Fifth Amendment requires the government to pay compensation for the [276] In Carl Junction R-1 School Dist. v. United States (05-3L & 05-4L) (Fed. Cl. 2008) (Judgment and other filings available on PACER), the government paid $155,183 for the land, $43,000 interest, and $423,727 in attorneys' fees. Compare these individual cases—Carl Junction and Grantwood Village—with Miller v. United States, 67 Fed. Cl. 542 (2005), a class-action involving 116 parcels of land brought as a class-action. The government paid almost $7.4 million (including interest) for the land. The individual landowners' claims ranged from $6,000 to more than $1 million. See Joint Proposed Settlement, Miller v. United States, No. 03-24891 (Nov. 15, 2006) (on file with Real Property, Trust & Estate Law Journal). Yet, the government reimbursed landowners only $770,000 in legal fees and expenses. The conclusion is obvious. Resolving such cases using a class action procedure is substantially less expensive to both landowners and, ultimately, the government.

[277] See Bright, 2010 WL 1740825 (Fed. Cir. May 3, 2010).

delay between when the government takes a citizen's land and when it pays compensation. Interest begins to run when the NITU is issued, and because it frequently takes more than five years of litigation to resolve a Trails Act claim, the government's interest obligation can be equal to or more than the value of the land taken.[278]

Costs incurred by resolving Trails Act taking claims through bringing inverse condemnation claims pursuant to the Tucker Act in the CFC are substantial and could be avoided by reforming the Trails Act.[279]

XI. RECOMMENDATIONS TO IMPROVE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE TRAILS ACT

Four reforms would greatly improve the Trails Act and allow it to achieve its objective at less expense to taxpayers, and in a constitutionally fair manner for landowners.

A. Property Owners Should Be Provided Timely Notice of a NITU (or CITU) that Affects Their Property

Currently, landowners receive no actual notice that their lands have been taken in a rail-to-trail conversion.[280] This is wrong. The STB should provide notice to property owners whose land is subject to a NITU within thirty days after issuing a NITU.[281] The name and mailing address of every affected property owner is available in every county tax assessor's or recorder of deeds' office. Moreover, the railroads and federal government may already have in their possession valuation maps and other documents that describe the conveyances or condemnation decrees by which the rail line was originally established and identify each parcel of land across which the rail line is located. The cost of mailing notices to the landowners would be nominal, but the benefit substantial. Fundamental fairness requires that landowners receive timely notice of the NITU, which is the event giving rise to their constitutional claims for compensation.

[278] This delayed resolution is due in part to the DOJ's scorched-earth strategy. However, this delay also is due in part to repeated extensions that the DOJ typically seeks and the traditionally slower resolution of cases in the CFC compared to federal district courts. See "United States Court of Federal Claims Termination Act of 2004." Introduced in the 108th Congress as S.2293 and H.R. 4946. The Act did not pass but referenced a study on the efficiency of the CFC resolving claims.

[279] See 143 CONG. REC. H8950-02 (1997) (statement of Rep. Ryun).

[280] See Part X.A. supra.

[281] Reference to a "NITU" applies equally to a CITU. See supra note 31 and accompanying text.

B. The Trail Use Agreement Should Be Filed With the STB

The Trails Act and the STB's issuance of a NITU creates the right of a railroad to sell an easement across land.[282] Absent the Trails Act and NITU, the railroad would have nothing to sell. The Trail Use Agreement is the event that consummates creation of a recreational trail under the Trails Act and defines the terms of the railroad's interest.[283] The Trail Use Agreement should be a public document that is available to landowners and any other interested parties. There is no rational reason why the Trail Use Agreement should be a secret document, unavailable to the landowners and interested public.

C. More Timely and Cost-Efficient Resolution of Fifth Amendment Takings Claims

It should never take more than two years to resolve a Fifth Amendment takings claim under the Trails Act. In some cases, the DOJ and counsel for the landowners have used alternative dispute resolution and common appraisal methods to determine the value of the land taken quickly and efficiently.[284] However, the DOJ's scorched-earth litigation strategy and the lengthy time to resolve a case in the CFC frustrates a timely and efficient resolution of the property owner's claim.[285] This delay also greatly increases the cost to the taxpayers. The government must pay both the litigation costs and interest. Lengthy litigation contesting every legal issue and every possible argument substantially increases this expense to taxpayers.

D. Independent Review of the Trail Operator's Capacity and Ability to Develop the Abandoned Rail Line As a Recreational Trail of Public Value

The Trails Act is indiscriminate. Even when an abandoned rail line has no legitimate value for trail use it still can be attractive to a trail group because the organization can profit by taking control of the land under the Trails Act and licensing the use of the land to a utility. In a Missouri case, the private trail group received $200,000 from a licensing agreement with an electric company that otherwise would have been paid to the landowners. In other cases, private trail groups do not have the capacity to maintain the land and the land is neglected and left to become a public nuisance.[286] The STB should review the abilities of each potential trail operator to develop responsibly and maintain a recreational trail before a NITU is issued. Trail sponsors should submit a proposed Trail Development Plan to the STB describing the proposed trail-related improvements and the funding needed to accomplish these improvements. This plan should be available for public comment and notice of the plan provided to all affected landowners. Should the trail not be developed as specified in the plan, the STB should have the authority to revoke the NITU. After all, if taxpayers are paying for the property, we should be sure that land is responsibly developed as a public trail consistent with the objective of the Trails Act.

XII. CONCLUSION

We like trails and appreciate the objective of the Trails Act—to provide well-maintained and well-managed public recreational trails over land once used for now-abandoned railroad lines. However, it is wrong to seek to accomplish this worthy public objective in a manner that denies landowners their constitutional right to be paid just compensation for the taking of their property.

The government's efforts to circumvent the Fifth Amendment are, in the majority of cases, not successful, and attempting to do so ends up substantially increasing cost of the Trails Act to taxpayers. Public support for this program is undermined when the STB issues orders which take American citizens' land without notice, the DOJ repeatedly litigating the same meritless arguments, and the DOJ endlessly delaying resolution of landowners' claims. In addition, these tactics wind up costing American taxpayers millions of dollars. Americans support the creation of well-designed, appropriately located public recreational trails. Americans do not, however, like to see the Trails Act administered in a manner that (1) unfairly denies fellow landowners their constitutional right to compensation; (2) greatly and needlessly inflates legal fees and other costs of the program; and (3) allows some special interests to misuse the Trails Act as a pretext to obtain profit at the expense of our fellow citizens.

Over the past twenty-five years, the Trails Act has accomplished some of its intended purpose. Some great recreational trails have been established. But these trails were established at substantially greater expense than necessary, and the constitutional right of American citizens to be compensated for the government taking their lands has been trampled.

For the Trails Act to succeed in accomplishing its objective we must recognize that, in its current form, the Trails Act is deeply flawed. Fortunately, we can fix these flaws. Congress should consider legislation that will amend the Trails Act to fix those flaws. Additionally, both the STB and the DOJ should adopt measures to more fairly and cost-effectively administer the Trails Act, especially because the constitutional right of American citizens to be paid for land the government has taken is involved.

PETITIONER'S REQUESTED CHARGES.

1. The jury are instructed that, as the power of eminent domain is necessary for the public good, it would be unjust to the public that the plaintiff should be required to pay the owner more than a fair indemnity for the loss he sustains by the appropriation of his property for the general good. On the other hand, the owner being compelled to part with his property, whether he desires to sell or not, the law allows him just compenation therefor.

2. The jury are instructed that "just compensation" means the payment of such sum of money as will make the defendant whole, so that, on receipt by the defendant of the compensation and damages awarded, he will not be poorer by reason of his property being taken or damaged.

3. The jury are instructed that, in considering the compensation to be paid to the defendant for the land about to be taken, they are to fix the actual cash market value of the land taken. And they are further instructed that they are not to consider the price at which the property would sell for under special or extra-ordinary circumstances, but its fair market value, if sold in the market under ordinary circumstances for cash, and not on time, and assuming that the owners are willing to sell, and the purchaser is willing to buy.

4. The court instructs the jury that you are not to consider what the land was worth to the defendant, the owner, for speculation, or merely possible uses, nor what she claims it was worth to her, nor what it may be worth to plaintiff for railroad or other purposes, nor what the land would bring at a forced sale. You are not to consider the price the land would sell for under special or extraordinary circumstances, but its fair market value, if offered in the market under ordinary circumstances for cash, a reasonable time being given to make the sale. Market value is the amount the strip would sell for if put upon the open market, and sold in the manner in which property is ordinarily sold for cash in the community where it is situated, with a reasonable time being given to find a purchaser and make the sale.

5. The court instructs the jury that you must take into consideration the purposes for which the property was adapted and determine the market value from what a person would then have paid for the property, in cash, not buying, however, for any particular purpose, but having regard to the market value of the property as it then stood for all purposes.

6. The court tells the jury that they will find for the defendants a fair equivalent for the entire piece of property, which finding should be its market value at present in money, and its market value is that price it would bring when it was offered for sale by one who desires, but is not obliged to sell it, and is bought by one who is under no necessity of buying it; in other words, a fair market value means the fair value between one who wants to purchase and one who wants to sell.

CONDEMNATION.

THE ANSWER OF BONNIE K. TANKERSLEY AND MATTIE V. DAVIES TO THE PETITION OF CONDEMNATION OF THE TAMPA SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY, A CORPORATION CREATED AND EXISTING UNDER THE LAWS OF THE STATE OF FLORIDA, AGAINST THESE DEFENDANTS:

For answer to said petition, these defendants say that said Tampa Southern Railroad Company, petitioner in said cause, should not have or maintain its said cause against these defendants for the reason and because of the fact that said Tampa Southern Railroad Company has not filed in this cause any duly verified petition, sworn to by the petitioner or its president or other executive officer of said Tampa Southern Railroad Company, a corporation, which corporation is as these defendants aver a private corporation entitled only to maintain an action of condemnation upon and when it has filed a petition praying the condemnation of the property sought to be taken, duly verified by the oath of said petitioner, its president or some other executive officer of said corporation.

These defendants further show unto the Court that while said petitioner avers in its petition that it is a corporation duly incorporated under the laws of the State of Florida as a public carrier for the operation of a commercial railroad and is authorized to construct, maintain and operate a railroad from the City of Tampa in the State of Florida to the Town of Sarasota in the County of Sarasota, State of Florida, it seeks in and by said petition to condemn certain land in said petition particularly described, which is not essential for the construction of its line of railroad from said City of Tampa to the City of Sarasota but beyond the destiny and termination of its purposes and authority and its power to extend and proceed with its said road and with condemnation for its construction or for its right-of-way, to-wit:- beyong its terminus in the City of Sarasota, and these defendants so allege and aver that the land in said petition described is no part of the right-of-way of said railroad company from Tampa to Sarasota but lies beyond the terminus of said road in the City of Sarasota.

These defendants further show unto the Court that petitioners right to condemn said property exists only under and by virtue of the Constitution and Laws of the State of Florida granting petitioner the privilege of exercising the right of condemnation to take private property for its use upon payment of such compensation as shall be to the owners of said property allowed and awarded by a jury of twelve men to be empanelled in the County where said property is situated and drawn from the body of said County in which said land is located and upon and after a view of said property by the said jury and not otherwise, all of which can not be provided, allowed and granted by this Honorable Court by reason whereof said Court is without jurisdiction to try said cause.

These defendants further show unto the Court that they are entitled to and desire to be present and heard as to the amount due these defendants as compensation for the damage by them sustained by reason of the appropriation and taking of their said land if the taking thereof be allowed.

JOINT STATUS REPORT

For the remaining plaintiffs, the parties are engaged in informal discovery—commonly referred to as the "claims book" process—to assess what property interest the plaintiffs owned on the date of the alleged taking. Pursuant to the Court's August 21, 2020 scheduling order, ECF No. 37, Defendant provided its initial claim book objections to Plaintiffs on September 18, 2020. Pursuant to the Court's October 14, 2020 scheduling order, ECF No. 39, Plaintiffs provided their reply and new title documents to Defendant on October 30, 2020. In their reply, Plaintiffs stated they are still researching some of Defendant's objections and will provide a further response at a later date. Plaintiffs expect to be able to provide that further response by November 13, 2020. Defendant is reviewing Plaintiffs' reply and new title documents, and will need time following the receipt of Plaintiffs' further response before replying to Plaintiffs.

To allow adequate time to complete the claims book process, the parties seek additional time to continue the claims book process and complete the tasks described above. The parties propose filing a joint status report with the Court on or before December 11, 2020, that apprises the Court of developments and proposes a schedule for further proceedings.

Respectfully submitted this 6th day of November 2020.

In December 1913, Oscar and Alice Burton joined real estate developer and future Sarasota mayor Arthur B. Edwards (1914-1915 and 1920-1921) and his wife Fannie in selling the land south of Hudson Bayou to the Sarasota Improvement Company. In 1915, the area, recorded as Avondale Heights Subdivision, was advertised as "a place for families of average means." To promote the development, a modern bungalow valued at $1500 was to be given away. The same advertisement offered 75 choice lots for $250, with an easy payment plan of $50 down and monthly payments of $10. Even with the special promotions, Avondale Heights developed slowly.
In 1923, Irving Bacheller, Edward Brewer, and Fred Woolley purchased the undeveloped lots. In 1924, the Bacheller-Brewer Corporation re-platted the subdivision as Avondale, enlarged the lots, and widened the streets in an effort to make the area more upscale and exclusive. A painting by noted Chicago artist Gibson Catlett promoted Avondale as a place to "Come and Enjoy the Golden Sunset of Sarasota." During 1925, Avondale experienced impressive land sales and gained recognition as a premier subdivision in the Sarasota area.

The real estate whirlwind known as the Florida Land Boom and the new management contributed to the improved sales. Most of the lots were sold by the end of 1925 with the exception of the larger ones along Hudson Bayou. In an effort to attract wealthy residents, Bacheller-Brewer decided to market the remaining estate-size lots with a model home. Thomas Reed Martin, well known Sarasota and Chicago architect, designed a Mediterranean Revival style model home located at 1903 Lincoln Drive. The house, constructed in 1926, fell victim to the real estate bust and stood vacant until its sale in 1929 to Homer Galpin, an attorney and former Illinois state senator from Chicago. Added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1992, the house features a two-story central core flanked by one-story wings and represents the high-quality home construction the Bacheller-Brewer Corporation promoted in Avondale.
Today the neighborhood boasts of some Colonial Revival style homes dating from the 1930s, but most of the homes appear to be from the 1950s and 1960s.

DECLARATION OF ROBERT R. CUNNINGHAM

I, Robert R. Cunningham, being of lawful age, state the following based upon my personal knowledge:

1. Stantec is a national firm specializing in land-planning, engineering, landscape architecture, surveying, and environmental sciences. Stantec previously provided expert mapping and land-planning services for the plaintiff-landowners in the Rogers v. United States group of litigation in this Court involving the Legacy Trail in Sarasota. See McCann Holdings, Ltd. v. United States, 111 Fed. Cl. 608, 632 (2013) (describing how WilsonMiller (now Stantec) provided information to plaintiffs' expert appraiser, Chad Durrance); Childers v. United States, 116 Fed. Cl. 486, 496 n.6 (2014) ("The Court admitted Ms. Allred [a project manager for WilsonMiller Stantec] as an expert in long-range planning and zoning in Sarasota County."). See also Childers, 116 Fed. Cl. at 562 ("To quantify the damages associated with diminished access, Mr. Durrance consulted with WilsonMiller Stantec, a consulting firm that provides services in planning, engineering, architecture, surveying, and project management, and undertook an analysis of two developments that differed with respect to shape, access, and abutting corridors, to determine the effect diminished access has on property values.").

2. I am a Senior Project Manager with Stantec's office in Sarasota, Florida. My professional experience includes performing topographic, boundary, wetland location, and inventory and control surveys on dozens of properties within Sarasota and Manatee Counties, Florida. I am proficient in AutoCAD, Civil3D, Legal Aid, and other software programs used in land surveying and land planning. I am an expert in the interpretation of ownership lines for GIS purposes. I have attached my resume as Exhibit A-1 to this declaration.

3. Jennie W. Brannon, PSM retired and working under my supervision as a Senior Technician, and Corey Berner, as a GIS specialist, have mapped the properties using the plaintiff-landowners' ownership and land title records. I have attached Jennie and Corey's resume as Exhibit A-2 and Exhibit A-3. Jennie and Corey mapped the properties relating to the claims of Gary L. Cathey and Victoria L. Goodrich (Parcel ID No. 2031-02-1370), Jeffrey Doyle, as Trustee of the Wallace David Brunton Testamentary Trust, and Mabel Brunton (Parcel ID No. 2031-02-1366), Thomas M. and Joyce R. Fay (Parcel ID No. 2031-02-1337), William A. and Jill Booth (Parcel ID No. 2034-01-0042), Thomas and Michelle Dodson (Parcel ID No. 0052-04-0026), Anthony and Karen Puccio (Parcel ID No. 0052-04-0027), Keith E. Rollins and Lisa J. Paxson-Rollins (Parcel ID No. 0052-04-0033), Brian T. Sanborn (Parcel ID No. 0052-04-0032), The Oaks at Woodland Park Homeowners Association, Inc. (Parcel ID No. 0052-03-0062), Kimberly Dawn Hewitt, as Trustee for the Kimberly Dawn Hewitt Rev. Trust (Parcel ID No. 0052-05-0012), Mark T. and Angela D. Flaherty (Parcel ID No. 0061-07-0097), Robert E. and Michelle S. Messick (Parcel ID No. 0061-07-0098), and Timothy G. and Alisa J. Herring (Parcel ID No. 0061-07-0095). Jennie and Corey mapped these parcels using publicly-available aerial photographs and Sarasota County GIS property information obtained from the Sarasota County Property Appraiser's Office. These aerial photographs fairly and accurately represent the above-listed properties as they are located in relation to the Sarasota Legacy Trail right-of-way and the adjacent easements described in the attached exhibits.

4. The GIS parcel data for the maps Stantec created for these claims were delivered from Sarasota County as a shapefile to Stantec in the coordinate system for the Florida West Zone, North American Datum of 83/2011 and contained fields for parcel number, address, owner name, land use, and property value, among others. Using the parcel numbers, these parcels were selected from the data and separated into a new layer. Next, Corey Berner added new fields that contain an assigned Map ID number, original conveyance, and boundaries of relevant corridors that abut these parcels, including the Legacy Trail right-of-way and other easements running across the plaintiffs' properties, including, for example, Sarasota County drainage easements. The visual depiction of the conveyances was created in AutoCAD, a computer-based design program, and exported into GIS. Although the file format changes between AutoCAD and GIS, the conversion results in no loss of data. This information was then confirmed by consulting the Interstate Commerce Commission (the predecessor-government agency to the Surface Transportation Board) (ICC) valuation maps and the subdivision plats. If any questions arose about ownership or area calculations, the plaintiff's deed was consulted to ensure the boundaries were measured accurately. The valuation maps produced by the ICC contain both a survey of the railroad corridor corresponding to the Sarasota Legacy Trail and a schedule listing the specific instrument (if one existed and was discoverable) by which the railroad gained its interest in the corridor when the railroad was built. ICC valuation maps are maps that were created by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the early decades of the 1900s.

5. Corey digitally overlayed the parcels listed in paragraph 2 (using their property data as described in paragraph 2) on top of the valuation maps of the railroad corridor in order to determine the specific instrument that the federal government stated applied to each portion of the railroad corridor by which the railroad obtained its interest in the property then-owned by each of the plaintiffs' predecessors-in-title. According to the valuation maps and valuation schedules, the railroad obtained its interest in each plaintiff's property as listed below:

6. With regard to the three plaintiffs' properties in the Oakwood Manor subdivision, Sarasota County property records reflect that Sarasota County holds a fifty-two-foot-wide drainage easement running over and across the parcels owned by Gary L. Cathey and Victoria L. Goodrich (Parcel ID No. 2031-02-1370), Jeffrey Doyle, as Trustee of the Wallace David Brunton Testamentary Trust, and Mabel Brunton (Parcel ID No. 2031-02-1366), and Thomas M. and Joyce R. Fay (Parcel ID No. 2031-02-1337). The recorded documents relating to this parcel are recorded at OR (Official Record) Book 315, Pages 378 and 379 (including a court order in In the Matter of Petition for Formation of Sarasota Fruitville Drainage District, dated October 2, 1923), and Chancery Book 3, Pages 206 and 240 (Paragraph 470). Also the description in the original Oakwood Manor Estates deed in Official Records Book 2076, Page 655, mentions these drainage easements. We have attached a true and correct copy of these documents as Exhibit B. I have mapped these plaintiffs' properties, the Legacy Trail right-of-way, and the Sarasota County drainage easement on an aerial photograph attached as Exhibit C. As depicted on Exhibit C, the Sarasota County drainage easement runs adjacent to and abuts the plaintiffs' properties and the Legacy Trail right-of-way.

7. With regard to Plaintiffs William and Jill Booth's property in the Hagar Park subdivision, Sarasota County property records reflect that Sarasota County holds a fifty-two-foot-wide drainage easement running adjacent to and abutting the parcel owned by William A. and Jill Booth (Parcel ID No. 2034-01-0042). The recorded documents relating to this parcel are the Hager Park 2 plat, recorded at Plat Book 10, Page 68, the Sarasota-Fruitville Drainage District indenture, recorded at OR (Official Record) Book 315, Pages 378 and 379, and the court order recorded at Chancery Book 3, Page 206 and Pages 241 (Paragraph 491) and 242 (Paragraphs 492-94). Typically, because of the general nature of the Chancery Order Book, developers would be allowed to adjust the canal locations for their lot designs, so we relied on the Plat for this location. I have attached a true and correct copy of these documents as Exhibit D. The plat describes the Sarasota County drainage easement that runs along the northern boundary of the subdivision as the "SARASOTA – FRUITVILLE DRAINAGE DISTRICT CANAL" and describes an additional triangle-shaped drainage easement adjacent to the Booths' property (lying between the drainage canal easement and the railroad right-of-way) as "DRAINAGE EASE'T." Corey has mapped these plaintiffs' properties, the Legacy Trail right-of-way, and the Sarasota drainage easements on an aerial photograph attached as Exhibit E.[1] As depicted on Exhibit E, the Sarasota County drainage canal easement runs adjacent to and abutting the Booth property on the southern side of the Legacy Trail right-of-way. Also as depicted on Exhibit E, the triangle-shaped drainage easement lies adjacent to the northern part of the Booth property abutting the Legacy Trail right-of-way.

8. With regard to the six plaintiffs' properties in the Oaks at Woodland Park subdivision:

a. Sarasota County property records reflect that, on March 26, 1996, Woodlands Park Development, Ltd., and Atlantic Assets, Inc., conveyed an easement to Florida Power & Light Company recorded at OR (Official Record) Book 2865, Pages 2458-66, for construction, operation, maintenance of electric equipment, adjacent to the Legacy Trail right-of-way. Then, on July 29, 1996, Atlantic Assets, Inc., quitclaimed its interest in the property described in a quit claim deed recorded at OR Book 2894, Pages 2041-43, to Woodlands Park Development, Ltd. Then, on September 28, 1998, Woodlands

[1] Chancery Book 3, Page 241, Paragraph 491, describes Sarasota County's drainage easement as "A strip of land 52 feet wide in the NE¼ of the NE¼ of Section 29, the center line of which is described as follows: Beginning at a point 160 feet South of the NE corner of said tract, thence South 74° West 1400 feet to a point 600 feet South of said tract. Also a strip of land 52 feet wide off the West side of the NE¼ of the NE¼ of Section 29."

Chancery Book 3, Page 242, Paragraph 492, describes Sarasota County's drainage easement as "A strip of land in the SE¼ of the NE¼ of Section 29, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the NW corner of said tract, thence South 1140 feet, thence East 54 feet thence North 1140 feet thence West 52 feet to the point of beginning."

Chancery Book 3, Page 242, Paragraph 493, describes Sarasota County's drainage easement as "A strip of land 52 feet wide in the SW¼ of the NE¼ of Section 29, the center line of which is described as follows: Beginning at a point 200 feet North of the SE corner of said tract, thence West 1320 feet to a point 200 feet North of the SW corner of said tract."

Chancery Book 3, Page 242, Paragraph 494, describes Sarasota County's drainage easement as "A strip of land 52 feet wide in the S½ of the SE¼ of the NW¼ of Section 29, the center line of which is described as follows: Beginning at a point 200 feet North of the SE corner of said tract, thence West 1150 feet to a point 100 feet North of the South line of said tract."

Park Development, Ltd., quitclaimed its interest in the property described in Official Record Instrument No. 1998130381 to Plaintiff Oaks at Woodland Park Homeowners Association, Inc. The property described in the Quit Claim Deed between Woodlands Park Development, Ltd., and the Oaks at Woodland Park Homeowners Association, Inc., includes "Tract A" of the property described in the Oaks at Woodland Park Phase I plat, executed on June 8, 1996, recorded in Plat Book 38, Page 11D. I have attached a true and correct copy of these documents as Exhibit F.

b. The Oaks at Woodland Park Phase I plat depicts Tract A as abutting the Seminole Gulf Railway right-of-way (now the Legacy Trail right-of-way). The plat also depicts Plaintiff Kimberly Dawn Hewitt's property as lot 39 (the Hewitt property is also depicted as lot 39 on Page 11C of Plat Book 38, with the Dodson property depicted as lot 41 and the Puccio property depicted as lot 42 on Page 11C of Plat Book 38). The Oaks at Woodland Park Phase I plat also depicts the "utility and access easement" corresponding to the easement granted to Florida Power & Light Company as abutting the Seminole Gulf railroad right-of-way and running over and across Tract A (Oaks at Woodland Park Homeowner's Assoc. property) and lot 39 (Hewitt property). We have mapped this property, including Tract A, and the parcels owned by Thomas and Michelle Dodson (Parcel ID No. 0052-04-0026), Anthony and Karen Puccio (Parcel ID No. 0052-04-0027), Keith E. Rollins and Lisa J. Paxson-Rollins (Parcel ID No. 0052-04-0033), Brian T. Sanborn (Parcel ID No. 0052-04-0032), The Oaks at Woodland Park Homeowners Association, Inc. (Parcel ID No. 0052-03-0062), and Kimberly Dawn Hewitt, as Trustee for the Kimberly Dawn Hewitt Rev. Trust (Parcel ID No. 0052-05-0012) on an aerial photograph attached as Exhibit G. Corey has also overlain the relevant plat recorded at Plat Book 38, Page 11D, on this aerial photograph attached as Exhibit G. For reference, he has also marked the beginning and ending points described in the Quit Claim Deed (recorded at OR Book 2894, Pages 2041-2043) between Atlantic Assets, Inc., and Woodland Park Development, Ltd., which define the northwest and southwest boundaries of the Oaks at Woodland Park Phase I plat, on Exhibit G.

9. With regard to the three plaintiff-landowners' properties in the Old Forest Lakes subdivision, Sarasota County property records reflect that Old Forest Lakes Association, Inc., holds a fifteen-foot-wide drainage easement abutting the parcels owned by Mark T. and Angela D. Flaherty (Parcel ID No. 0061-07-0097), Robert E. and Michelle S. Messick (Parcel ID No. 0061-07-0098), and Timothy G. and Alisa J. Herring (Parcel ID No. 0061-07-0095). The recorded documents relating to this these parcels are the subdivision plat, recorded at Plat Book A, Page 50, and the deed recorded at OR (Official Record) Book 1145, Pages 443 and 445. I have attached a true and correct copy of these documents as Exhibit H. We have mapped these plaintiffs' properties, the Legacy Trail right-of-way, and the Old Forest Lakes Association, Inc., drainage easement on an aerial photograph attached as Exhibit I. We have also overlain the relevant plat recorded at Plat Book A, Page 50, on this aerial photograph attached as Exhibit I. As depicted on Exhibit I, the five-foot-wide drainage easement runs adjacent to and abuts the plaintiffs' properties and the Legacy Trail right-of-way.

I make the foregoing statements in this declaration based upon my personal knowledge, experience, and belief. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.
